American Singers Almost Pariahs in Their Own Country, Says John McCormack

"Native Vocalists Superior to Foreign Artists"

Famous Irish Tenor, Who Has Just Taken Out His First American Citizenship Papers, Asks Why We, the Greatest of All Organizing Nations, Should Have an Italian in Charge of Our Principal Operatic Company.

By E. H. Smith,

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.

IT was still somewhat earlier than the rising time of singers. The tepid light of a gray winter morning came through large windows into the great Irish balladist's roomy studio and timidly illumined it so that the corners were in that fascinating state of half-light and the colors in quite clean, bright Arabic rugs looked aged and dusty.

JOHN McCORMACK.

John McCormack himself looked a little older than I had fancied, who had made his acquaintance previously only by the medium of the lithograph and a long-range concert hall view. The man I saw was a bit tired and showed strain. The merest shiver of frost was on his black hair. But when he smiled or laughed, which he did often, all the expected youth came out through his mouth and eyes. He was then as young as anyone could have wished—and as spontaneous and direct.

If you are one of the few who have not seen him, it may be interesting to know that John McCormack is a big man, fully and squarely set up to the measure of his wide shoulders and deep chest. A little too much of the typical singer rotundity has attached itself to the original architectural scheme. He loves to live, evidently. He is impatient of poses and restraints, personal or intellectual. No doubt he is as contemptuous of dietics as of critical pedantry.

But we had met to talk. And to talk about John McCormack.

"Your friends say, I am told, that you, who sing so much popular music to your audiences, like the severer things yourself; that when you sing for your own amusement or that of your intimates, you invariably choose the more recondite compositions."

"Yes, I believe in that," the singer replied. "My own personal preferences do not matter. What I sing for myself as a change, as a relief, is my own concern, you see. But I don't think the public should be forced to listen to what it does not want. I don't believe the public should or can be educated in that way.

"Who Should Be the Public's Schoolmaster in Music," He Asks

"Besides, even if we agree that the public needs education and should be taught to like better music, who is to appoint the schoolmaster? There are all sorts of tastes in music, all sorts of disagreements about what is good and bad. I don't know who is fit to appoint the masters or to tell them what to teach."

"Still, a singer must feel a prejudice against meretricious stuff."

"Sure, he does," said the singer with spirit, "but the thing is how is he going to correct it? You know, there's a mighty false idea abroad, and it's mainly due to the high-brow musicians and critics. They have been aloof, too snobbish. The result is that when the ordinary person, who instinctively loves music, sees a name like Brahms or Schubert or Schumann on the list, he thinks, 'Good Lord, this is going to be tiresome,' and it's mighty hard then to convince him that he isn't bored.

"You know, one of the main reasons for this is that he probably has heard the works of these men in a language he is not acquainted with. He doesn't know the music well enough so that this doesn't count; comparatively few people do.

"Now, I have a way of reconciling this antipathy in the public. I try to choose songs that have the most distinct general appeal and I sing them in a language the public understands—in English. The people see that the story is simple and lovely. Their sentimental and emotional sides are touched. The story helps them to realize and appreciate the music. They are not bored by classical composers when they comprehend them."

"And that," I remarked, "is surely an effective way of getting ordinary people interested in better things."

"It is the only effective way," said Mr. McCormack. "If that can be called educating the public, I suppose I want some credit for it." He laughed in high amusement. Then he was serious.

Appreciating Music Merely a Matter of Being Accustomed to It

"When you think about it a little bit," he went on, "educating people is nothing more than getting them accustomed to something. You take the most simple Irish peasant and play him a Bach fugue; he'll wonder what he's hit. He wouldn't understand, but he'd feel he'd struck something, all right. On the other hand, you take a man used to Bach fugues and try one of these strange old Irish airs on him. That man would wonder what he'd hit. And that's just the point—you must get people used to new things or strange things. Then they understand and appreciate them. That is educating people, from my point of view."

> "THE fact is that the American singer is almost a pariah in his own country. Look at the many fine names among our singers. Every one with discrimination knows that most of them are superior to the foreigners who have their rightful places. Yet they are out in the cold. The real reason is that our opera is in the hands of foreigners. Why should we have an Italian at the head of the Metropolitan? He is no doubt an able man, but is he more able than our own? The fact that a man can run La Scala does not indicate that he can do more for us than we can for ourselves. Here we are, the greatest organizers in business, putting our most important musical institution into the hands of foreigners. It is pure tradition and all wrong. It is what keeps up the humbug of foreign singers and denies their rightful places to our own. Some day there will be a change, and it will be a blessed day."—JOHN McCORMACK.

"You must find little musical sympathy with such heresy?"

"True; but what I'm most put out by is the people who are constantly asking me in the most superior way, 'How do you ever appeal to the common people?' I say, 'There are no common people. Because a man doesn't understand a Bach fugue does not mean that he has no sense of beauty.' It merely means he isn't accustomed to severer musical methods and has to be made familiar before he can understand them.

"There are exceptions. I remember the case of the British novelist, Anthony Hope. They say he doesn't understand music at all and can't listen to it. That is different. This is a peculiarity."

"Tolstoy had strange notions on music, too," I said, "and it is told of Maeterlinck that music bores him to distraction. He can see nothing in it except discordant noises."

"Was that before or after he had heard 'Pelleas'?" asked the singer, laughing gleefully.

"You do not care for De Bussy, eh?"

"Not a bit. I can't get interested, that's all."

"But we were talking about the public taste. You ought to know better than anyone what your audiences like best of all."

Sentimental Songs With Direct Appeal Will Always Be Popular

"A sentimental song with a very simple, direct appeal—that's what the public adores. We all do, as a matter of fact. We listen and say, 'What drivel!' but underneath we are moved; we like them.

"When I speak of a sentimental song, I don't mean trash. I don't mean 'Down on the Mississippi' or Downsomewhereelse, or In dear old Whatdoyoucallit. I do mean the Foster songs and things like them, though. 'Old Folks at Home' is still a beautiful thing and will remain beautiful. The moderns have not been able to drive such out and I doubt if they ever will. But I don't object to the moderns. I said I don't like De Bussy. Neither do I. I think he is insincere. But, on the other side, I'm very fond of Ravel. I find sincerity in him all the way through."

"And Strauss?"

"Decidedly. Strauss is the greatest genius that ever lived, orchestrally speaking. There was never a man with such command of orchestration. I think he is playing with the public every once in a while. Also I think that when he runs out of true inspiration he falls back on his great technique. But he is the wonder of the age."

"And now," said I, "that we have got upon your personal tastes, tell me what is the greatest song that has ever been written?"

"You know," said the most eminent of our song interpreters, "I have thought a lot about it. Every now and then I sit down and try to make up my mind. I have asked lots of people, singers, critics, musicians, appreciators. Lately I've come to a conclusion. I think Schubert's 'Allmacht' is the greatest of all songs." (The song is generally called "Omnipotence," a literal translation.)

Schubert Greatest Natural Musician; but He Likes Verdi Best of All

"Why?"

"Oh, there are many reasons. The chief, I suppose is, that I just like it and think so. It would be great fun to find out what others think.

"One other reason I like it so well, perhaps, is because I like Schubert so well. I think he was the greatest natural musician that ever lived. You may remember, Bernard Shaw was once asked who was the greatest musician who ever lived. 'Beethoven, said he, 'but the only musician was Mozart.' Well, Mozart is the musician's musician. In the same sense Schubert is the people's musician."

"To go on with the examination," said I, "who is your favorite opera man, what your opera?"

"Verdi," said the singer promptly. "I like everything he ever did, from the worst to the best. He never shed his artistic skin, but he always changed it. His things charm me—'Aida,' 'Othello,' 'Falstaff!' But my favorite opera wasn't his. A Frenchman wrote it. I think there is nothing like 'Carmen.' Lord knows what that Bizet wouldn't have done with time. One of my great regrets is that I never heard Calve in his opera."

"That," said the singer with enthusiasm, "I think that is the greatest educator in the whole world. I've learned more from it myself than I can ever begin to tell you. What a chance the young singers have, what a chance to learn what to do as well as what not to do. I tell you it is a mighty influential thing, that music box.

Favors Free Distribution of Best Available Graphophone Records

"I've had a great scheme in mind for that old box," he continued. "Suppose we could get some of the very wealthy patrons of higher music interested, people like Otto Kahn, to whom the raising of a million or two is no great obstacle. They would then, in my scheme, get together the leading artists and have them make a great many records of the fine music of our world. These records would be distributed free where they would do the most good. Poor people would have them in their homes; people otherwise indifferent would take them and play them and become used to them and thus achieve some education in true music. Wouldn't it be a wonderful thing? Think of the educational value of such propaganda?"

For the first time McCormack was truly alive with animation. "I think," he said enthusiastically, "if that were done all first rate artists would give their services free, so that the talent would cost nothing. I know I would gladly make a lot of records for such a purpose and not accept a cent."

"And now," said I, "how do you feel about critics and criticism?"

The singer laughed. "As for the critics," he said, "they are all my friends, even if they pay not much attention to me. I love them all and admire one every now and then. The critics have the general inclination to say: 'You cannot be popular and be artistic; you cannot be artistic and be successful.' They apply this attitude indiscriminately, I think, even if I leave John McCormack out of the reckoning. Take even such a man as Kreisler. Before he had made his enormous success, no one questioned his great virtuosity. But now his critics look at each other in wonderment and ask, 'What is it he has lost? He must have lost something. Is he not popular?' Critics must get over this formalism. Being a critic does not entitle a man to utterly discard original thought or observation."

America Neglects Her Own Singers, Who Are Almost Pariahs at Home

"And are you inclined to talk of American singers?"

"Indeed I am. Especially since I've set out to be an American myself. You know, I took out my first papers Jan. 16 or 17. But our singers! When I say what I do, please remember that I have no operatic aspirations. I do not want an opera career at all; could not accept it if it were offered, so that I speak with complete impersonality.

"The fact is that the American singer is nowhere. He is almost a pariah in his own country. Look at the many fine names among our singers. Everyone with discrimination knows that most of them are superior to the foreigners who have their rightful places. Yet they are out in the cold. The real reason is that our opera is in the hands of foreigners. Why should we have an Italian at the head of the Metropolitan? He is no doubt an able man, but is he more able than our own? The fact that a man can run La

Fighting in the Air on the Western Battle Front Described by Member of the British Flying Corps

Intimate First-Hand Stories by a Participant of the Various Phases of Aeroplane Combat and the Hazards Faced Constantly by the Young Daredevils Who Glory in a Chance to Become the Aerial Eyes of the Army.

His First Battle, a Struggle Between Fifty English Machines and as Many Germans, Followed a Bombing Expedition Over the German Trenches—Prepared Way for Infantry Charge.

Members of the Flying Corps, He Says, Perform Enough Deeds of Valor Daily to Merit the Distinguished Service Medal, but Because of Its Character, Few Ever Hear of Them.

(EDITORIAL NOTE.—The author of this article and others that are to follow it in a series describing the various phases of air fighting on the Western battle front in France and Belgium, became a Lieutenant in the Imperial British Flying Corps, Nov. 23, 1915, receiving his commission direct from civilian life from the Duke of Connaught, uncle of the King of England, and at the time Governor-General of Canada. Lieutenant Faulkner is a native of Canada, his home city being Toronto. For over a year he saw active service in England, France and Belgium, and then, following a crash of his machine to the ground in a flight, he was invalided home. He expects shortly to return to his post in the Imperial British Flying Corps. He writes from intimate first-hand knowledge of aeronautic conditions on the Western battle front, and his articles are vivid, yet accurate, pictures of what an army aviator has to undergo daily, all the while in the face of death in more than one guise.)

Of the British Royal Flying Corps.

ARTICLE NO. 1.

THE tinkling of the messroom piano, which, because of exposure to dampness and almost incessant use, was sadly out of tune, was the last thing I heard as I rolled in a blanket and went to sleep that first night in France. It was five miles in rear of the lines, in one of the "Armstrong" huts, "made in America," in which the men of the First Canadian Division of the Royal Flying Corps are housed.

The next thing I knew someone was shaking me roughly by the shoulder, and above the tinkling of the baby grand there came the distant boom of big guns and the closer roar of exploding shells. Our boys had not yet finished the party they were giving in the mess hall, and a certain German General facing our sector was just starting a different kind of a party, which I afterwards learned he invariably did at precisely 2 o'clock every morning.

It has been said that the Germans are a phlegmatic people. This chap had a sense of humor—a grim one, perhaps, or maybe he was troubled with insomnia and couldn't sleep after that hour anyway.

It was my observer who had wakened me. We were ordered to the aerodrome, he said, and it looked as though my first fight was to come before I had had a single night's sleep in France. If there is any time when a soldier might be excused for not being keen for a fight, I think it would be at 2 a. m. I shivered in the cold night air and wondered, as I strode along, how I was going to make out—not about whether I would come out with a whole skin, but how I would accomplish my mission, whatever it might be. I didn't want to fail the first time I tried.

Aerial Eye That Never Sleeps

I couldn't help thinking of the peaceful England I had left only a few hours before, where I had been flying over the country made famous by Shakspeare and Tennyson, and where none would have guessed that war with all its horrors was stalking abroad, just across a narrow channel, for, outside the big cities, England shows no signs of war times.

One of the British night patrols was out—the eye of the service never closes—and as we walked toward the aerodrome I could see the flashes as shrapnel exploded near him and as his machine gun occasionally spat. He and some of his comrades were paying a friendly visit to the Boches in appreciation of the General's 2 a. m. soiree.

Suddenly there was a flare of light directly above our aerodrome. I was startled. I'm not ashamed to admit it, but a second later I knew that it was one of our scouts, returned and signaling for a landing.

In response to his signal, lights showed on the ground and rockets were sent up. Just as we arrived at the field his little B-E 2-C plane glided to earth. The wings were slashed in several places, mute witnesses of the effectiveness of German fire even at night.

The pilot staggered from his seat. His face was seared with a bullet mark and his leather coat was torn in several places, from one of which blood had oozed and congealed. He wasn't badly hurt, and at any rate he was back.

The Business of Preparation

The hospital company was caring for the wounded pilot and my observer and I tested my plane, which mechanicians had rolled out of the aerodrome. For an hour or so we shivered in the cold and then ammunition was distributed. We were going on a bombing expedition over the German trenches.

How did I feel? I didn't feel at all, not in those first minutes when we were busy in preparation. It didn't seem real yet. That came later.

> IT was grim work flying back to quarters after that first fight, the wind whistling through the torn planes of my machine and my partner leaning against the empty bomb rack—silent. Fifty of us had flown away that morning. Not all of us glided back to earth on that wide table land. They lifted my partner out of the machine and, while I stood there, half dazed, they carried his body away—poor Jack Simpson, he did not fly again. Ambulances were darting here and there. As I walked towards the aerodrome the machine which had been the other side of me glided to earth, but neither the pilot nor his observer got out. The observer was shot through the head and had been dead half an hour. The pilot was hit in a dozen places, but he made a perfect landing—then keeled over, dead. This borders on the miraculous, but it is not infrequent for a machine to come down with both occupants dead, for all of the machines are equipped with stabilizers.

There were 50 of our machines stretched in a line across the flat table lands. Here and there we pilots gathered in little groups, receiving our last instructions and studying maps and photographs which had been made by the reconnaisance service at the expense of many a splendid machine and many a brave fellow.

At last a bugle sounded. We scrambled into our machines and all along the line engines began to throb and sputter. On one side of me was a 300-horspower Rolls Royce with a mighty voice—think of it, the power of 300 horses hurling that fragile craft through the air with 300 times 300 death power explosives ready to turn loose over hum[illegible].

On the other side of me was a $10,000 Larone rotary engine, like my own, vying with the others in making a noise. It seemed as though the Germans, in their far-away trenches, must hear us starting. Then there were a swarm of little fellows humming and spitting, the "Vipers" or "Maggots," as they are known in the service.

The squadron commander, with his observer, took his place and soared into the air. The other machines, 49 of us, followed him into the heavens and swooped and maneuvered like a flock of swallows until the formation was right. A crack from the commander's pistol and we were off, like bees following the queen bee, straight for the enemy's lines.

Enemy Plane for Each of Ours

Dimly there rose to us the cheering of the mechanics and riggers from the aerodrome, but we rose so swiftly that soon it was lost. Always we climbed higher—six, eight, ten thousand feet. Against the pinkish gray sky the Boches may have seen us then, and to them we were not bees nor swallows nor eagles. We were vultures. It makes a difference—the viewpoint.

Then for the first time it came to me—the business we were engaged in. I had been trained for war, but now I was in war. My business was to kill.

At first I was glad that my observer would throw the bombs, not I, but still, if he was to be effective I must handle the plane skillfully. We were over the British trenches. I could make out specks that were men, beneath. The better we did our work, the fewer of those boys down there would be tagged and ticketed and laid in wholesale graves. It made our work seem human again.

They were behind us now and we were flying over No-Man's-Land, desolate and waste, a huge earth-face scarred with plague marks.

A stone's throw ahead were the German trenches. A quick look at the map and photographs told us that—those maps and photographs the price of which had been human life. A score of lives for a flimsy paper map perhaps.

Tiny specks began to rise far in the rear of the German lines. They were planes coming to meet us. Later I learned that through some strange coincidence there were 50 of them. One for each of ours. We might have fought them, but that was not our mission.

One cannot always follow one's inclination in war. We had been sent out to bomb the German front line and support trenches, to smash their morale, shatter their clan before our boys went yelling and stumbling and dying across the pock-marked earth to bayonet them. The more of the fear of death or God or Britain that we could put into their hearts the fewer of our boys they would get, and so we were to try to butcher them and not stay to fight the German planes. Our ammunition was for the enemy below us.

Hell Let Loose in the Heavens

My observer was watching the commander's plane. He saw the signal. He let go his first rack of bombs. Forty-nine other observers did the same almost simultaneously.

Hell was let loose in the heavens and fell crashing down on the men beneath who could find no shelter.

We flew lower. Another rack of bombs was turned loose from our machine. I don't know for sure, but it seemed to me that I could see our bombs strike and scatter earth and men and parts of men all over the ground. I was getting sick.

Then I remembered the two Canadians whom the Boches had crucified. I am a Canadian. My control was as steady as the Rock of Gibraltar.

Lower and lower we flew. I found myself talking to my machine as one does to a horse one urges to greater and greater effort. We could use machine guns now. The beautiful weapons were spewing death and destruction into the pits below. Their wonderful singing drowned the whirr of the powerful engines.

Directly ahead of me a column of flame shot up from one of our machines and I caught a momentary glance of the pilot's face, ashen gray—gray as the sky of dawn under which we were fighting. His petrel tank had been hit and exploded.

Another spurt of flame and his machine swooped more swiftly and spiraled toward the earth. I sobbed a prayer that it would right itself, for Tom Billings was a friend of mine. It did not right itself. Down it went, pitching and zig-zagging crazily, and then it dropped—dropped like a plummet out of my sight and I was praying that Tom was dead—dead when he struck the earth.

German Squadron Was Upon Us.

The German squadron was upon us, flying in mass formation and scattering fire and lead as they came. I have read descriptions of cavalry charges, but I do not know whether the man lives who can describe a charge of aeroplanes.

We had been pumping death into the line below and their anti-aircraft guns had been barking at us, for the most part futilely, but now we had a real enemy, an enemy as strong as we. And we must ignore him as long as we could and continue to scatter bombs over the trenches, for we must never forget our mission—to smash the morale of the men in the trenches and to get back behind our lines with as many machines as possible when our ammunition was gone.

Just over to the right of me one of their fliers dropped out of sight. My partner had let go another rack of bombs. Suddenly an explosion roared directly underneath me.

I tightened my grip on the levers as the machine gave a dangerous lurch upward. I do not know whether the explosion had sent it there or whether I involuntarily threw it skyward. In either case it was a narrow squeak. Death itself could not have loosened my grip on those levers now. Next time I must be more careful.

I didn't worry about flying position any longer. Our formation had ceased to exist. All we cared about was to dodge the German planes and keep on pouring explosives and machine-gun fire into those trenches, while their air patrol tried to knock us out of the sky, and the high angle guns nagged at us.

One drum of our machine gun ammunition was already spent. My partner whirled around on his little stool, a sort of piano stool—it always made me think of that crazy, tinkling, piano back in the mess hall—and grabbed for another drum and slammed it into the machine gun to send a parting message to the Boches.

Suddenly he lurched forward. He was hit.

Not a word from him—not even a sigh. I took a quick look, but above all, I must save the machine. A thin stream of blood trickled from his hair down his face.

I headed my machine westward. Just then came the commander's signal to retire. Along we raced like the wind, the German planes spitting lead at us from behind and those of our machines with observers left alive cracking back at them with what ammunition remained unspent.

As we whirred over the British trenches now, the Scots were clambering out of them and dashing over the bullet-swept plain to fight with steel with the Boches, who call them the "Ladies from Hell" because of their kilts.

Machine Crew Came Back—Dead

It was grim work, flying back to quarters after that first fight, the wind whistling through the torn planes of my machine and my partner leaning against the empty bomb rack—silent.

Fifty of us had flown away that morning. Not all of us glided back to earth on the wide table land. They lifted my partner out of the machine and while I stood there half dazed, they carried his body away—poor Jack Simpson, he did not fly again.

Ambulances were darting here and there. The

Washington's Advice.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

George Washington's exalted character has been praised till his great genius as a soldier is in danger of being forgotten. Yet had he not been a military genius of the first rank all his high-minded devotion to the patriot cause would not have freed America. The great war in Europe has not yet produced a greater soldier than our Washington. Joffre on the Marne did not turn to bay more splendidly and sucessfully than did the American Washington at Trenton and Princeton, after the retreat across New Jersey. Alexieff's rescue of the Russian army from the German trap at Vilna was no finer feat of soldiership than that by which Washington slipped away from the British and Hessians at Long Island. The German General Staff has never conceived or executed a more daring combination than the moves which ended in Yorktown. Incidentally, this great General and sterling patriot believed and taught that this great American republic, which he created, should be prepared at all times to defend its territory, its interests and its honor against aggression. WILLIAM P. BAGGOTT.

The 25-Cent Eagle.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Have you seen the new 25-cent piece and have you admired its artistic arrangement, contour and physiognomy? And having one, do you not desire to have one or two more? Perhaps you do now, but when you have finished reading this if you have any real American blood in you, you will take it as an insult if the pay man puts even one in your next week's envelope.

Sorry Jack London is dead as we'll have to take Mr. Roosevelt's decision now. It's simply this: The artist who made that coin has made a stork or crane or something else, perhaps worse, out of the American eagle. Who ever saw an eagle fly with his legs stretched out with his tail? A caricature of the President, Vice-President, Secretary of State, or even Mr. Bryan, can be overlooked, as they are here only for a day, but suppose a thousand years from now that some one should dig up one of those quarters we would go through countless ages with a broken reputation, for they might mistake that bird for a buzzard or crow. No, we want an eagle, one that has feet clutched up underneath ready to pounce on his prey.

UNCLE JOSHUA HENRY.

REPUDIATING MR. CALLAWAY.

I have just noticed a press report of your offer of $1000 to Oscar Callaway, Member of Congress from this district, if he would give the names of the alleged "subsidized" newspapers which he claims exist in this country.

As an American citizen I desire to express my appreciation of your attitude in this matter and your very effective method of closing Callaway's mouth. This man does not represent the sentiment of the people of this district, as is conclusively proved by the handsome majority returned against him in his recent campaign for re-election.

I have read his statement to the effect that the American Defense Society and the Navy League had expended the sum of $13,000 to defeat him last summer, and in this connection I desire to say that the writer issued all checks and paid out all money used by his successful opponent, Hon. James C. Wilson, and is entirely familiar with the source from which such money came. The entire amount was drawn from the personal account of Mr. Wilson and came from his personal savings and earnings during his tenure of office as United States District Attorney of this district. The writer knows this to be true and can readily verify this assertion. I had charge of Mr. Wilson's campaign headquarters and with numerous other patriotic persons acted as one of his advisers during the campaign.

Callaway's statement in this connection is utterly without foundation and evinces a lack of information comparable only to his ignorance of all the principles of preparedness about which he rants so much in Washington. He was defeated largely because of his opposition to the so-called preparedness measures and his tenets were completely rejected by the people of his district.

I give you this information because of my personal appreciation of your efforts to uphold American dignity and your stanch and uncompromising Americanism. E. H. RATCLIFF.

No More Fun in It.

From the Rochester Post-Express.

This standing on the brink is not nearly so humorous in its aspect as it was when one of the irresolute Balkan nations was concerned.

JOIN THE RED CROSS.

The membership campaign of the St. Louis chapter of the American Red Cross was well started at the Washington Hotel dinner. But it was only started. Between the good beginning and the goal which ought to be reached in this city, there is need for enthusiastic work by the organization and cordial co-operation by the people of the city.

The statement of the purpose and method and field of the Red Cross is the strongest argument that can be made to any intelligent, civilized man for its generous support. It is the servant of humanity throughout the world. It stands ready to serve the suffering in any disaster that may come to human beings. It rescues the wounded on the battlefield, dresses their wounds, relieves their pain and cares for them. It attends the sick of the armies. It relieves any and all distress caused by disaster. The victims of earthquake, flood, conflagration and explosion on or under ground, are its wards. Its motive is love. Its slogan is service. It seems useless to describe the Red Cross and its work to readers of newspapers and periodicals. Its heroic and invaluable services to humanity in war and peace are recorded in the pages of modern history and in the columns of the press. The reports of its deeds are its best advertisements.

The American Red Cross is now the humanitarian arm of the Government. Since 1905 it has had official recognition and co-operation. The President of the United States is the acting head of the organization. It has the benefit of Government facilities and agencies. But it is an independent organization, relying for support and effective work on the American people. In its work it knows no flag or creed or race or nationality or color—it serves all alike. It is impartial.

The membership campaign is necessary to the efficiency of the Red Cross. Americans, in this essential line of preparedness for war or disaster, have been as apathetic as in other lines. The masses of the people have been both ignorant and indifferent concerning the Red Cross—indifferent largely because ignorant. Before the present membership movement the organization was maintained by the liberality and devotion of a few men and women. Out of our 100,000,000 people, only 25,000 were members of the Red Cross. Japan, with less than half our population, had 2,000,000. Germany had a million and other great nations in proportion. It is time for Americans to awaken to the necessity of Red Cross preparedness through efficient organization, trained forces and adequate equipment.

St. Louis is asked to supply one hospital unit and 20,000 members as a minimum. Let us make the minimum 40,000.

It costs only $1 annually to be a member. Supporting members pay $10. Life members pay $25. By paying $2 instead of $1 a member receives the Red Cross Magazine, an interesting and valuable publication, giving full information of the activities of the organization.

Red Cross membership offers opportunity to all those who for any reason cannot serve in the field of battle or disaster or in the hospitals to serve by contribution and co-operation. How can a patriotic American refuse this much? Join, dear reader; it is a duty and a privilege.

UNDER GERMANY'S ORDERS.

Three weeks ago today President Wilson went before Congress to announce that he had severed diplomatic relations with Germany because of the Imperial Government's proclamation of ruthless submarine warfare and that if "American ships and American lives" should be sacrificed by German naval commanders he would again appear before Congress "to ask that authority be given me to use any means that may be necessary for the protection of our seamen and our people in the prosecution of their peaceful and legitimate errands on the high seas."

Thus far no American ships have been sunk without warning and no American lives have been sacrificed by the destruction of an American ship, but this good fortune is not due to German forbearance or German respect for law. Our ships are not sunk because for the most part they have been driven from the seas under German threats of piracy. For the same reason American citizens have escaped massacre at the hands of the German submarine commanders, although one American has been murdered in an attack on a French liner.

What has happened is that the Atlantic ports of the United States are blockaded by Germany, and our ship owners are afraid to assert their legal rights. Even the American line ships which carry the United States mail are held in port by order of the German Government.

We are doing precisely what Germany commanded us to do. Our merchant shipping is no longer under sovereignty of the United States, but under the sovereignty of the Imperial German Government. Germany says we must not sail the seas under penalty of death, and we do not sail the seas. It could hardly make its orders more effective, so far as American ships are concerned, if its submarines had taken physical possession of our harbors and the regulation of our merchant shipping had been formally turned over to the German Admiralty.

This situation cannot continue indefinitely while waiting for Germany to commit an "overt act." The policy of ruthless submarine warfare is in itself an "overt act," and we believe that it is the immediate duty of President Wilson to ask Congress for "authority to use any means that may be necessary for the protection of our seamen and our people in the prosecution of their peaceful errands on the high seas." We must either assert our rights or surrender them, and if we are to surrender them, it was not worth while to go to the trouble of severing diplomatic relations with Germany. Every day that American ships are afraid to put out to sea because of German defiance of law and civilization our rights are invaded and our power as a great nation challenged.

WHY EAT POTATOES NOW?

Premier Lloyd-George announces that the retail price of potatoes is limited to 6 cents a pound, $3.60 a bushel, until March 31, and then $3.90 a bushel until June 30. In Germany there is possibly two-fifths of a crop. Prices here are rising from $3 a bushel, causing danger that cupidity may market even seed potatoes and thus prolong the shortage.

At such prices the potato is not good food; it is not at any price one of the best. Civilized humanity existed without it for centuries, rising to its zenith in a potatoless Old World. Habit and convenience in storage have led to over use.

The potato is three-fourths water and not quite one-fifth starch, which is its chief food substance, an excellent one for outdoor workers in severe climate. It is less valuable for sedentary workers indoors.

Only one five-hundredth part of the potato is fat; 3 per cent nitrogen, 2 per cent sugar. These more valuable substances are so slight that during the famine of 1847 Irish cotters formed the habit of cooking potatoes "with a bone in the middle"—that is, of under-cooking them, so that they might delay digestion and stave off hunger.

The housekeeper can help save seed potatoes for the next crop and reduce the price for those who need them by ceasing to buy. There are substitutes, of which rice nearly approaches the potato in values and defects.

THE WHITE HOUSE SIEGE.

That plan of the suffragists to besiege the White House, even as the children of Israel under Joshua besieged the city of Jericho, is picturesque, but the ladies should beware of overmuch optimism. They will furnish a fine spectacle, no doubt, marching around it once a day for six days and seven times on the seventh. But when the "high priestesses" blow their trumpets and the multitude gives a great shout, there should be no greater surprise if the walls fail to crumble, literally or figuratively.

The trouble about it is that the suffragists are laboring under handicaps that never bothered Joshua. Folk in Jericho were a bunch of heathen at best. They didn't understand what the Israelites were about, and, even if they had, they wouldn't have known how to make a start towards detaching supernatural powers from the enemy alliance.

With President Wilson it's different. Carefully brought up in the orthodox Presbyterian school, he probably knows more about Joshua than most of the besiegers know. He ought to get at least an even break in the matter of celestial influence. And it takes considerably more than a full-dress parade and a bugle sextet to change the Calvinist mind when it is set.

If there is a Mrs. Achan in the crowd, she might save time by getting her Babylonish garment and golden wedge at a department store.

ARGUMENTS FOR MILITARY TRAINING

NO. 10. BY LUKE E. WRIGHT,

Former Secretary of War

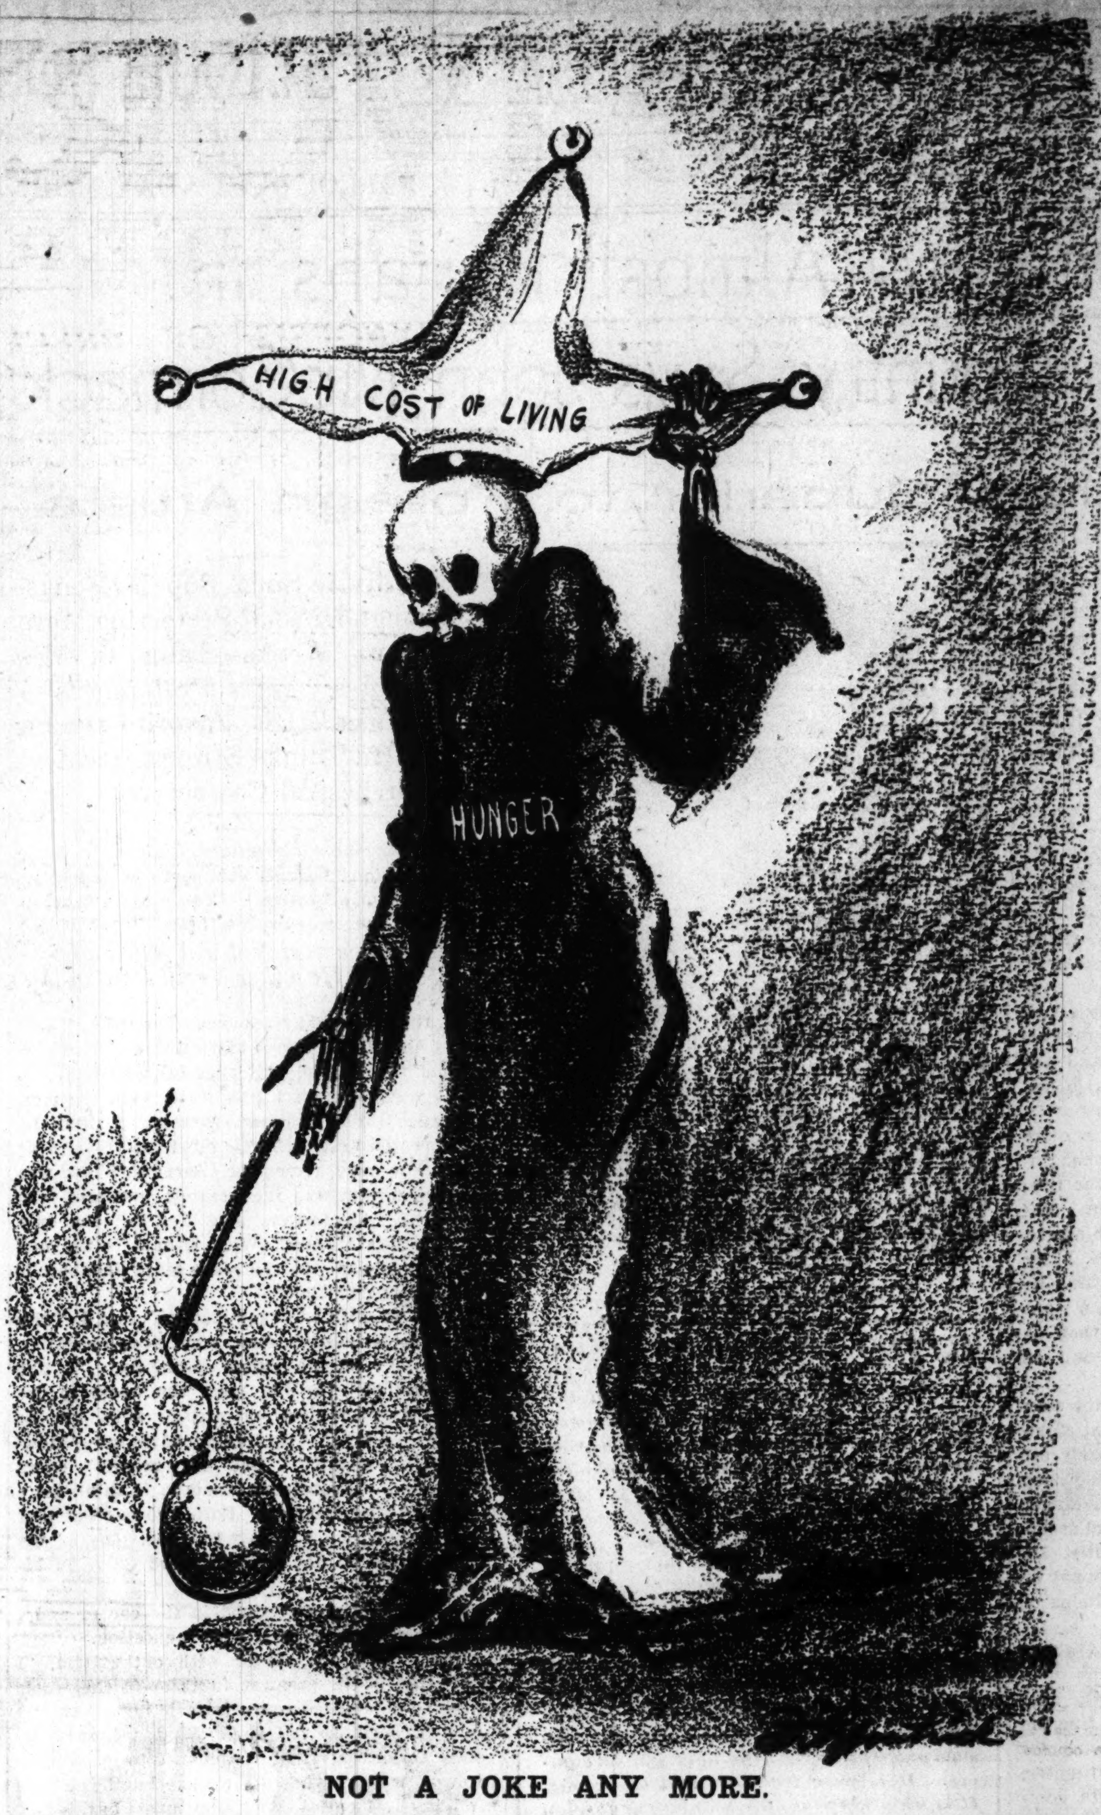
The fact is that the volunteer is not a reliable soldier, and any people that leans upon him leans upon a broken reed.

The volunteer system is a failure. It is wrong in principle and it is bad in practice. No people have ever been able to fight a long-continued war, to endure a strain upon all their resources, under the volunteer system. The fact is that the Confederacy of our Civil War thought that they could lick the Yankees in just a year; they gave themselves ample margin; and so they enlisted their men for 12 months. The 12 months expired and they were mistaken, woefully so, and thereupon, by a conscripting act, all of those 12-month men were simply blanketed into the army for the rest of the war. * * *

I have never understood, to be frank about it, why the brave and chivalrous and unselfish youths of our country should be required to rush in and bear the burden of holding the colors aloft while the slothful and selfish and indifferent stay at home. I do not look at military service as being a burden upon the individual; I regard it as privilege and a duty that we owe this country. Gen. Lee said once, I believe, that duty was the noblest word in the English language. If a man owes a duty, if all men, as they do, owe a duty to protect and preserve their country, then all men should bear the burden, and no man is entitled, in my judgment, to any particular credit for doing his duty.

Again, I think the idea of pay in connection with military service, except for a small professional army, is wrong in principle. In my judgment pay ought to be the most minor of minor considerations. The fact is, if we required every young man in the United States between 19 and 21 to serve six months with the colors, and thereafter one month each summer for six years, he would be giving a year of his life for preparation for war if it should come. He would be getting, however, from the country and at the expense of the whole country, a much greater service than he would be giving.

In the first place, it would set him up physically. It would give him physical stamina which would prolong his life many times one year. He would be taught how to take care of his body; and, above all, he would be taught habits of respect for constituted authority, which our youth so woefully lack. He would be taught order and discipline. Now, it is not a hardship if it is borne equally by everybody. If you put the son of the workingman and the son of the millionaire side by side in the ranks, it does not build up a military aristocracy, but it builds up a democratic body of men who love their country and its institutions, and are prepared to protect them when danger arises.



NOT A JOKE ANY MORE.

SOCRATES ON NEWSPAPER VERSE.

SOCRATES: I suppose you saw what Amy Lowell said about newspaper verse?

Glaucon: Yes. I thought it right snobbish of Amy. The newspapers are always glad to publish anything of hers on which they can lay their hands.

Socrates: I thought of that. Is Amy's verse any the worse for being in newspapers, do you suppose?

Thrasymachus: I can't see it.

Polemarchus: Of course. Do you remember the famous witticism of the Kansas editor who was offered Mark Twain's autobiography as a newspaper serial? He published this: "Mark Twain's autobiography, which has been running in the North American Review, is shortly to be made public."

Socrates: Very good, Polemarchus. However, we have joked enough. That sort of thing is for Zeno and his followers. It is my business to determine what there is, if anything, in what Amy says about newspaper verse.

Glaucon: How many kinds of verse are there?

Socrates: I will enumerate them: There is unpublished verse, which embraces the great mass of verse nobody will print. There is more of this verse than any other kind. There is posthumous verse, which the author thinks it would be best to publish when he is dead. We haven't a great deal of this and most of it confirms the poet's judgment. There is exploited verse, which the author publishes at his own expense. We have a great deal of this, but like the first, we don't see it. We are getting now to those kinds of poetry which have at least the quality of selling upon their merits. We can take up their merits later. Newspaper verse is for the most part written by men upon salary. They are the only poets on salary, and enjoy the distinction of being the only poets to whom anyone ever offered a salary. Magazine verse is that published by the magazines. Answering the charge that it is not poetry, Mr. Howells went into an exhaustive investigation of it some years ago and rendered the decision that ninety per cent of it really is poetry. It is for the most part conventional, and is not self-sustaining. Poetry magazine verse is that which appears in poetry magazines. This is usually unconventional. Is it not self-sustaining, nor are the magazines in which it is published self-sustaining. Book poetry is that which makes its appearance in books on which the publisher takes a chance. This is rare, and may be said to be the highest form of poetry we have.

Polemarchus: I suppose this is the kind Miss Lowell writes.

Socrates: Quite so. It is not, however, the source of Miss Lowell's fortune. Considering that there have been some very good newspaper poets, and that art cares not where song arises, it is not fair for Miss Lowell to speak of newspaper poetry slightingly, as if that were the dividing line between what is good and bad. One would as fairly condemn young poets, or as unfairly hold all poetry in experimental poetry magazines to be either good or bad.

Thrasymachus: Certainly.

Socrates: Poetry from no condition rises, to paraphrase Pope. The youthful Kipling first lifting his voice in the Indian press, or the young Field, first striking his lyre on our own newspapers, might have sat with Homer. The condition out of which they rose had nothing to do with it.

Glaucon: Truly.

Socrates: That great mass of poetry published by houses exploiting the authors is infinitely worse than newspaper poetry, just as newspaper poetry often has the quality of magazine and book poetry, and poetry magazine poetry is sometimes probably not poetry at all.

Polemarchus: You have it, I think.

Socrates: Would Miss Lowell, think you, care to match her poems with some celebrated newspaper poems?

Glaucon: Not without having the calendar handy.

Socrates: True, her poetry is modern; but even so, will any of it live as some newspaper poems have lived?

Thrasymachus: One cannot tell. My guess is no.

Socrates: Very well. It seems, then, that when Amy speaks of newspaper poetry slightingly she merely employs a figure of speech, as we ourselves do when we say that nobody loves a fat man.

Glaucon: That is all.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

BEAUTY CULTURE.

MRS. E. H. B.—Any bookstore can supply you with books on beauty culture. * * * Walnut hair stain is made by pouring grain alcohol over walnut hulls which have been broken into a jar. Fill jar only loosely. Screw lid down tightly and let the preparation stand over night. Pour off the alcohol in the morning, squeeze hulls and strain that portion through muslin. Cover hulls with cold water, let come slowly to boil and then simmer until hulls are mushy. The liquid obtained is strained off and when cold is added to the alcohol. Wash the hair and dry it thoroughly before applying the stain with a brush. Application must be repeated. * * * Hair tonic: Sulphate of quinine, 20 grains; alcoholic tincture of cantharides, 2 drams; extract of jaborandi 2 drams, Jamaica rum, 3 drams; glycerin, 1 ounce; bay rum, 6 ounces; elderflower water, sufficient to make one pint. Persevere in rubbing (or just rub in crude petroleum; or dissolve half small cup of salt and 10 grains quinine in quart bay rum. Too much salt stiffens.)

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

MRS. LOWIS.—Ravioli: Filling—Take half pound Parmesan cheese, grate and put in mixing bowl, then add eight or nine eggs and mix with cheese. Have ready in frying pan one good-sized onion, some parsley, a little garlic, chopped very fine, and fried to golden brown in hot olive oil and add. Purchase from butcher about 10 cents' worth brain or sausage meat and add, mixing well. Salt, pepper, cloves and allspice to suit taste, and lastly one cup spinach, boiled and chopped very fine. Mix all well together and set aside. Dough—Sift quart flour on baking board, make hollow in center and break in about six eggs, a little salt and add alternately glass of water. Knead this about half hour until it become good and firm. Divide into four equal parts; roll one piece out very thin and spread with filling. Roll out second piece likewise thin, and put over filling. Mark into squares about 1½ inches and cut with a little wheel. (Must use wheel, not a knife, otherwise they will open in the boiling.) Separate and set aside until wanted. Gravy—Get 15 cents' worth round steak and fry in hot olive oil with chopped onion, parsley, a little garlic and small spray of rosemary. Strain into this one can hot tomatoes and a few dried mushrooms (which have been soaked over night). Boil slowly half hour. About 25 minutes before dinner put ravioli in boiling salted water, boil about 20 minutes and drain. Have ready platter sprinkled with grated cheese, fill some gravy over this then layer of ravioli and follow with cheese, gravy, etc., until dish is full with gravy on top. Serve at once.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

JENKENS.—Municipal ownership is a term that has a limited meaning, and in general usage refers to the municipal ownership of works or plants providing the supply of such public utilities as are natural monopolies, or which from some inherent quality tend to become monopolies, such as water, gas and electric lighting, trolleys or street railways (overhead or underground), public baths, sewerage, public parks, housing accommodation, docks and harbors, ferries and sea fronts; and some maintain that telephonic and telegraphic services should properly be owned by municipalities. The question of public ownership of these utilities is comparatively a recent one, and is the result of the rapid growth of cities and the increasing need of having such public utilities supplied with efficiency and cheapness. The advocates of the principle not improperly claim that it is both the right and duty of municipalities to own, or at least to entirely control, all such undertakings in the interest and welfare of the general public, as well as from the standpoint of efficiency and economy. The view of that portion of the general public favoring municipal ownership is vigorously indorsed by a strong and active socialistic movement throughout the country, which goes further and seriously argues that it is the rightful province of municipalities to own, or, at all events, to entirely control the supply of ordinary necessaries of life, such as meat, milk, bread, clothing, coal, oil, insurance, etc. It is alleged that the same abuses arising from private ownership of public utilities are practiced, and exist if anything to a more aggravating extent, by large private corporations controlling the supply of the necessaries of life, and cause unwarrantable inconvenience and cost to the public. The opponents of municipal ownership advance the following argument against its adoption: (1) That municipalities are no more free from political corruption than most private corporations, and that city official corruption tends to the appointment of inefficient officers for political reasons and consequent mismanagement; (2) Dishonesty on the part of city officials in their dealings with corporations would imply their dishonesty in the management of public undertakings and of their finances; (3) In order to influence popular favor and support by officials, consumers may be charged lower rates than the city would really be justified in exacting, and the undertaking would thus become a public burden; (4) That municipal authorities are not warranted in making experimental tests, even in works of public utility, where the risks attendant upon such experiments are problematic. As an example, the case of the Philadelphia gas works undertaking is quoted (the largest American city to own its gas plant), where the municipal operation was so inefficient and expensive that it had to be handed over to private management.

WARFARE UNDERSEA.

JACK.—Torpedoes are fired from torpedo tubes on board the ship discharging them by a small quantity of gunpowder or by compressed air, the latter method being now in general use. In the case of the modern armored vessels — for predreadnoughts, dreadnoughts, superdreadnoughts and cruisers, all carry torpedoes—the torpedo tubes are under the water; in surface torpedo craft the tubes are placed on deck. Formerly battleships and armored cruisers carried torpedo tubes above the water, but these were abandoned on account of the danger through premature explosion of a torpedo by an enemy's shot. As soon as the torpedo reaches the water the propelling engines start, the gyroscopic steering gear points it for the target, and when it attains its speed and proper depth below the surface of the water nothing indicates its whereabouts but a small ripple on the surface of the water and the escaping air bubbles. The weapons can be set to travel at varying depths below the surface but nine feet is a common distance, this taking them below the nether edge of a battleship's armor. Sometimes the torpedo goes on its course at a depth as great as 14 feet. If the torpedo travels close to the surface, as seems from statements of passengers to have been the case with at least one of the torpedoes which struck the Lusitania, it will, of course, cause more agitation on the surface than would otherwise be the case. Submarine shoots submerged.

I nose along beneath the fog
That curtains all the sea;
A slimy eel, all made of steel,
A thing of mystery.
For none may see and none may hear,
Nor learn my deadly hate
Until they know the crashing blow
That shivers ev'ry plate,
As through her side my missile goes
To wound her sore and deep;
Her white-faced seamen leap.

A submerged submarine, being entirely surrounded with water, is as excellent a sound collector as could be desired. In order to locate their victim, the officers on board compare the intensity of the sounds on the port with the same sounds on the starboard side. They, by swinging their craft until the sounds are alike on both sides, know exactly when the craft they are attacking is dead ahead; whether in motion or not. If the vessel to be attacked is not under way, of course, the screws will not be heard, but there are always circulation pumps or dynamos going, and as the water is a far better conductor of sound than the air, much of their noise is immediately transmitted to the water. "If the enemy has its torpedo nets out, the submarine can creep up near the vessel, send a diver out, and attach a bottom mine under her, to be electrically exploded after the submarine has moved a safe distance away. If desired, a mine can be attached to the bottom of the surface vessel and exploded hours later by clockwork mechanism. In this manner mines can be placed under several ships, and all can be blown up simultaneously at a given hour, when the submarine may be miles away." In spite of the deadly menace of the submarine there is such a thing as an effective defense against it. For a ship under way, high cruising speed and frequent changes of course constitute the principal defense. Added to this are rapid-fire guns and a constant lookout from the ship and from aeroplane scouts. Where the ship is accompanied by torpedo boats or destroyers, these are constantly on the alert to ram and sink a submarine the moment its periscopes are seen. One weakness of the submarine is its low speed when submerged.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING INSTALLMENTS

ALLAN Quatermain, big game hunter and South African adventurer, while on a visit to the English home of Lord Ragnall, meets two turbaned strangers posing as conjurers, who inform him that two African tribes, the White Kendah and the Black Kendah, are at war. The god of the White Kendah is an image known as the Ivory Child, while that of the Black Kendah is an enormous elephant, Jana, which accompanies its tribesmen to battle and spreads terror among the rival natives. For his assistance in slaying the elephant Quatermain is promised entrance to a land where all elephants go to die, and where an enormous fortune in ivory awaits him.

The fiancee of Lord Ragnall, who later marries him, is told that the gods have appointed her as the guardian of the Ivory Child. After an unsuccessful attempt to kidnap her the strangers depart. Two years later finds Quatermain in Africa, where he is drawn into a gold mining scheme, swindled by his associates and left practically penniless. He is astonished by a visit from Lord Ragnall, who informs him that Lady Ragnall mysteriously disappeared when on a boating trip with him on the Nile. In gratitude for Ragnall's payment of the debts of the defunct mining company, Quatermain organizes an expedition to search for her. After a long and difficult journey they come to the edge of a desert, where Quatermain is dumfounded by a visit from one of the mysterious strangers he had met in England.

CHAPTER IX (Continued).

"O LORD MACUMAZANA," answered Harut, for of course it was in quite a perturbed tone: "I offer to you our humble apologies. The truth is that when we heard of your arrival in Beza-Town we started, or tried to start, from hundreds of miles away to keep our tryst with you here as we promised we would do. But we are mortal, Macumazana, and accidents intervened. Thus, when we had ascertained the weight of your baggage, camels had to be collected to carry it, which were grazing at a distance. Also it was necessary to send forward to dig out a certain well in the desert where they must drink. Hence the delay. Still, you will admit that we have arrived in time, five, or at any rate four hours before the rising of that sun which was to light you on your homeward way."

"Yes, you have, O Prophets, or O Liars, whichever you may be," I exclaimed with pardonable exasperation, for really their knowledge of my private affairs, however obtained, was enough to anger a saint. "So as you are here at last, come in and have a drink, for whether you are men or devils, you must be cold out there in the damp."

In they came according and, not being Mohammedans, partook of a tot of square-face from a bottle which I kept locked in a box to put Hans beyond the reach of temptation.

"To your health Harut and Marut," I said, drinking a little out of the pannikin and giving the rest to Hans, who gulped the fiery liquor down with a smack of his lips. For I will admit that I joined in this unholy midnight potation to gain time for thought and to steady my nerve.

"To your health, O Lord Macumazana," the pair answered as they swallowed their tots which I had made pretty stiff, and set down their pannikins in front of them with as much reverence as though these had been holy vessels.

"Now," I said, throwing a blanket over my shoulders, for the air was chilly, "now let us talk," and taking the lantern which Hans had thoughtfully lighted, I held it up and contemplated them.

There they were, Harut and Marut without doubt, to all appearance totally unchanged since some years before I had seen them at Ragnall in England. "What are you doing here?" I asked in a kind of fiery indignation inspired by my intense curiosity. "How did you get out of England after you had tried to steal away the lady to whom you sent the necklace? What did you do with that lady after you had beguiled her from the boat at Abu-Simbel? In the name of your Holy Child, or Shaitan of the Mohammedans, or of Set of the Egyptians, answer me, lest I should make an end of both of you, which I can do here without any questions being asked," and I whipped out my pistol.

"Pardon us," said Harut with a grave smile, "but if you were to do as you say, Lord Macumazana, many questions would be asked that you might find it hard to answer. So be pleased to put that death-dealer back into its place, and to tell us before we reply to you, what you know of Set of the Egyptians."

"As much or as little as you do," I replied.

Both bowed as though this information were of the most satisfactory order. Then Harut went on: "In reply to your requests, O Macumazana, we left England by steamboat and in due course after long journeyings we reached our own country. We do not understand your allusions to a place called Abu-Simbel on the Nile whence, never having been there, we have taken no lady. Indeed, we never meant to take that lady to whom we sent a necklace in England. We only meant to ask certain questions of her as she had the gift of vision, when you appeared and interrupted us. What should we want with white ladies, who have already far too many of our own?"

"I don't know," I replied, "but I do know that you are the biggest liars I ever met."

At these words, which some might have thought insulting, Harut and Marut bowed again as though to acknowlege a great compliment. Then Harut said:

"Let us leave the question of ladies and come to matters that have to do with men. You are here as we told you that you would be at a time when you did not believe us, and we are here to meet you, as we told you that we would be. How we knew that you were coming and how we came do not matter at all. Believe what you will. Are you ready to start with us, O Lord Macumazana, that you may bring to its death the wicked elephant Jana which ravages our land, and receive the great reward of ivory? If so, your camel waits."

"In courage and in skill you are more than many men, O Macumazana, yet in body you are but one and not four."

"If you think that I am going with you alone, you are much mistaken, Harut and Marut," I exclaimed. "Here with me is my servants without whom I do not stir," and I pointed to Hans whom they contemplated gravely. "Also there is the Lord Ragnall, who in this land is named Igeza, and his servant who here is named Bena, the man out of whom you drew snakes in the room in England. They also must accompany us."

At this news the impassive countenances of Harut and Marut showed, I thought, some signs of disturbance. They muttered together in an unknown tongue. Then Harut said:

"Our secret land is open to you alone, O Macumazana, for one purpose only—to kill the elephant Jana, for which deed we promise you a great reward. We do not wish to see the others there."

"Then you can kill your own elephant, Harut and Marut, for not one step do I go with you. Why should I when there is as much ivory here as I want, to be had for the shooting."

"How if we take you, O Macumazana?"

"How if I kill you both, O Harut and Marut? Fools, here are many brave men at my command and if you or any with you want fighting, it shall be given you in plenty. Hans, bid the Mazitu stand to their arms and summon Igeza and Bena."

"Stay! Lord," said Harut, "and put down that weapon," for once more I had produced the pistol. "We would not begin our fellowship by shedding blood, though we are safer from you than you think. Your companions shall accompany you to the land of the Kendah, but let them know that they do so at their own risk. Learn that it is revealed to us that if they go in there some of them will pass out again as spirits but not as men."

"Do you mean that you will murder them?"

"No. We mean that yonder are some stronger than us or any men, who will take their lives in sacrifice. Not yours, Macumazana, for that, it is decreed, is safe, but those of two of the others, which two we do not know."

"Indeed, Harut and Marut, and how am I to be sure that any of us are safe, or that you do not but trick us to your country, there to kill us with treachery and steal our goods?"

"Because we swear it by the oath that may not be broken; we swear it by the Heavenly Child," both of them exclaimed solemnly, speaking with one voice and bowing till their foreheads almost touched the ground.

I shrugged my shoulders and laughed a little.

"You do not believe us," went on Harut, "who have not heard what happens to those who break this oath. Come now and see something. Within five paces of your hut is a tall ant-heap upon which doubtless you have been accustomed to stand and overlook the desert." (This was true, but how did they guess it, I wondered.) "Go climb that ant-heap once more."

Perhaps it was rash, but my curiosity led me to accept this invitation. Out I went, followed by Hans with a loaded double-barreled rifle, and scrambled up the ant-heap which, as it was 20 feet high and there were no trees just here, commanded a very fine view of the desert beyond.

"Look to the north," said Harut from its foot.

I looked and there in the bright moonlight 500 or 600 yards away, ranged rank by rank upon a slope of sand and along the crest of the ridge beyond, I saw quite 200 kneeling camels and by each camel a tall, white-robed figure who held in his hand a long lance to the shaft of which, not far beneath the blade, was attached a little flag. For a while I stared to make sure that I was not the victim of an illusion or a mirage. Then when I had satisfied myself that these were indeed men and camels I descended from the ant-heap.

"You will admit, O Macumazana," said Harut politely, "that if we had meant you any ill, with such a force it would have been easy for us to take a sleeping camp at night. But these men come here to be your escort, not to kill or enslave you or yours. And, Macumazana, we have sworn to you the oath that may not be broken. Now we go to our people. In the morning, after you have eaten, we will return again unarmed and alone."

Then like shadows they slipped away.

CHAPTER X.

Charge!

TEN minutes later the truth was known and every man in the camp was up and armed. At first there were some signs of panic, but these, with the help of Babemba, we managed to control, setting the men to make the best preparations for defense that circumstances would allow, and thus occupying their minds. For from the first we saw that, except for the three of us who had horses, escape was impossible. That great camel corps could catch us within a mile.

Leaving old Babemba in charge of his soldiers, we three white men and Hans held a council at which I repeated every word that had passed between Harut and Marut and myself, including their absolute denial of their having had anything to do with the disappearance of Lady Ragnall on the Nile.

"Now," I asked, "what is to be done? My fate is sealed, since for purposes of their own, of which probably we know nothing, these people intend to take me with them to their country, as indeed they are justified in doing, since I have been fool enough to keep a kind of assignation with them here. But they don't want anybody else. Therefore, there is nothing to prevent you Ragnall, and you Savage, and you Hans, from returning with Mazitu."

"Oh! Baas," said Hans, who could understand English well enough, although he seldom spoke it, "why are you always bothering me with such praatjes?"—(that is, chatter). "Whatever you do I will do, and I don't care what you do, except for your own sake, Baas. If I am going to die, let me die; it doesn't at all matter how, since I must go soon and make report to your reverend father, the Predikant. And now, Baas, I have been awake all night, for I heard these camels coming a long while before the two spook men appeared, and as I had never heard camels before, could not make out what they were, for they don't walk like giraffes. So I am going to sleep, Baas, there in the sun. When you have settled things, you can wake me up and give me your orders," and he suited the action to the word, for when I glanced at him again he was, or appeared to be, slumbering, just like a dog at its master's feet.

I looked at Ragnall in interrogation.

"I am going on," he said briefly.

"Despite the denial of these men of any complicity in your wife's fate?" I asked. "If their words are true, what have you to gain by his journey, Ragnall?"

"An interesting experience while it lasts; that is all. Like Hans there, if what they say is true, my future is a matter of complete indifference to me. But I do not believe a word of what they say. Something tells me that they know a great deal which they do not choose to repeat, about my wife I mean. That is why they are so anxious that I should not accompany you."

"You must judge for yourself," I answered doubtfully, "and I hope to heaven that you are judging right. Now, Savage, what have you decided? Remember before you reply that these uncanny fellows declare that if we four go, two of us will never return. It seems impossible that they can read the future, still without doubt they are most uncanny."

"Sir," said Savage, "I will take my chance. Before I left England his lordship made a provision for my old mother and my widowed sister and her children, and I have none other dependent upon me. Moreover, I won't return alone with those Mazitu to become a barbarian, for how could I find my way back to the coast without anyone to guide me? So I'll go on and leave the rest to God."

"Which is just what we have all go to do," I remarked. "Well, as that is settled, let us send for Babemba and tell him."

This we did accordingly. The old fellow received the news with more resignation than I had anticipated. Fixing his one eye upon me, he said:

"Macumazana, these words are what I expected from you. Had any other man spoken them I should have declared that he was quite mad. But I remember that I said this when you determined to visit the Pongo, and that you came back from their country safe and sound, having done wonderful things there, and that it was the Pongo who suffered, not you. So I believe it will be again, so far as you are concerned, Macumazana, for I think that some devil goes with you who looks after his own. For the others I do not know. They must settle the matter with their own devils, or with those of the Kendah people. Now farewell, Macumazana, for it comes to me that we shall meet no more. Well, that happens to all at last, and it is good to have known you who are so great in your own way. Often I shall think of you as you will think of me, and hope that in a country beyond that of the Kendah I may hear from your lips all that has befallen you on this and other journeys. Now I go to withdraw my men before these white-robed Arabs come on their strange beasts to seize you, lest they should take us also and there should be a fight in which we, being the fewer, must die. The loads are all in order ready to be laden on their strange beasts. If they declare that the horses cannot cross the desert, leave them loose and we will catch them and take them home with us, and since they are male and female, breed young ones from them which shall be yours when you send for them, or Bausi the King's if you never send. Nay, I want no more presents who have the gun and the powder and the bullets you gave me, and the tusks of ivory for Bausi the King, and what is best of all, the memory of you and of your courage and wisdom. May these and the gods you worship befriend you. From yonder hill we will watch till we see that you have gone. Farewell," and waiting for no answer, he departed with the tears running from his solitary eye.

Ten minutes later the Mazitu bearers had also saluted us and gone, leaving us seated in that deserted camp surrounded by our baggage, and so far as I was concerned, feeling most lonely. Another 10 minutes went by which we occupied in packing our personal belongings. Then Hans, who was now washing out the coffee kettle at a little distance, looked up and said:

"Here come the spook-men, Baas, the whole regiment of them." We ran and looked. It was true. Marshaled in orderly squadrons, the camels with their riders were sweeping toward us, and a fine sight the beasts made with their swaying necks and long lurching gait. About 50 yards away they halted, just where the stream from our spring entered the desert, and there proceeded to water the camels, 20 of them at a time. Two men, however, in whom I recognized Harut and Marut, walked forward and presently were standing before us, bowing obsequiously.

"Three hours later I halted the splendid white camel upon which I was mounted and looked back from the crest of a wave in the desert."

"Good morning, Lord," said Harut to Ragnall in his broken English. "So you come with Macumazana to call at our poor house, as we call at your fine one in England. You think we got the beautiful lady you marry, she we give old necklace. That not so. No white lady ever in Kendah Land. We hear story from Macumazana and believe that lady drowned in Nile, for you 'member she walk much in her sleep. We very sorry for you, but gods know their business. They leave when they will leave, and take when they will take. You find her again some day more beautiful still and with her soul come back."

Here I looked at him sharply. I had told him nothing about Lady Ragnall having lost her wits. How then did he know of the matter? Still I thought it best to hold my peace. I think that Harut saw her had made some mistake, for leaving the subject of Lady Ragnall, he went on:

"You very welcome, O Lord, but it right tell you this most dangerous journey, since elephant Jana not like strangers, and," he continued slowly, "think no elephant like your blood and all elephants brothers. What one hate rest hate everywhere in world. See it in your face that you already suffer great hurt from elephant, you or someone near you. Also some of Kendah very fierce people and love fighting, and p'raps there war in the land while you there, and in war people get killed."

"Very good, my friend," said Ragnall, "I am prepared to take my chance of these things. Either we all go to your country together, as Macumazana has explained to you, or none of us go."

"We understand. That our bargain and we no break word," replied Harut.

Then he turned his benevolent gaze upon Savage, and said: "So you come too, Mr. Bena. That your name here, eh? Well, you learn lot things in Kendah Land, about snakes and all rest."

Here the jovial-looking Marut whispered something into the ear of his companion, smiling all over his face and showing his white teeth as he did so. "Oh!" went on Harut, "my brother tell me you meet one snake already, down in country called Natal, but sit on him so hard, that he grow quite flat and no bite."

"Who told him that?" gasped Savage.

"Oh! forget. Think Macumazana. No, then p'raps you tell him in sleep, for people talk much in sleep you know, and some other people got good ears and hear long way. Or p'raps little joke Harut. You 'member, he first-rate conjurer. P'raps he send that snake. No trouble if know how. Well, we show you much better snake Kendah Land. But you no sit on him, Mr. Bena."

To me, I know not why, there was something horrible in all this jocosity, something that gave me the creeps as always does the sight of a cat playing with a mouse. I felt even then that it foreshadowed terrible things. How could these men know the details of occurrences at which they were not present and of which no one had told them? Did that strange "tobacco" of theirs really give them some clairvoyant power, I wondered, or had they other secret methods of obtaining news. I glanced at poor Savage and perceived that he, too, felt as I did, for he had turned quite pale beneath his tan.

Even Hans was affected, for he whispered to me in Dutch: "These are not men; these are devils, Baas, and this journey of ours is one into hell."

Only Ragnall sat stern, silent and apparently quite unmoved. Indeed there was something almost sphinx-like about the set and expression of his handsome face. Moreover, I felt sure that Harut and Marut recognized the man's strength and determination and that he was one with whom they must reckon seriously. Beneath all their smiles and courtesies I could read this knowledge in their eyes; also that it was causing them grave anxiety. It was as though they knew that here was one against whom their power had no avail, whose fate was the master of their fate. In a sense Harut admitted this to me, for suddenly he looked up and said in a changed voice in Bantu:

"You are a good reader of hearts, O Macumazana, almost as good as I am. But remember that there is One Who writes upon the book of the heart, Who is the Lord of us who do but read, and that what He writes, that will befall, strive as we may, for in His hand is the future."

"Quite so," I replied coolly, "and that is why I am going with you to Kendah Land and fear you not at all."

"So it is and so let it be," he answered. "And now, Lords, are you ready to start? For long is the road and who knows what awaits us ere we see it send?"

"Yes," I replied, "long is the road of life and who knows what awaits us ere we see its end—and after?"

Three hours later I halted the splendid white riding-camel upon which I was mounted, and looked back from the crest of a wave of the desert. There far behind us on the horizon, by the help of my glasses, I could make out the site of the camp we had left and even the tall ant-hill whence I had gazed in the moonlight at our mysterious escort which seemed to have sprung from the desert as though by magic.

This was the manner of our march: A mile or so ahead of us went a picket of eight or ten men mounted on the swiftest beasts, doubtless to give warning of any danger. Next, three or four hundred yards away, followed a body of about 50 Kendah, traveling in a double line, and behind these the baggage men, mounted like everyone else, and leading behind them strings of camels laden with water, provisions, tents of skin and all our goods, including the 50 rifles and the ammunition that Ragnall had brought from England. Then came we three white men and Hans, each of us riding as swift and fine a camel as Africa can breed. On our right at a distance of about half a mile, and also on our left, traveled other bodies of the Kendah of the same numerical strength as that ahead, while the rear was brought up by the remainder of the company who drove a number of spare camels.

Thus we journeyed in the center of a square whence any escape would have been impossible, for I forgot to say that our keepers, Harut and Marut, rode exactly behind us, at such a distance that we could call to them if we wished.

At first I found this method of traveling very tiring, as does everyone who is quite unaccustomed to camel-back. Indeed, the swing and the jolt of the swift creature beneath me seemed to wrench my bones asunder to such an extent that at the beginning I had once or twice to be lifted from the saddle when, after hours of torture, at length we camped for the night. Poor Savage suffered even more than I did, for the motion reduced him to a kind of jelly. Ragnall, however, who I think had ridden camels before, felt little inconvenience, and the same may be said of Hans who rode in all sorts of positions, sometimes sideways, like a lady, and at others kneeling on the saddle like a monkey on a barrel-organ. Also, being very light and tough as rimpis, the swaying motion did not seem to affect him.

By degrees all these troubles left us to such an extent that I could cover my 50 miles a day, more or less, without even feeling tired. Indeed I grew to like the life in that pure and sparkling desert air, perhaps because it was so restful. Day after day we journeyed on across the endless, sandy plain, watching the sun rise, watching it grow high, watching it sink again. Night after night we ate our simple food with appetite and slept beneath the glittering stars till the new dawn broke in glory from the bosom of the immeasurable East.

We spoke but little during all this time. It was as though the silence of the wilderness had got hold of us and sealed our lips. Or perhaps each of us was occupied with his own thought. At any rate, I know that for my part I seemed to live in a kind of dreamland, thinking of the past, reflecting much upon the innumerable problems of this passing show called life, but not paying much heed to the future. What did the future matter to me, who did not know whether I should have a share of it even for another month, or week, or day, surrounded as I was by the shadow of death? No, I troubled little as to any earthly future, although I admit that in this oasis of calm I reflected upon that state where past, present and future will all be one; also that those reflections, which were in their essence a kind of unshaped prayer, brought much calm to my spirit.

With the regiment of escort we had practically no communication; I think that they had been forbidden to talk to us. They were a very silent set of men, finely made, capable persons of an Arab type, light rather than dark in color, who seemed for the most part to communicate with each other by signs or in low-muttered words. Evidently they looked upon Harut and Marut with great veneration, for any order which either of these brethren gave, if they were brethren, was obeyed without dispute or delay. Thus, when I happened to mention that I had lost a pocketknife at one of our camping places two days journey back, three of them, much against my wish, were ordered to return to look for it, and did so, making no question. Eight days later they rejoined us, much exhausted, and having lost a camel, but with the knife, which they handed to me with a low bow; and I confess that I felt ashamed to take the thing.

Nor did we exchange many further confidences with Harut and Marut. Up to the time of our arrival at the boundaries of the Kendah country, our only talk with them was of the incidents of travel, of where we should camp, of how far it might be to the next water, for water-holes or old wells existed in this desert, of such birds as we saw, and so forth. As to other and more important matters a kind of truce seemed to prevail. Still I observed that they were always studying us, and especially Lord Ragnall, who rode on day after day, self-absorbed and staring straight in front of him, as though he looked at something we could not see.

Thus we covered hundreds of miles, not less than 500 at the least, reckoning our progress at only 30 miles a day, including stoppages. For ocasionally we stopped at the water-holes or small oases, where the camels drank and rested. Indeed, these were so conveniently arranged that I came to the conclusion that once there must have been some established route running across these wastelands to the south, of which the traditional knowledge remained with the Kendah people. If so, it had not been used for generations, for save those of one or two that had died on the outward march, we saw no skeletons of camels or other beasts, or indeed any sign of man. The place was an absolute wilderness where nothing lived except a few small mammals at the oases and the birds that passed over it in the air on their way to more fertile regions. Of these, by the way, I saw many that are known both to Europe and Africa, especially ducks and cranes; also storks that, for aught I can say, may have come from far-off, homely Holland.

At last the character of the country began to change. Grass appeared on its lower lying stretches, then bushes, then occasional trees and among the trees a few buck. Halting the caravan I crept out and shot two of these buck with a right and left, a feat that caused our grave escort to stare in a fashion which showed me that they had never seen anything of the sort done before.

That night, while we were eating the venison with relish, since it was the first fresh meat that we had tasted for many a day, I observed that the disposition of our camp was different from its common form. Thus it was smaller and placed on an eminence. Also the camels were not allowed to graze where they would as usual, but were kept within a limited area while their riders were arranged in groups outside of them. Further, the stores were piled near our tents, in the center, with guards set over them. I asked Harut and Marut, who were sharing our meal, the reason of these alterations.

"It is because we are on the border of the Kendah country," answered old Harut. "Four days more march will bring us there, Macumazana."

"Then why should you take precautions against your own people? Surely they will welcome you."

"With spears, perhaps. Macumazana, learn that the Kendah are not one, but two people. As you may have heard before, we are the White Kendah, but there are also the Black Kendah, who outnumber us many times over, though in the beginning we from the north conquered them, or so says our history. The White Kendah have their own territory; but as there is no other road, to reach it we must pass through that of the Black Kendah, where it is always possible that we may be attacked, especially as we bring strangers into the land."

"How is it, then, that the Black Kendah allow you to live at all, Harut, if they are so much the more numerous?"

"Because of fear, Macumazana. They fear our wisdom and the decree of the Heavenly Child spoken through the mouth of the oracle, which, if it is offended, can bring a curse upon them. Still, if they find us outside our borders they may kill us, if they can, as we may kill them if we find them within our borders."

"Indeed, Harut. Then it looks to me as though there were a war breeding between you."

"A war is breeding, Macumazana, the last great war in which either the White Kendah or the Black Kendah must perish. Or perhaps both will die together. Maybe that is the real reason why we have asked you to be our guest, Macumazana," and with their usual courteous bows, both of them rose and departed before I could reply.

"You see how it stands," I said to Ragnall. "We have been brought here to fight for our friends, Harut, Marut and Co., against their rebellious subjects, or rather the King who reigns jointly with them."

"It looks like it," he replied quietly, "but doubtless we shall find out the truth in time and meanwhile speculation is no good. Do you go to bed, Quatermain, I will watch till midnight and then wake you."

That night passed in safety. Next day we marched before the dawn, passing through country that grew continually better watered and more fertile, though it was still open plain but sloping upwards ever more steeply. On this plain I saw herds of antelopes and what in the distance looked like cattle, but no human being. Before evening we camped where there was good water and plenty of food for the camels.

While the camp was being set Harut came and invited us to follow him to the outposts, whence he said we should see a view. We walked with him, a matter of not more than a quarter of a mile, to the head of that rise up which we had been traveling all day, and thence perceived one of the most glorious prospects on which my eyes have fallen in all great Africa. From where we stood the land sloped steeply for a matter of 10 or 15 miles, till finally the fall ended in a vast plain like the bottom of a gigantic saucer, that I presume in some far time of the world's history was once an enormous lake. A river ran east and west across this plain and into it fell tributaries. Far beyond this river the contours of the country rose again till, many, many miles away, there appeared a solitary hill, tumulus-shaped, which seemed to be covered with bush.

Beyond and surrounding this hill was more plain which with the aid of my powerful glasses was, we could see, bordered at last by a range of great mountains, looking like a blue line penciled across the northern distance. To the east and west the plain seemed illimitable. Obviously its soil was of a most fertile character and supported numbers of inhabitants, for everywhere we could see their kraals or villages. Much of it to the west, however, was covered with dense forest with, to all appearance, a clearing in its midst.

"Behold the land of the Kendah," said Harut. "On this side of the River Tava live the Black Kendah, on the further side, the White Kendah."

"And what is that hill?" I asked.

"That is the Holy Mount, the Home of the Heavenly Child, where no man may set foot"—here he looked at us meaningly—"save the priest of the Child."

"What happens to him if he does?" I asked.

"He dies, my Lord Macumazana."

"Then it is guarded, Harut."

"It is guarded, not with mortal weapons, Macumazana, but by the spirits that watch over the Child."

As he would say no more on this interesting matter, I asked him as to the numbers of the Kendah people, to which he replied that the Black Kendah, might number 20,000 men of arm-bearing age, but the White Kendah not more than 2000.

"Then no wonder you want spirits to guard your Heavenly Child," I remarked, "since the Black Kendah are your foes and with you warriors are few."

At this moment our conversation was interrupted by the arrival of a picket on a camel, who reported something to Harut which appeared to disturb him. I asked him what was the matter.

"That is the matter," he said, pointing to a man mounted on a rough pony who just then appeared from behind some bushes about half a mile away, galloping down the slope towards the plain. "He is one of the scouts of Simba, King of the Black Kendah, and he goes to Simba's town in yonder forest to make report of our arrival. Return to camp, Macumazana, and eat for we must march with the rising of the moon."

As soon as the moon rose we marched accordingly, although the camels, many of which were much worn with the long journey, scarcely had been given time to fill themselves and none to rest. All night we marched down the long slope, only halting for half on hour before daylight to eat something and rearrange the loads on the baggage beasts which now, I noticed, were guarded with extra care. When we were starting again Marut came to us and remarked with his usual smile, on behalf of his brother Harut, who was otherwise engaged, that it might be well for us if we had our guns ready, since we were entering the land of the elephant Jana and "who knew but that we might meet him?"

" Or his worshipers on two legs," I suggested, to which his only reply was a nod.

So we got our repeating rifles, some of the first that were ever made, serviceable but rather complicated weapons that fired five cartridges. Hans, however, with my permission, armed himself with the little Purdey piece that was named "Intombi," the single-barreled, muzzle-loading gun which had done me so much service in earlier days, and even on my last journey to Pongoland. He said that he was accustomed to it and did not understand these new-fangled breechloaders, also that it was "lucky." I consented as I did not think that it made much difference with what kind of rifle Hans was provided. As a marksman he had this peculiarity: up to a hundred yards or so he was an excellent shot, but beyond that distance no good at all.

A quarter of an hour later, as the dawn was breaking, we passed through a kind of neck of rough stones bordering the flat land, and emerged in a compact body on to the edge of the grassy plain. Here the word was given to halt for a reason that became clear to me as soon as I was out of the rocks. For there, marching rapidly, not half a mile away, were some 500 white-robed men. A large proportion of these were mounted, the rest being foot-soldiers, of whom more were running up every minute, appearing out of bush that grew upon the hillside, apparently to dispute our passage. These people, who were black-faced with fuzzy hair upon which they wore no head-dress, all seemed to be armed with spears.

Women Take Active Part in Red Cross Campaign—Many Debutantes and Matrons Have Been Taking First Aid Courses—Dinner Dance of Mr. and Mrs. Laughlin Feature of Week.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

SOCIETY has a new interest, the Red Cross that launched its membership campaign Friday night with a dinner at the Washington Hotel. Looking in one could not have told the assemblage seated at the various tables from an "Imperial" dinner dance except for the clothes they wore, and a few outsiders who were there.

There were the little crowds grouped together, the Maurans, Davises, and Benoists, Fordyces, the Lionberger Davises, Catlins, Simmonses, Pettuses, all the Country Club crowd.

It went off with a bang! Lots of money was promised and everyone is to get members. Mrs. Frank V. Hammer who is the local chairman has an office downtown and comes to it early every morning. Works like a trojan.

It was she who was one of the organizers of the association that worked so hard for the Belgian relief, making clothes and things for the women and children refugees in France when the war began. It was she who was one of the prime movers in the preparedness organization here and she was one of the most interested workers for the Skin and Cancer Hospital.

She was before her marriage Miss Virgie Conn, the daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Luther H. Conn and the granddaughter of the late Sir Charles Gibson. She belongs to the little group of fashionable young matrons who are leaders here and has displayed remarkable executive ability. so the Red Cross affairs are in good hands and bound to make a go.

For more than a year society girls and matrons have been taking the first aid courses at Barnes' Hospital—in fact it has been quite the thing to do and there was talk what to do for broken arms and how to make up beds intermingled with talk of clothes and dances around bridge tables and at luncheons. The campaign has begun in earnest and between the skating on Tuesday and Friday morning, when the skating club meets, the first aid classes and sewing for the American ambulance hospitals in France, everyone will be quite busy.

MRS. G. LACY CRAWFORD of 5635 Waterman avenue and her sister, Mrs. Lida Bevis, departed yesterday afternoon for New York to join their sister, Mrs. Florence Bevis Longstreth, who is spending the winter there.

Mrs. Voluntine C. Turner of 5679 Cabanne avenue, has gone to Tallahassee, Fla., to visit her aunt, Mrs. Winthrop. Miss Blanche Turner, the debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Turner, went on for the "Prom" at Cornell, where her young uncle, George Rogers Clark, is a student. She now is in Philadelphia, the guest of Miss Annie Bowin, formerly of St. Louis, and will return in about 10 days.

The engagement of Miss Agnes G. Grant, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William R. Grant of 3720 Olive street, to Arthur R. Cassilly has been announced. The wedding will take place in June.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wiggins of 23 Portland place and their daughter, Miss Ellanore Scott, are at the Grove Park Inn in Asheville, N. C. They started for a tour of the West Indies, but are still in this country.

The engagement of Miss Charlotte MacIlvaine to J. Owen Ambler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Ambler, was announced Thursday afternoon by the bride-elect at a meeting of her bridge club. The wedding will take place Easter week.

Miss MacIlvaine is an accomplished musician. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Wiggins MacIlvaine of 3130 Lafayette avenue. The guests at the card party were: Misses Mona and Mildred Mason, Urna Nies, Jane Kealty, Elsie Diekneite, May Atkinson, Julia Burdette, Patricia and Daisy Marshall and Mmes. Mr. and Mrs. Raymond J. Denyven of 5598 Waterman avenue are receiving congratulations upon the arrival of a daughter, who will be named Miss Margaret Mary Denvyan. Mrs. Denvyan was formerly Miss Margaret Winter.

THURSDAY evening when Mr. and Mrs. Laughlin gave their dinner dance at the Missouri Athletic Association for their young son, Robert Randolph Laughlin, a number of other affairs were going on in other parts of the club—a water circus, the weekly dinner dance and two small banquets, but before the evening had advanced very far the rumor went around that an unusually beautiful party—a children's party with boys and girls from 14 to 18 years of age, was going on in the ballroom, and although the room is secluded, all evening the doorways were crowded with grown-up persons watching the embryo belles and beaux dance.

The affair was a dinner dance with one big table laid for 42 and a small one for the chaperons.

Down the center of the big table was an American flag, with a large cherry tree in the middle. There were bowls of red carnations and white sweet peas and George Washington place cards. There are four columns in the room and they were crowned with flags, and there were flags draped on the walls.

Dancing began after the first course and after that between each course there was a dance just as the grown-ups have at the country clubs and at Sunset. They say it was the first party in that little junior set, where there was not a "wall flower" all evening.

Most of the guests are members of a Friday afternoon dancing class at Mahlers and will be "out" about the same time.

The guests were Misses Grace Wallace, Anita O'Reilly, Olivia and Elise Harbaugh, Marion Lemp, Lucy and Elizabeth Terry, Marion Martin, Julia Fay Carton, May Cabanne, Emily Milliken, Elizabeth Bright, Ruth Bass, Elizabeth Grayson, Janet Phelan; Messrs. Samuel D. Capen Jr., Clark Aldreon, James M. Franciscus Jr., Henry H. and Robert D. Mudd, Clarence E. Maloy, Edgar Cahill, Paul Goessling, Dehaas Britton, Alfred Carr III, Carleton Cook, Henry Bollman, Howard Wilhelmj, James L. Winstead, D. Calhoun Jones, Fred Stone, John Tebbetts, Martin Engman. At the hostess' table were Mr. and Mrs. Laughlin, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Bollman, Mr. and Mrs. C. Gratiot Cabanne and Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Hussey.

Miss Elsie Lammert Smith, daughter of Harry T. T. Smith of 55 Kingsbury place, is making a round of visits in the East and now is in New York.

She and Miss Paula Forster were at West Point for the festivities last week and will stop in Boston, Philadelphia Detroit and Chicago on the way home.

The children of many of the nobles of Moolah Temple were entertained by Mrs. James W. Alcorn, wife of the potentate, at her residence, 4356 Lindell boulevard, last Sunday afternoon. Mrs

Henry Diamond is preparing an entertainment for the children at Moolah Temple under the auspices of the Ladies' Temple Club. The most talented children have prominent parts in the production, which is scheduled to take place after the bal masque and entertainment which is set for the night of Feb. 8 for nobles, ladies, families and friends.

A number of the box holders as well as those who have made seat reservations for the Kreisler recital at the Odeon on Friday evening are the same persons who heard the distinguished violinists's recital on Nov. 30 and arranged for their seats at the conclusion of that recital. Of these the box holders are Dr. and Mrs. Calvin Lightner, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Hill, Mrs. D. R. Francis, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Barroll, Mrs. Howard Watson and Mr. and Mrs. John T. Davis Jr.

The hours will be from 3 to 5 o'clock.

The 27 seniors of Lindenwood College made Washington's birthday the occasion of their annual dinner, perhaps for the reason that all might be gowned in bewitching Colonial costume, complete with powdered hair and beauty spots. ## A HARMLESS FAT REMOVER

For years the knowledge and conviction that there is a safe, sure, harmless remedy for obesity has been spreading, until now the whole world knows that in the famous Marmola Prescription is found a sure road to symmetry—a great specific for overfatness which leaves the body symmetrical, the skin smooth and clear and the bodily health perfect. This almost miraculous change is accomplished without dieting, exercise or denial of any kind at the rate of two, three or four pounds a week. Convenience in taking this great remedy is facilitated by procuring Marmola Prescription in tablet form. Visit your druggist today or send 75c to the Marmola Co., 864 Woodward Av., Detroit, Mich., for a quantity of these tablets sufficient to start you well on your way to the coveted goal—slimness.—ADV.

DON'T LET SOAP SPOIL YOUR HAIR

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.—ADV.

Two Important Sales Featured for Monday

Bill for charges rest of month will be rendered April 1.

"IMPORTANT" is a big word—that is it has a big meaning. When we speak of a sale as important, we do not mean that we have only high quality of material at a low price—nor do we mean we have a line, or lines of garments that claim only style merit, regardless of quality or price. "IMPORTANT" here, when applied to our merchandise, means, our garments have style merit, style individuality, quality of fabric and tailoring, linked with a price much lower than garments of such quality and style are to be had elsewhere, and here only on rare occasions.

COMPOSER-PIANIST AT 'POP' CONCERT TODAY

Emerson Whithorne's Character Piece, "The Rain," Will Be Heard Here for First Time.

Emerson Whithorne, American composer-pianist, whose orchestral character piece, "The Rain," will have its first St. Louis hearing at the Pop concert this afternoon, arrived here yesterday to be present at today's concert. Whithorne is one of the younger composers of the day and has done some notable work abroad, though both he and his compositions are not widely known on this side of the Atlantic. Conductor Max Zach of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra is introducing him to the St. Louis public, as he has presented other American composers.

Whithorne is a native of Ohio, and now lives in Chicago. Most of his life has been spent abroad, where he studied under the foremost teachers. He is executive editor of the Art Publication Society, the organization of which Leopold Godowsky, the famous Polish pianist, is editor-in-chief. Some of his best known compositions are Oriental in their subjects, notably the music for the Japanese play, "The Typhoon," and the Chinese play, "The Yellow Jacket."

Today's concert will be the only one given by the Symphony orchestra this week, as it is the usual open week of the present month. Miss Olga Hambuechen, the St. Louis contralto, will be the soloist. Two other interesting features of the day's program will be the repetition by special request of the "Fantasie on a Popular Walloon Theme," played at a recent pair of symphony concerts in compliment to the Belgian violinist, Eugen Ysaye, who is a brother of its composer, and the closing number of the concert—Victor Herbert's American Fantsy. This composition is a combination of several American airs and ends with the "Star-Spangled Banner." It is played in recognition of Washington's birthday, which was Thursday.

Following is the program:

Marche Joyeuse ....................Chabrier
(First time.)
Overture to "Fra Diavolo"............Auber
Aria, "Farewell, Ye Mountains," from
"Jeanne d'Arc" ...........Tschaikowsky
"The Rain," a character piece....Whithorne
(First time.)
Fantasie on a Popular Walloon Theme,
Op. 13 ..........................Ysaye
(By request.)
Songs with Piano—
(a) Life and Death ........Coleridge-Taylor
(b) All Erin is Calling, Mavourneen..O'Hara
(c) Call Me No More..............Cadman
American Fantasy ..............Herbert

The orchestra is scheduled for a concert in Columbia, Mo., March 5, the second it has given there this season. The appearance will be under the auspices of the music department of the University of Missouri, and John F. Kiburz, leader of the flute section of the orchestra, will be the soloist.

PAGEANT CHORAL SOCIETY TO GIVE ALL-AMERICAN CONCERT

Two Hundred Members and Four Soloists to Participate in Program at Odeon, March 20.

An all-American program, both in composers represented and solo artists will be the chief characteristics of the last concert this season of the St. Louis Pageant Choral Society, of which Frederick Fischer is conductor. The concert will take place March 20 at the Odeon, and will be given by the full mixed chorus of 200 voices maintained by the Pageant Choral Society, accompanied by the entire Symphony Orchestra.

"Hora Novissima," Horatio W. Parker's masterpiece, will be the principal number on the program, with "The Peace Pipe" by Frederick Converse, a composition based upon Longfellow's "Hiawatha," as the other number on the program. Helen Stanley, prima donna soprano of the Chicago Opera, who last was heard in St. Louis as "Michaela" in the Ellis Opera Company's presentation of "Carmen," will sing the principal soprano parts. Margaret Keyes, contralto of the Metropolitan Opera, New York; Arthur Hackett, a Boston tenor, who has been heard in St. Louis as a soloist with the Symphony Orchestra, and Robert Maitland, basso of the Covent Garden Opera, London, will be the other leading soloists. Maitland is the only one not a native American. "Hora Novissima" will be sung in Latin.

WASHINGTON MEMORIAL PLANS

Missourians Contributing to Building at National Capital.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—A financial statement issued here by the George Washington Memorial Association shows that many well-known Missourians have begun to contribute varying sums to the organization, which proposes to erect on the site of the old Pennsylvania Station here, where President Garfield was shot, a memorial building to George Washington. The association plans to start work on the structure this spring. The site has been donated by Congress. The building is designed to seat 10,000 persons and to be open for free use by national and international congresses and conventions on such subjects as peace, medical science, art, history, education, and is to be given to the nation free of charge.

Mrs. Henry F. Dimock, 1301 Sixteenth street, Washington, is the preseident of the association.

DOWN GOES BABYLON IN GRIFFITH SUPER-FILM

"Intolerance" Opens at Garrick Tonight, "Everywoman" at Jefferson.

David W. Griffith's "Intolerance," which is to have its first St. Louis showing at the Shubert-Garrick Theater tonight has been pronounced, in the cities where it has thus far been seen, a superphotodrama. It is the only work which Griffith has done since his phenomenally successful "Birth of a Nation," and its effects are said to be bigger and much more imaginative than those of the Civil War film.

"Intolerance" tells four stories concurrently. One is located in present-day America, another in France in the days of religious persecution, another in Palestine in the days of Christ, and the fourth and earliest in ancient Babylon. The most remarkable scenes are those of the downfall of Babylon before the attack of Cyrus, the Persian conqueror. The feast of Belshazzar furnishes a remarkable scene in this connection.

"Everywoman," now on its seventh annual tour, comes to the Jefferson tonight. This elaborate play, which combines features of grand opera, musical comedy and drama, has not been seen in St. Louis for several seasons, and will come as a new offering to many. "Experience," recently seen here, is held by a number of observers to have been modeled upon "Everywoman." The story of "Everywoman" is woman's quest for love. The performance is on a large scale, with elaborate scenery and big massed effects. Paula Shay has the title role, and the production is by Henry W. Savage.

"Great Lover" Next Week.

Leo Ditrichstein in "The Great Lover" is billed for the Jefferson next Sunday night. The characterization, by Ditrichstein, of the grand opera star who loses his voice, was one of the strongest individual pieces of work on the New York stage last season, ranking with Emily Stevens' playing in "The Unchastened Woman" and John Barrymore's tragic portrayal of the victim in "Justice."

"A Dry Town," at the Players, starts its fourth week today, and its producers are now taking the measure of Chicago, with a view to putting the performance on there. The four weeks' run will break the record for stage productions here, it is believed, except for "Ben Hur" and Blanche Bates' run in "The Darling of the Gods" during the World's Fair. The quaint humor of the life of a Missouri town, as visualized by the author, Lewis B. Ely, seems to be the chief factor in the play's remarkable success here.

Melville Ellis and Irene Bordini, the former a pianist and scenic designer, the latter a French chanteuse, known as "the girl with the biggest eyes in the world," will be the principal performers at the Columbia Theater tomorrow. This act was one of the nine selected recently by Alexander Woollcott, dramatic critic of the New York Times, as the "All-American Vaudeville Bill," comprising the acts which he considered the best in the two-a-day. Sarah Padden and company in "The Clod," and a number of lighter acts, complete the bill.

Here Comes Peg Again.

"Peg o' My Heart" will peg into the American Theater at today's matinee, for the first time at popular prices in St. Louis. This is J. Hartley Manners' play, in which Laurette Taylor made her stellar reputation a few seasons ago.

The Six Water Lilies, swimmers and divers, will head the Grand Opera House bill tomorrow. At the Standard, today's burlesque bill is "Girls from Joyland," and at the Gayety, Stone and Pillard will feature a fairyland play, "The Rag Doll."

CHINA'S DEPOSED BOY EMPEROR WANTS A FOREIGN EDUCATION

Indications Are That Hsuan-Tung, Now 12, Will Be Well Provided For by Parliament.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

PEKING, Jan. 27.—Hsuan-tung, the 12-year-old ex-Emperor of China, has asked the Government for permission to go abroad, that he may have the advantage of a foreign education.

Negotiations between the members of the Tsing house, to which the boy Emperor belongs, and Parliament are being conducted in an effort to have the new Constitution give the deposed dynasty the favorable treatment guaranteed in the provisional Constitution. Little opposition to this movement has developed and it is likely the boy Emperor will be well provided for by Parliament.

ALFONSO'S PORTRAIT BEING PAINTED FROM WAX FIGURE

Spanish King Will Have to Pose to Vasquez, However, for Face and Hands.

MADRID, Feb. 24.—King Alfonso, absorbed by his occupations, has been unable to give the necessary number of sittings to Carlo Vasquez, who is engaged in painting his majesty's portrait. Senor Vasquez, however, has solved the difficulty. No matter at what time one visits his studio, the King can be seen there sitting in a familiar pose, in the uniform of a Colonel of infantry. If one examines the sovereign attentively, it can be seen that he retains his immovability—it is a wax figure which represents him. The figure and attitude of Alfonso have been exactly copied and he will have to pose only for the face and hands.

WOMEN COOKS WANTED FOR ARMY

LONDON, Feb. 24.—The War Office has issued a hurry call for a thousand young women to enlist as cooks and waitresses for duty with various units in the army. The minimum age permitted is 18, and the pay is $120 a year with free uniforms, board, laundry, insurance and railroad fare.

The pay, as a matter of fact, is slightly better than that of the ordinary British private soldier. Women recruits must "sign on" for the duration of the war.

Medicated Smoke Drives Out Catarrh

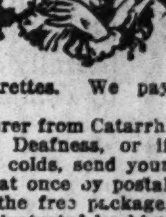
Try This Pleasant Herb Smoke. Sent Free By Mail.

Dr. Blosser, who has devoted forty years to the treatment of Catarrh, is the originator of a certain combination of medical herbs, flowers and berries to be smoked in a pipe or ready prepared cigarette. The smoke-vapor reaches all the air passages of the head, nose and throat. As the disease is carried into these passages with the air you breathe, so the antiseptic, healing vapor of this Remedy is carried with the breath directly to the affected parts.

This simple, practical method applies the medicine where sprays, douches, ointments, etc., cannot possibly go. Its effect is soothing and healing, and is entirely harmless, containing no tobacco or habit-forming drugs. It is pleasant to use, and not sickening to those who have never smoked. No matter how severe or long standing your case may be, we want to show you what our Remedy will do.

To prove the beneficial, pleasant effect, a liberal sample will be mailed absolutely free to any sufferer, that will verify all claims by actual test. This free package contains a pipe, some of the Remedy for smoking and also some of our medical cigarettes. If you wish to continue the treatment, it will cost only one dollar for a month's supply for the pipe or a box containing one hundred cigarettes. We pay postage.



If you are a sufferer from Catarrh, Asthma, Catarrhal Deafness, or if subject to frequent colds, send your name and address at once by postal card or letter for the free package, and a copy of an illustrated booklet, to The Blosser Company, 596 Walton St., Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Blosser's Catarrh Remedy is for sale in St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph and Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Drug Stores.

Prepare This for a Bad Cough—It's Fine

Cheaply and Easily Made, but Does the Work Quickly.

The finest cough syrup that money can buy, costing only about one-fifth as much as ready-made preparations, can easily be made up at home. The way it takes hold and conquers distressing coughs, throat and chest colds will really make you enthusiastic about it.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth). Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Shake thoroughly and it is ready for use. The total cost is about 54 cents and gives you a full pint—a family supply—of a most effectual, pleasant tasting remedy.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, combined with guaiacol and is known the world over for its prompt healing effect on the throat membranes.

Avoid disappointments by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

"Thinness to Plumpness!"

Offers Great Reward to Thin, Anaemic, Bloodless Folks

Says Hypo-Nuclane Tablets Increases Weight Steadily—and Proves It.

A Philadelphia physician writes: "Having had occasion to observe the marked effect of Hypo-Nuclane Tablets on one of my patients, I would be grateful for all information and samples for clinical purposes."

The patient wrote: "Having been changed from terrible thinness to a lovely plumpness, right under the eyes of my skeptical physician, I told him that Hypo-Nuclane Tablets did it, and now he is deeply interested in your little tablets."

The process of increasing nutrition is intricate, but the results are well nigh certain. A salient extract from the yolk of eggs combined with hypophosphites, iron and simple vegetable tonics, when taken with the meals produce astounding changes, in nutritive processes and red blood with flesh-forming qualities soon bring the weight so much desired by thin, bloodless, anaemic people, young or old. One or two packages will prove it for anyone. Sold by druggists.—ADV.

Corns Peel Right Off Off With "Gets-It"

2 Drops, and the Corn is a "Goner!"

When you've got to walk on the sides of your shoe to get away from those awful corn pains, there's only one common-sense thing to do. Put 2 or 3 drops of "Gets-It" on the corn right away. Pain and inflammation will disappear, the corn will begin to shrivel from that instant—then it loosens and falls right off.

Use "Gets-It;" Your Corns Won't Swell in Water. Besides, They'll Shrivel, Loosen and Peel Off.

There's no other corn remover in the world that acts like "Gets-It." No new discovery has been made in corn removers since "Gets-It" was born. Don't forget that fact. "Gets-It" does away forever with the use of salves that irritate, bandages that make a bundle of your toe, plasters that half do the work, knives and scissors that draw blood. Use "Gets-It"—no more digging or cutting.

Sold in St. Louis and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., A. P. Bentz, Keiffer Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co.

Secrets of Health and Beauty

by Claire Ainsworth

"Envious" asks: "I am envious of every friend I have, and my trouble is perhaps foolish, but it preys on my happiness. I am 5 feet 5 inches in height, but only weigh 110 pounds. Is there any diet or medicine that will add 25 pounds?"

Answer: A very popular recipe is put up in tablet form, named alfalfex tablets, which is said to produce most decided increase in flesh. It is a concentrated extract of ordinary alfalfa plant, and compounded into alfalfex tablets, sold by apothecaries in sealed packets carrying full directions. We know that alfalfa fattens horses, cows, etc., so these tablets are surely effective.

"Velaska" says: "Have you yourself used wavolene, the preparation you so frequently recommend to keep the hair in curl or wave? And did you find it harmless?"

Answer: For more than three years I have never been without a bottle of wavolene on my dressing table. I use it once or twice a week. It is not only harmless and invisible, but improves the growth and luxuriance of the hair. It is the most valuable hairdressing I know of.

"A Couple" asks: "Both my husband and self are getting ridiculously too fleshy and we want to reduce. Will you tell us something to use?"

Answer: A widely used and most successful formula is that known as five-grain phy-thy-rin tablets, sold by druggists in sealed packages with directions. Many have reduced as much as 40 pounds safely, and with improved health.

"Blackheads" asks: "Please tell me if it is possible to banish blackheads and keep one's face clear and clean looking?"

Answer: By discontinuing the use of ordinary toilet soaps, and using emulsified oils, in the prepared form of glowene, you can soon have a clear skin. Ask your druggist to supply it in 25c tubes.

"A Mother" asks: "My children and self are badly afflicted with nasal and throat catarrh. I have had Pretzinger's Catarrh Balm recommended highly, but would like to know if it is harmless and effective."

Answer: Having had the good fortune to use it in my own family, I can gladly endorse it as probably the best on the market.

"Sarah C. R." asks: "I suppose I am like many others who want added blessings in this world. I have a good figure, but my bust is very flat, and I want your advice how to increase."

Answer: Regular and persistent massage, with a nourishing application of medicated venosol, will work miracles, as it were, in a few months. This is the only reliable preparation for the purpose that I know of.

"Mary" asks: "Please tell me what to use to remove superfluous hair—something that will not harm the skin?"

Answer: There are many good preparations for this, but of all I have tried I think fluvol powder is the best in every way. Druggists sell it in sealed vials. Directions tell how to use it.

"Neuralgia" asks: "I have severe neuralgia headache all too frequently. Can you suggest home treatment?"

Answer: A marvelous preparation called pine-o-latum quickly cures neuralgic headache. It is fine for sore throat, facial neuralgia and deep-seated chest colds. I think it comes in 25c and $1.00 sizes.

"Miriam" asks: "I have tried many greaseless creams, but none are satisfactory. What do you use?"

AMERICAN SINGERS SUPERIOR TO FOREIGN ARTISTS, SAYS M'CORMACK

Scala does not indicate that he can do more for us than we can do for ourselves. Here we are, the greatest organizers in business, putting our most important musical institution into the hands of foreigners. It is pure tradition and all wrong. It is what keeps up the humbug of foreign singers and denies the rightful places to our own. Some day there will be a change, and it will be a blessed day."

The question of bass singers came up and McCormack regretted that he had never heard Plancon. I suggested Carl Braun as a voice of finer emotion.

"A wonderfully beautiful voice, wonderful!" said the tenor. "It really is, when you think of it, one of the greatest of all voices, but Braun is going to tear it to ribbons if he keeps on Wotaning. It will happen surely. It is a shame."

Writehall Best Wotan He Knows.

"Have we a basso with a voice suited to Wotan?" I asked.

"Yes, we have. By the way, he is an American and a case in point. Clarence Whitehall is the best Wotan I know of. Indeed, he has everything a great opera singer should possess—voice, presence, histrionic ability. And yet where does he stand? He is not one of the great stars at the Metropolitan. Much lesser men get the preference, while he is out tanking in concert. It is an outrage, nothing less."

The tenor was as violent as his words.

"That isn't the only case, if it is the most conspicuous. There is another young American, Edward Johnson, a splendid singer, who has made a great success in Italy. The Metropolitan offered him an engagement in the usual way Americans are made offers, at less than he is getting in Italy. 'No, sir,' said he; 'why should I take less in my own country than abroad?' And he is right.

"The system here is all wrong. Women get on, even if they are Americans, but the men have a dreadful time, and so do many women. The favoritism, if there is any, should be on the side of the American singer, not be against him."

"We have talked of many things," I said, "and I must not detain you more."

And the great song-bird man was off in a flurry to take a train out West, where an audience was waiting to hear what it wants.

How rapidly McCormack has risen is shown by the fact that during the Louisiana Exposition in this city in 1904 he was a singer in the Irish Village at about $25 a week. He lost even this job. Today it is estimated that the Irish melodist's earnings are easily a quarter of a million dollars a season.

John McCormack was born at Athlone, Ireland, in 1884. After wining the first prize at the Dublin Musical Festival, when he was only 18, he was graduated from the Summer Hill College in County Sligo and went to Italy, where he spent two years studying under Sabatini. On his return he made his debut at Covent Garden as Turridu in "Cavalleria Rusticana" and afterward sang "Rigoletto" with Mme. Tetrazzini. His principal roles are Rodolfo in "La Boheme," "Faust," Pinkerton in "Madame Butterfly" and the Count in "Don Giovanni." But his greatest success has been the rendering of popular songs.

CANADIAN AIRMAN TELLS OF FIGHTING ON WESTERN FRONT

pilot of the big Rolls Royce which had been next to me was lifted, groaning, out of his seat. He and his observer had been badly scalded when the radiator of his machine was struck but they had fought it out and did not return until the last.

As I walked toward the aeredrome, the aerodrome, the machine which had been the other side of me glided to earth, but neither the pilot nor his observer got out. The observer was shot through the head and had been dead for half an hour. The pilot was hit in a dozen places, but he made a perfect landing, then keeled over—dead.

This borders on the miraculous, but it is not infrequent for a machine to come down with both occupants dead, for all the machines are equipped with stabilizers.

Some of the men were hungry. I was sleepy. I staggered over to my hut. The tuneless piano was still strumming in the mess hall, but I went to sleep for all of that.

CHICAGO LITTLE THEATER BROKE

CHICAGO, Feb. 24.—Maurice Browne and his little theater went into bankruptcy today. The debts are $15,000 and the assets dubious. The little theater was backed by lovers of the best in "high-brow" drama. But they failed to support Browne. Several women contributed from $2000 to $5000 each to save the enterprise but the money was lost.

Among the debts is $280 for tea served the patrons.

Runs Into Rear of Freight at Pacific, Mo., But Nobody Is Hurt.

The caboose was driven forward by the impact over a flat car loaded with three automobiles. The engineer jumped just before the collision. The passengers were shaken up, but nobody was hurt. Traffic was delayed two hours.

The Doctor's Advice

by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Elwood streets, Dayton, Ohio, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious names will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"Poor Nerves" writes: "Is it possible to find a medicine which by its tonic or nutritive powers will bring the glow of health and ambition back to a man who has everything in the world but health and happiness? I am dull, forgetful, despondent, weak, trembling, short of breath and suffer more or less with pain in spine and back of head."

Answer: Your condition indicates the need of a strong, harmless tonic nutritive to restore nerve equilibrium, which in turn fortifies and strengthens the organs of nutrition, thus vitalizing the blood and promoting new cell and tissue to take care of the waste forces. Three-grain cudomene tablets, packed in sealed tubes with full directions are recommended in all such cases.

* * *

Mrs. "Annie R." writes: "My husband is surely afflicted with some kidney disease. He has become weak and suffers with headache and pains in his back and groins. Pains are like rheumatism. His ankles swell and his feet seem to be tired all the time. Some days he has chills and no appetite. Please prescribe."

Answer: The symptoms indicate derangement of kidneys and should not be neglected. I would advise balmwort tablets, a compound well suited to such cases. Obtain in sealed tubes with directions for home use.

* * *

C. J. R. asks: "Can I safely reduce my weight, and how?"

Answer: Go to a well-stocked druggist and get five-grain arbolone tablets in sealed tube with complete directions. Take as directed and you should soon feel the relief you desire. Many of my patients report quick results without any harmful action whatever.

* * *

Miss Adele writes: "My hair is combing out, my scalp itches and dandruff is much annoying, and I want something to cure these conditions."

Answer: For hair and scalp troubles I have never found anything to equal the beneficial results of a thorough treatment of plain yellow minyol. It is cooling, cleansing and invigorating, and thousands now use it regularly as a hair and scalp tonic.

"Vanity" writes: "Two years ago I used your great prescription for kidney trouble and it wholly overcome the trouble. I want medicine now for constipation and impure blood, for I am a sight with pimples that make big lumpy sores."

Answer: I would advise the taking of three-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur) for several months to purify the system.

* * *

"Business" asks: "What is a good medicine to take for chronic liver disorder? I have tried calomel but it sickens me. Am bilious, constipated, dyspeptic, and have belching, bloating and sour risings after eating my meals. Also get so sleepy can hardly hold my eyes open."

Answer: Calomel is too drastic for any wise person to make use of. I have found the formula in cardiol tablets uniformly good for such ailments, especially where of long standing. These tablets are in sealed packages, with full directions, at drug stores.

* * *

Ellen J. asks: "Tell me, please, how I can increase my weight and improve my color. I seem to be aenemic, weak and tired all the time."

Answer: Begin taking three-grain hyponuclane tablets with your meals and soon you will feel your strength returning and gradually your weight and color will improve. This is a most effective remedy if persistently used.

* * *

"Ray" writes: "Can a sufferer from bronchial trouble be relieved? Doctors do not seem to help me, what would you suggest?"

Answer: To relieve chronic cold, sore throat, bronchitis, I would advise the use of concentrated essence mentho-laxene. Purchase this at any drug store in 2½-oz. packages and mix according to directions given on bottle, and you will very shortly be relieved of all bronchial trouble. This will not only relieve, but will correct, and is very pleasant to take.

* * *

J. K. C. writes: "I have a very stubborn chest cold, and cough dreadfully when I arise each morning. Please advise treatment?"

Answer: Get at 2½-oz. bottle of essence Mentho-laxene and use as per directions. To quickly relieve congestion or pain I know nothing so good as pine-olatum, applied locally once or more daily. It is a penetrating, soothing, healing ointment, noted for the quick relief it gives in such cases.

NOTE: For many years Dr. Baker has been giving free advice and prescriptions to millions of people through the press columns, and doubtless has helped in relieving ills and distress more than any single individual in the world's history. Thousands have written him expressions of gratitude and confidence.—ADVERTISEMENT.

TODAY'S BEAUTY HINT

It is not necessary to shampoo your hair so frequently if it is entirely and properly cleansed each time by the use of a really good shampoo. The easiest to use and quickest drying shampoo that we can recommend to our readers is one that brings out all the natural beauty of the hair and may be enjoyed at very little expense, by dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox, which can be obtained from any druggist, in a cup of hot water. This makes a full cup of shampoo liquid, enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. This when rubbed into the scalp and onto every strand of hair, chemically dissolves all impurities. It is very soothing and cooling in its action, as well as beneficial to both scalp and hair. After rinsing out the lather so created, you will find the scalp is fresh, clean and free from dandruff, while the hair dries quickly and evenly, developing a bright luster and a soft fluffiness that makes it seem very heavy.—ADV.

During 1916 the Post-Dispatch printed 4710 Classified Instruction Want Ads, 2880 more than the four other St. Louis newspapers combined printed during the same period.

Two Hurt When Patrol Overturns.

DON'T STAY GRAY! SAGE TEA WILL DARKEN YOUR HAIR JUST BEAUTIFULLY

A Mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur Prevents Dandruff and Falling Hair—Comb or Brush it Through the Hair.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur no one can tell because it's done so naturally; so evenly. It is also splendid to remove dandruff, cure itching scalp and stop falling hair.

Preparing this mixture though, at home is a mussy and troublesome task. For about 50 cents a bottle you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." Some druggists put this mixture up themselves, but make it too sticky, so insist you want "Wyeth's," then there will be no disappointment.

You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Do this at night and by morning all gray hair disappears and after another application or two becomes beautifully darkened and more glossy and luxuriant than ever. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and you'll look years younger. Inquiry shows all pharmacists in town here sell lots of it.—ADV.

Why do doctors recommend PLUTO water

America's Physic

THE physician knows better than anyone that constipation is the root of many ailments of the human system. He knows it is the forerunner of auto-intoxication and premature old age. An active, regular digestive and eliminative system is the best insurance against poor health.

The physician of wide experience knows that PLUTO Water, America's Physic, is Nature's own remedy for constipation—either occasional or chronic—and a wonderfully helpful curative agent in the treatment of kidney, liver and stomach troubles, rheumatism and nervous disorders. He knows it is bottled at French Lick Springs, the garden spot of health, and has the same curative properties that make these springs the haven of thousands of health-seekers each year.

ST. LOUIS TO HAVE CENTER OF FOLK DANCE SOCIETY

Well Known Women Organize Branch Here and Will Bring Cecil Sharp to St. Louis.

Under the auspices of Mrs. Lawrence Post and a number of other well-known St. Louis society women the St. Louis Center of the English Folk Dance Society has been organized and arrangements have been made to start classes in that style of dancing for the general public early in March.

There are branches of the society now in New York, Pittsburg and Boston and one is soon to be formed in Chicago. The society conducts summer schools for folk dancing in Stratford-on-Avon and at Elliott, Me.

The work here is to be in charge of Cecil J. Sharp, the best-known exponent of the Morris dance, who was brought to St. Louis to stage the dances in conjunction with the Shakspearean celebration in Forest Park last summer.

Sharp and his assistant, Miss Maud Karpeles, will arrive here March 6. The dancing is to be conducted during the week of March 12.

COUNTY TAX COLLECTION PLANS

No Money Will Be Accepted Week, Beginning March 1.

Albert A. Wilmes, Collector of the Revenue for St. Louis County, says no taxes will be accepted between March 1 and May 7 because the County Clerk will be using the books to prepare the delinquent tax lists. The interest penalty charge, however, will go on, increasing 1 per cent each month. About 80 per cent of the taxes have been collected.

The 9 cents on each $100 valuation collected for interest and the sinking fund to pay off the $520,000 road bonds issued this year will be put in bank until the United States Supreme Court decides the road bond litigation, which may not be for one to three years. The amount collected to and including Jan. 31 was $50,565.61. It is expected that about $2000 more will be collected.

CINERARIAS AT SHAW'S GARDEN

Among Flowers to Be Shown at March Display, Opening Tomorrow.

The March floral display of the Missouri Botanical Garden will be open to the public Monday, and will continue throughout the month. It is composed of cinerarias, English stocks, marguerties, spireas and azeleas.

The cinerarias are the most brilliant in coloring of all flowers. It is one of the best blooming plants for home decoration. The floriculturists at the Garden have been experimenting with the cineraria, and have created a number of new hybrid varieties of exceptional beauty, color and size. Many of these are being shown for the first time.

KREISLER TO PLAY HERE FRIDAY NIGHT

Noted Belgian Violinist's Second Concert of the Season in St. Louis.

Fritz Kreisler will give his second violin recital of the season here at the Odeon Friday evening. His other appearance here was Nov. 30.

For his recital of Friday evening, the Vivaldi Concerto in C major will be played. This was the opening number of the Kreisler concert of three years ago and it has not been given in the interim. Ysaye, too, has a fondness for Vivaldi and on his recent visit here played the Vivaldi Concerto in G Minor with orchestra and organ.

For his second number, Kreisler has chosen Concerto No. 2 in F sharp minor by Vieuxtemps. Then follows a group-melody, Gluck; Allegretto, Boccherini; Larghetto, Weber; Moment Musical, Schubert; Rondo, Mozart. For the fourth number is another group, Two Slavonic Dances, by Dvorak-Kreisler; The Old Refrain (Viennese popular song), arranged by Kreisler, and 24th Caprice, by Paganini.

The Two Slavonic Dances mentioned in this group have not appeared on any violin program here in the past. This is an open week for the Symphony Society here.

ITALY RETURNS TO USE OF CHARCOAL DUST FOR HEATING

Coal at $60 a Ton Too Costly for Households and Even Business Offices.

ROME, Feb. 24.—With coal selling at $60 a ton and the Government gradually taking over all existing supplies and prohibiting its use by hotels and boarding houses, and with gas and electricity dear or the supply reduced, Italian households and business offices have had to revert to the ancient method of burning finely powdered wood charcoal dust in a two-gallon earthen jar.

The jar is filled half full of charcoal dust, placed in the open air or near an open window and some live coals of wood or charcoal put in the center of the dust. Slow combustion is started and gradually the entire surface of the dust burns to ashes while the smoldering fire reaches downward. When, after 12 hours, no more smoke or little gas is given off, the heated jar is placed in the cold room and let stay there for 24 hours, after which a fresh layer of dust is placed in the jar and the process repeated.

LEADERS FOR PREPAREDNESS TO BE INVITED TO MEETING HERE

Many Educators Expected at Conference of Colleges and High Schools on Training Camps.

Gen. Leonard Wood, Gen. Luke E. Wright, Admiral Peary and other advocates of preparedness will be invited to attend the National Conference of Colleges and High Schools on Military Training Camps, to be held in St. Louis March 23, 24 and 25.

Secretary Hatfield of the Convention and Publicity Bureau returned yesterday from Chicago, where he held a conference with Wharton Clay, executive secretary of the Military Training Camps Association of the United States, to arrange for the school meeting.

The principals of all high schools in the United States will be invited to the conference and each school will be asked to send one of its students. The headquarters of the association will be at the Missouri Athletic Association. It is expected that many prominent educators will attend.

RAWHIDE FOR UNRULY BOYS IS ADVISED BY JUDGE HOGAN

Two Youths Accused of Disturbance at Night School Are Released on Probation.

Two boys in police court yesterday on charges of creating a disturbance Friday night at the night session of the Shaw public school heard Judge Hogan advise their principal, James R. Benson, that an old-fashioned rawhide whip was the best thing to subdue unruly boys. The boys were William L. Huff, 18 years old, of 2623 Clifton avenue, and Bedrick K. Schumacher, 18, of 6285 Reber place.

"Humanitarian methods are all right for girls," Judge Hogan asserted, "but the best thing for boys is a good rawhide. When I was teaching school in 1903 I had eight unruly boys. I got four nice rawhides and waylaid them one morning. After that they were the best behaved boys in school."

The Judge released the boys on probation.

WEAKENED CAFE WALL BRACED

No Danger of Further Collapse at Melsheimer's, McKelvey Says.

Building Commissioner McKelvey yesterday said there was no danger of a further collapse of the west wall of Melsheimer's Cafe at 311 Pine street.

Many persons, since the collapse of a part of the wall last Thursday have been apprehensive there might be danger to passersby and to patrons of a lunch room directly across the alley.

McKelvey said the break in the wall was due to the weakening of one iron girder in a fire about three weeks ago. Since then, he said the wall had been properly braced under his direction. The owners have been notified to rebuild the wall.

ARABELLA GOES TO MARKET.

MISS ARABELLA SIMPKINS BROWN said she would do the shopping;
And so she took the basket down and off she went a-hopping.
She only had to buy the meat and things for Sunday dinner
And when she ambled down the street you'd note she was a winner.
It seemed a very easy task to do the Sabbath buying,
What softer errand could she ask when forenoon hours were flying.
Why, just a bit of meat to buy and things to give it flavor;
She coyly winked her little eye and thought the chance a favor.
With all the innocence of youth a butcher shop she entered,
The butcher smiled his broadest smile, and it was truly nifty,
Then dallied with the scale awhile and said "a dollar-fifty."
Which made Miss Arabella sigh, for though she was no scholar,
She knew she'd be a trifle shy with just her little dollar.
Now Arabella Simpkins Brown will no more go a-hopping
And take the market basket down to do the Sunday shopping.
She finds the prices all too high for genuine elation,
Which makes it no delight to buy with gleeful animation.
So mother takes the basket now and does the Sunday shopping,
A task which you must all allow will keep Dear Mamma hopping.

THAT CAR SHORTAGE.

WELL, here we are,
But where's a car?
They've all been short so long
That we who ship
Have got the pip
And sing a doleful song.

(Double quartet of freight agents.)

THE Santa Fe had a car last week
Accordng to a rumor,
But when that car we went to seek
We found it was a bloomer.

(Enter Committee on Everything.)

WE'RE on the track, we're on the track
Of that naughty old embargo
That's holding all your shipments back,
From Kankakee to Fargo.
If that embargo we could whack,
Then out would go your cargo.

(Committee on Something Else dances on.)

TO us it seems that a sad misuse
Of equipment has caused the trouble,
And this with shipping has played the deuce
And made your worries double.

(Shippers, dolefully.)

YOU tell us this and tell us that;
It's really quite consoling,
But you, like Casey at the bat,
Can't keep the ball a-rolling.

(Flourish of trumpets, Enter Committee on Things in General.)

JUST listen to us and you may learn
Why freight car wheels refuse to turn.

(Shippers cheer up.)

We'll dance a merry measure.
Our cares will all be gone by night,
And then—sing ho, for pleasure.

(Committee, impressively.)

THE reason shipments don't go out
We find beyond a question,
Or any shadow of a doubt—
It's due to freight congestion.

(Chamber of Commerce Glee Club.)

WE'D never, never thought of that;
Your wisdom is astounding.
Each one of you beneath his hat
Must feel his brain a-pounding.
Come over to our office quick
And have a little meeting,
For we're the boys to turn the trick,
And that's no verbal cheating.

(Shippers dance.)

OUR hope shall be
In the C. of C.,
Formerly B. M. L.
Congestion will flee
To the highest tree
Before its magic spell.

(All go out. End of Scene I.)

(Scene II. Outside the Cave of the Winds. Citizens and Seekers after News.)

WE wait without
As the cars are doing,
Beyond a doubt
There's something brewing.

(Factotum emerges.)

I'll tell you four words consecutive;
The meeting was executive.

(Committee on Publicity.)

AMEN, amen; that's all we can say,
Though we think beyond a question
The failure of cars to get under way

(Curtain.)

"MORNING, Binks."

"I can't see you, Jinks."

"My, you must have bought a limousine at the automobile show."

"Worse than that."

"What do you mean?"

"I bought the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain at the receiver's sale."

"O, you never can tell."

"Are you trying to console me?"

"Sure. Eight years ago next Tuesday my brother bought one.

"Did he?"

"Yes. And he held on to it."

"Well?"

"Now they're worth 80 cents a dozen."

"Are you trying to insinuate that I bought a lemon?"

"Of course not. Oranges are dear, too, aren't they.

"You think you're smart."

"Not at all."

"As a matter of fact I think it's a great thing for a big railroad to get out of the hands of the receivers."

"You're right."

"Sure. The traveling public and the shippers are interested in the upbuilding of these great properties."

"Now, you're talking."

"You bet. I'm for the railroads."

"How do you ship your goods?"

"Down the river on a steamboat."

"Where do you go for your vacation?"

"Up the river on a steamboat."

A LOOK AROUND

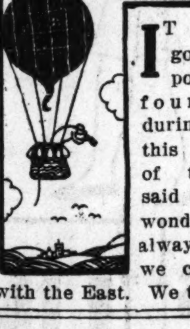
BY

CLARK McADAMS



IT is said that Tagore, the Hindu poet, made a profound impression during his tour of this country. Some of the things he said made people wonder—just as we always wonder when we come in contact with the East. We think of the East as a part of the world now far outdistanced—but is it? Some time ago an Afghan prince said of the war that in Asia they regarded it is being merely the spectacle of a passing civilization. It is not surprising Asia, which has felt all the time that her own civilization ultimately shall prevail. All others are to her ephemeral. She merely peers out of the great past and sees what she sees. As to the end of it all, or what it shall be, Asia should worry. Tagore's audiences felt something of that. The calm and wisdom of age addressed the impetuousness and folly of youth. It is probably significant that Tagore abandoned his tour and went home after getting as far as Chicago. He had little to say. He only looked bored and homesick.

The Polite Brazilian.

BRAZIL had the grace and refinement to select Washington's Birthday as the proper time to announce the genuineness of Col. Roosevelt's claim to have discovered the River of Doubt, now officially mapped as the Rio Roosevelt. We like that. It is not trade that is to bring the Americas together, but the rudeness of this continent finally yielding to the superb manners of that which lies across the equator. A profound philosopher has said that good manners shall conquer the earth. We have signally failed in every attempt we have made to conquer South America with anything else; but that South America shall fail to conquer us—that is not probable.

Bone Dry and Bone Dust.

THE bone dust will begin to blow in the bone dry states in a little while. Whether that is what those states want, one cannot say. The white man in the South who has voted dry to keep the black man from getting liquor has never had to choose between his own morning's morning and the juice of a grapefruit—but he must do so now. It is, though, barely possible that the only people who would not welcome a chance to give up liquor are the people who sell it. This seems to have been established with such certainty from time to time that it may fairly be said to lie at the bottom of the prohibition movement. Much more is thought of that personal liberty which enables one to sell it than of the privilege of buying it. Nothing is plainer than that, unless it is that the cranks, sodapops, hatpassing reformers and all that hodgepodge of creation which was howling for prohibition when nobody cared what they were saying, have really nothing to do with the dry movement.

What Lost California.

HAVING explained with such painstaking how the Republicans lost California, there is no reason why Collier's should not print a series of such stories and tell us truly how Kansas, Utah and many another Republican state was lost to Hughes. That there was some exceptional reason why California went as the West went is no likelier than that there were exceptional reasons why some of the other states went as California did. Hughes lost as much in Ohio, in truth, as in California—yet Collier's is not printing the story of that political accident. We suggest that Collier's wake up. The political pleiocene age of which it is itself a part is ended, and its dinosaurs are done for. That the diplodocian editorial should survive is an anachronism, and the sooner the antiquary slaps it into a show case, the better for both the country and its museums.

Explaining Frank Farris.

FRANK FARRIS owes his sway over the House of Representatives at Jefferson City to no fictitious value. The House is not a body in which the average member is sure of himself parliamentarily. He has never browsed in "Roberts' Rules of Order" to any great extent, nor did he qualify for membership by memorizing chapters from that classic, as one does in the Wednesday Club. There are many kinds of boobs, but of these the parliamentary boob is easily first. An adroit and experienced parliamentarian, Farris is the logical leader of the Democratic side. The Republicans are fortunate to have a floor leader who can cope with him at all. Usually they do not. It is in Farris that the unskilled parliamentarians of his party, who are never quite sure whether they are in or out of order, have their common defense.

World Without End.

THE National Geographic Society informs us that world is still making in the Alaskan Peninsular waters. We are only mildly interested. It was an awful bang, no doubt, which tore Mt. Katmai to pieces and pushed the sea back from the flat for a considerable radius around, but there is so much war and blodshed over the world as it is that we shudder to think of it being made any larger. It is not going to do us any good to organize peace leagues and the like if Atlantis is to be thrown up in a night for the Powers to fight over. Let us preserve the geological status quo, anyway.

TECHNICAL SCHOOL WANTS FUND

Campaign Here to Raise Money for Rose Polytechnic Institute.

A campaign to raise a building fund for Rose Polytechnic Institute, Terre Haute, Ind., has been extended to St. Louis. "Rose Poly," which is one of the oldest technical schools in the United States, and has graduates in nearly every state, must have new buildings by the summer of 1919, as its present buildings have been sold to the city of Terre Haute for public school uses, the sale to take effect at that time.

Limits, Also, Placed on Consumption of Eggs, Milk, Butter and Pastry.

BERNE, Feb. 24.—The Bundesrat announced this afternoon the long-awaited restriction of food distribution whereby Switzerland will have henceforth two meatless days weekly, must do without whipped cream and other similar dishes and must limit its egg consumption. The regulations regarding meat prescribe that on two days a week the use of beef, pork, goat meat, mutton and horse meat is forbidden in hotels, restaurants and private houses. No one is exempt, but restaurants are permitted to serve liver, kidney, brains, heart, lungs and sausages made from any of the foregoing.

Only one meat and one egg dish may be served to a guest. Butter may be served only at a breakfast or at meals at which no meat or egg dishes are supplied and may no longer be used with cheese. The use of eggs in making pastry is also prohibited.

MUNITION MAKERS GOUGING U. S. FOR WAR SUPPLIES

Navy Cost Sheets Show Several Commodities Have Doubled in Price.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—Navy Department's cost sheets for the last three years tend to establish the fact that American munition makers are gouging this Government just as hard as they are holding up belligerent Governments.

An investigation by the Post-Dispatch correspondent appears to show only one difference between the methods applied to the American Government and the Governments of the entente allies. European Governments are being compelled to accept a class of commodity which American inspectors flatly decline to accept because it is not up to the standard.

The Navy Department is aghast at the prospect of the United States being forced into the European war, because officials believe the munitions barons will gather in the greatest harvest in the world's history by gouging the Government for still greater profits.

The Department already has prepared tentative plans as a war measure to take over every factory in the country from which the Government gets large amounts of supplies, and to regulate the prices by adding a fair net profit to the actual cost of production.

Price Uppermost Question.

While the department does not doubt the patriotism of many firms which have offered their properties for Government use in the event of war, Secretary Daniels has reason for believing that some of the great financial groups want an officer in charge of the plant for patriotic reasons, while keeping their own experts in charge of the bookkeeping offices.

The Navy Department does not doubt the ability of American firms to produce the goods faster than any other groups in the world. The price is the question uppermost in the minds of officers.

Two of the principal types of munitions which have not been jumped up are powder and armor. Powder in 1913 was purchased for 53 cents. Today it is selling for 50 cents. The reason given by experts at the navy is that the Government has its own powder facilities and cannot be gouged.

Armor used on battleships sold at $440 a ton in 1913. It is selling today at $425. The reduction is believed by navy officers to be ascribed to the fact that the Navy Department has taken steps to build its own plant.

The same company which held the price on almost normal basis when it became likely that the navy would have its own plant, jumped 14-inch projectiles from $315 each to almost double that price. After the Government had a contract from Hadfields, Ltd., a British concern, to make the shells for $336, the American factories consented to bring their prices down to $500 net.

Here are more samples of commodities used in large quantities in construction of ships or the maintenance of navy yards that have jumped in price:

Five-inch powder tanks which sold for $11.79 in 1915 are now selling at $15.74.

Five-inch common projectiles sold at $8.56 in 1913; at $13 in 1915, and the present price is $13.35.

Fourteen-inch castings which sold for 4 cents a pound in 1913, are now selling for 10 and a fraction.

Structural steel has increased from $43 to $140 per ton.

Boilers have been increased from 65 to 75 per cent; piping and piping materials from 40 to 100 per cent; generators, air compressors and power plant equipment from 65 to 85 per cent; electric cable from 55 to 65 per cent.

In 1914 nine ship-building cranes were purchased for use in the Philadelphia and Boston yards at prices ranging from $9645 to $9755. In June, 1915, $10,053 was paid for the same type of crane. In January, 1916, the price jumped to $11,745. During the next six months the price jumped to $20,185 and last December the same company asked the Department $24,496 for precisely the same type of crane. In other words, the prices jumped 250 per cent. The crane companies insist that the cost may be traced to the high price of steel.

Floating Crane Price Doubles.

In May, 1916, the Norfolk navy yard was supplied with a floating crane for $357,744. Of this sum $142,216 was charged against a steel pontoon and $215,578 was charged against machinery. In December, 1916, the same crane was reproduced for the Mare Island at a round price of $750,000. In this estimate the pontoon was figured at $270,000 and the machinery at $480,000.

Fifty dock cranes were bought for the New York yard in 1913 at $47,950. In December, 1916, the same cranes were reproduced for the Pearl Harbor yard at $94,852.

In the last year the Navy Department has been informed that certain American manufacturers have become greatly irritated because Russian inspectors in some cases have turned down approximately 80 per cent of the supplies offered for inspection because they were far below the standard.

The quantity turned down reached such proportions that the Navy Department received private reports from some of the plants that Russia undoubtedly was preparing a separate peace and was using the excuse of poor quality to dodge contracts for material that would be of little value after she withdrew from the war. When navy officers made investigation they soon became satisfied that the inspectors were merely trying to get good supplies.

While the Navy Department has no particular interest in the situation so far as it affects belligerents, well-informed officers believe that some of the American financiers who pose as being of almost as much importance as the Government itself are actually doing tremendous damage to American business reputations in foreign countries.

These officers insist that while the gentlemen from Wall street and thereabouts are taking fabulous fortunes from "war brides," they should at least give the European nations the goods for which unprecedented prices are being paid. Navy officers have reported that some of the supplies sent to Europe are so poor that American goods have become synonymous with worthless goods.

For this reason it is believed that when the war is over and European Governments check up their accounts with American financiers they will immediately take steps to thwart exports from this country. In other words, army and navy officers fear that the few who are now taking the cream from "war brides" are building up a wall against legitimate American trade instead of boosting American goods.

Tells Convalescent Men How to Become Strong

ENDORSES TREATMENT FOR "STARVED NERVES."

Is Equally Good for Man or Woman Who May Be Thus Afflicted.

Three-Grain Cadomene Tablets is a combination of ingredients—a physician's discovery in compounding—not a common so-called "patent medicine," because the formula of ingredients is printed on the label, and you know before taking that there is no dangerous stimulants or narcotics to further lessen your vitality.

A powerful vitalizing tonic effect is what you receive in benefits when you take Cadomene Tablets. They work to aid the forces of nature, surely and with ever-increasing efficiency.

The starved nerves are supplied with nutritive elements which results in bodily health and strength and a corresponding improvement in the mental and moral stamina. You may doubt the benefits you will receive, before you take Cadomene Tablets, but you will feel and recognize these great benefits, even from the use of one package, or they will cost you nothing. Even this "doubt" is a symptom unless it is based on reason. Search your mind for a "reason to doubt" and you will fail to find such a reason. Cadomene Tablets are designed to help you and they will do so. They will enable your system to supply plenty of pep, and energy to fulfill your every ambition and hope. Take them and feel the "ginger" of normal strength coursing through your blood, and realize the power of strong, well-nourished nerves.

MEN WHO ARE suffering from la grippe, from overwork, from nervous-indigestion, sleeplessness, poor circulation, cold hands and feet, neuralgic and rheumatic pains, aching of the back, joints, head and limbs, all find the acme of benefit in Cadomene Tablets. Their tonic, invigorating effect is superior and lasting compared with alcoholic tonics which are really false stimulants.

WHEN A WOMAN becomes weak, nervous, hysterical, always tired or irritable, she, too, is a victim of "starved nerves," and three-grain Cadomene Tablets, taken at such periods are an invaluable aid to the nervous system, creating by their tonic properties better digestion, better nutrition and consequently strength, vivacity, endurance and cheerfulness results, much to the happiness of the entire household. Irritability is usually bad nerves. Cadomene Tablets help to mend the nerves and make them "good." Get them from your druggist in original sealed tubes.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Insurance Company Official Says 60,000 Die Annually From Preventable Kidney Disorders

The alarming death rate from kidney disorders may be reduced by prompt attention to affected kindeys.

A prominent life insurance company, from abundant statistics, show that fully 100,000 Americans die annually from kidney diseases. Since fully 60%, or sixty thousand, of these fatalities could be prevented or postponed for years if the presence of kidney diseases were discovered in its early stages, it is high time that everyone should take an interest in the health of their kidneys. Now the kidneys work day and night to protect the blood and body from an ever-increasing quantity of poisonous substances. They perform their function of filtration faithfully and persistently, even after they have begun to degenerate from lack of attention. Yet the breaking down of the kidneys usually occurs without warning to the individual for whom they toil. This is why the use of a dependable medicine like Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy should be selected for the treatment of kidney disorders. It soothes and benefits these delicate organs, and has a direct action on the circulation. With better circulation, the perspiratory glands become active, which eliminates some of the products of combustion by way of the skin also. In this way Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy, not only helps prevent the early stages of kidney diseases, but it is a wonderful remedy for the advanced stages of dropsy, lumbago and Bright's disease. And yet, Warner's is no experiment of today, but is one of the safest remedies for the kidneys and has been a blessing to thousands of sufferers for the last 40 years.

"I wish to say that your remedies have been used in our family for about fifteen years. We are never without a bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy in our home, and it has saved many a doctor's bill. It is a wonderful medicine for all diseases of the kidneys and liver."—Florence E. Schmidt, R. F. D., No. 1, Dunkirk, O.

For sale by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., and all leading druggists, 50c and $1.00. Free sample if you write, Warner's Safe Remedies Co., Dept. 245, Rochester, N. Y.

Your Spring Suit: Smartly Made and Moderately Priced

$19.75 and $24.75

Possibly you have been wondering just how much a good Spring Suit would cost you. Good woolens, you have been told, have gone higher; and materials of all kinds have advanced in price, but—

In this case, a quantity purchase has helped to solve the problem. We started out to get two distinct assortments of thoroughly good Suits to offer at $19.75 and $24.75, respectively, and we found that a much larger purchase than usual would be necessary, so we made the purchase, and a careful comparison of values will indicate how much superior these Suits are to the usual groups at $19.75 and $24.75.

There are plainly tailored styles, box-plaited Norfolks and swagger little pinch-backs. Many have silk collars and cuffs and novelty wool stitching; and the skirts are plainly tailored or pleated in graceful fashion.

As for materials—none of the better fabrics have been omitted. Serviceable serges, substantial poplins, fashionable gabardines, smart worsted checks are abundantly provided, and the colors are inclusive of everything from the staple black to the Summery green and the softer gray.

There are all sizes for women and misses, and the opportunity is worthy of the consideration of every woman who wants a well-made smartly-fashioned Suit at a moderate price. Early choosing is advisable.

—And the Coats Are Priced Just as Low

The one prevailing idea is the long, loose, roomy coat. This style is varied in a large measure by the use of the belt, the pleated panels, and the high and normal waistlines. Many quaint little features are emphasized in various ways—pockets, for example—yokes, and rippling collars, of brightly colored silks.

Checks and mixtures rank high in favor, but there is the usual variety of staple serges, gabardines, poplins and tweeds. The new shades are as colorful as a bright Spring day, but in the ever-wanted blue and black there is a guarantee of service that many women never overlook.

All sizes for women and misses in the two special groups at............$19.75 and $24.75

Mother, Why Don't You Take Nuxated Iron

And Be Strong and Well and Have Nice Rosy Cheeks Instead of Being Nervous and Irritable All the Time and Looking So Haggard and Old?—The Doctor Gave Some to Susie Smith's Mother and She Was Worse Off Than You Are and Now She Looks Just Fine.

NUXATED IRON WILL INCREASE THE STRENGTH AND ENDURANCE OF WEAK, NERVOUS, CAREWORN, HAGGARD LOOKING WOMEN 200 PER CENT IN TWO WEEKS' TIME IN MANY INSTANCES.

THE CHILD'S APPEAL

"There can be no Beautiful, Healthy Rosy Cheeked women without Iron."
F. KING, M. D.

"There can be no healthy, beautiful, rosy-cheeked women without iron," says Dr. Ferdinand King, a New York physician and author. "In my recent talks to physicians on the grave and serious consequences of iron deficiency in the blood of American women I have strongly emphasized the fact that doctors should prescribe more organic iron—nuxated iron—for their nervous, rundown, weak, haggard-looking women patients. Pallor means anaemia. The skin of the anaemic woman is pale, the flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, the brain fags and the memory fails, and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks.

"In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated cornmeal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the wastepipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked, are responsible for another grave iron loss.

"Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful health and strength to a ripe old age you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt.

"As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is the greatest of all strength-builders. If people would only throw away habit-forming drugs and nauseous concoctions and take simple nuxated iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of people might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver, heart trouble, etc. The real and true cause which started their disease was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood.

"On account of the peculiar nature of woman, and the great drain placed upon her, she requires iron much more than man.

"Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day and after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while double their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by Mother Nature for the red coloring matter in the blood of her children is alas! not that kind of iron. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. I have used Nuxated Iron widely in my own practice in most severe aggravated conditions with unfailing results. I have induced many other physicians to give it a trial, all of whom have given me most surprising reports in regard to its great power as a health and strength builder.

"Many an athlete and prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray; while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron."

Dr. Howard James, late of the United States Public Health Service, said: "I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication, as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But so many American women suffer from iron deficiency with its attendant ills—physical weakness, nervous irritability, melancholy, indigestion, flabby, sagging muscles, etc.—and in consequence of their weakened, run-down condition they are so liable to contract serious and even fatal diseases that I deem it my duty to advise all such to take Nuxated Iron. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength and power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine or secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians both in Europe and America. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed in this city by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Drug Co., Keiffer Drug Co., and all good druggists.
—ADVERTISEMENT.

You can tell the women with plenty of iron in their blood—beautiful healthy, rosy-cheeked women full of Life, Vim and Vitality

Dr. Ferdinand King, New York physician and author, tells physicians that they should prescribe more organic iron—Nuxated Iron—for their patients—Says anaemia—iron deficiency—is the greatest curse to the health, strength, vitality and beauty of the modern American Woman.—Sounds warning against use of metallic iron which may injure the teeth, corrode the stomach and do far more harm than good; advises use of only nuxated iron.

MISSIONARIES TO SPEAK TODAY IN ST. LOUIS PULPITS

Presbyterians Also Will Have Four Days of Conferences on Subject of Missions.

Missionaries of the Presbyterian Church in several foreign countries, and officials of the church's missionary boards, will speak in St. Louis churches today, with the missionary work as their theme. These addresses will be followed by four days of special meetings and foncerences here, on the same subject.

The missionaries to speak at the various Presbyterian churches, at morning and night, the morning engagement being in each case given first, are:

Rev. Dr. G. W. Dunlap, Philippine Islands, Tyler place and Curby Memorial; Dr. J. W. McKean, Siam, Webster Groves; F. G. Coan, Persia, First and Oak Hill; Rev. S. M. Jordan, Washington and Compton, Webster Groves at 4 p. m., and Ferguson; C. H. Corbett, China, Kirkwood and East Grand.

Board Officials Will Speak.

Other pulpit engagements will be filled by officials of the mission boards, who have headquarters in New York. Herbert K. Caskey, executive secretary of the party of speakers, will speak at St. Charles this morning, and before the Negro Y. M. H. A., at 2707 Lawton street, at 4 p. m.

Robert E. Speer, a noted lay worker for missions, will arrive tomorrow and will take part in the meetings of the remaining days.

Dr. Dunlap, who is in charge of the Presbyterian work in the southern part of the Philippines, is a former college athlete, from Coe College, Ia., and played professional ball with the Ottumwa team. He declined an offer to join the Pittsburg Pirates when he entered missionary work. In the Philippines, he has used baseball as the chief adjunct to his work.

In Cebu he introduced the national game as a substitute for cock fighting, and he says the latter sport has now nearly disappeared, while even the Mohammedan Moros are learning baseball. Soccer and track athletics have also gained a foothold, and the winners of an all-Philippine athletic meet are soon to go to Tokio for the third annual Eastern Olympiad.

Filipons Play With Enthusiasm.

Dr. Dunlap says the Filipinos play the game with enthusiasm, but accept the umpire's decisions more readily than some American players do. He had difficulty in teaching the players the necessity for using their hands in putting base runners out. They seemed to think that it sufficed to touch the runner with their feet, a practice which tended to roughness.

The Filipinos, Dr. Dunlap says, are better satisfied with their present measure of self-government than they have ever been before under American rule. They realize, he said, that the advancement of the islands under American rule has been far greater than would otherwise have been possible. He mentioned the coinage, postal service, justice, roads, and above all the school system, as important parts of the American work in the Philippines. More than 610,000 children are now receiving instruction in the public schools, and this instruction, because of the multiplicity of native dialects, is given wholly in English.

MRS. BUDKE ASKS FOR DIVORCE, ALIMONY AND CHILD'S CUSTODY

Says Husband Denied Her Visits by Friends, Diversion of Any Sort and Clothing.

Mrs. Mae Spring Budke yesterday filed suit to divorce Conrad Budke Jr., a son of Conrad Budke of 7 Princeton avenue, University City, president of the Nelson Chesman & Co. advertising firm.

The couple were married Sept. 24, 1914, and separated Dec. 5 last, when they were living at 6251 Delmar boulevard. She asks for custody of a child, Conrad Budke III, 16 months old, and for alimony.

Mrs. Budke, who is living at the home of her mother, Mrs. L. F. Spring, 5838 Westminster place, alleges that for 18 months after she and Budke were married they lived at the home of his parents and that he refused to permit her to have any of her friends visit there; that he seldom took her to entertainments, nor did he provide diversion for her in other ways. She also says that members of his family would go for days without speaking to her and would treat her with indifference.

Mrs. Budke says that although her husband was earning a fair salary as secretary of the advertising company, he failed to provide her with either clothing or money, but always provided expensive clothing for himself.

BIG INCREASE SHOWN IN VALUE OF EXPORTS FROM NEW YORK

In January of This Year They Were Worth $231,000,000 More Than in January, 1916.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Exports of domestic merchandise on ships leaving New York last January increased in value by more than $231,000,000 over the exports in January, 1916, according to figures made public here today by the Collector of Customs. The merchandise sent out last month amounted to about $302,136,000. The trade with every other continent and with all countries and islands of North America increased.

The greatest gain was with Europe, $105,749,000. Trade with Japan decreased by more than $500,000, and with the Philippines by more than $200,000. No exports were sent to Germany as compared with $48,000 worth in January of 1916. Trade with Canada was more than doubled and with Belgium it nearly quadrupled. Marked increases are shown with all the South American republics, while to some of the countries in Africa there were decreases.

Constipation Makes You Dizzy, Bilious

That bilious, dizzy, headachy feeling that brings with it coated tongue, foul breath and sallow, pasty skin can be banished clean out of your life in half an hour by taking a wineglassful of Tollo Water before breakfast. It quickly but gently flushes and washes the stomach and bowels, leaving them sweet and clean. It also washes out the bile tubes of the liver and puts it to work again.

Don't dose yourself with drugs and oils, but let this wonderful product of Nature from Dawson Springs, Kentucky, restore your good health. Go to the druggist today and get a 15-cent bottle and take a third of a tumblerful in a glass of plain water before breakfast tomorrow morning. Take it every morning for a few days until the poison the system has absorbed from waste in the bowels has been removed. After that an occasional wineglassful will keep your bowels regular, your liver clean and active and your stomach ready to digest anything you eat.—ADVERTISEMENT.

L. F. HAMMER CELEBRATES 83D BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY

Family Gathering at His Home, Where Weekly Reunions Are Held.

The family of L. F. Hammer, founder of the Hammer Dry Plate Co., gathered yesterday at his home, 2007 Sidney street, to celebrate his eighty-third birthday anniversary. Despite his age, Hammer is vigorous and still the active head of the company which bears his name, considered the largest independent dry plate manufactory in the world.

His wife died in 1907 and his son, L. F. Hammer Jr., who was formerly City Collector, died in 1913. Three sons and four daughters remain. These are H. W. Hammer, vice president of the dry plate concern; Dr. O. Hammer and O. W. Hammer, an attorney, and Mrs. R. G. Salzgeber, Mrs. C. T. A. Vogel, Mrs. R. Hencke and Mrs. J. Elsperman. Since the death of Mrs. Hammer these members of the family have held weekly reunions at the home of their father.

Bird Nest Lined With Pieces of Post-Dispatch.

A bird's nest which was "wall-papered," or lined, with a part of a Sunday Post-Dispatch comic section, was found at Kenwood Springs, Mo., last week by a pupil of the Garfield School. The pupils of the school are creating a natural museum and were on a search for abandoned bird nests to add to their collection.

Prominent Farmer in Canada Describes His Escape From the Operating Table.

MR. F. GIFFORD

In a letter to friends at Saskatoon, Mr. F. Gifford of the Ball Rock Farm, Maymont, Saskatchewan, Canada, says: "Thanks to Fruitola and Traxo I am alive. I lay on my back for sixteen days, suffering the agonies of a dozen deaths. I began taking Fruitola and was relieved of a great many gall stones. My health is now fully restored."

Fruitola and Traxo are compounded from the original Edsall formulas at the Pinus laboratories in Monticello, Ill., and can be purchased in drug stores; a doctor's prescription is not necessary. Fruitola is a pure fruit oil that acts as an intestinal lubricant. One dose is usually sufficient to indicate its efficacy. Traxo is a tonic-alterative that is most effective to rebuild and restore the weakened, rundown system.

A booklet of special interest to those who suffer from stomach trouble can be obtained by writing to the Pinus Laboratories, Monticello, Illinois.

BILL FOR ZOO BOARD IS BEING REDRAFTED

Aloe Blocks Approval of Self-Perpetuating Body in Estimate Board.

Vigorous opposition from President Aloe of the Board of Aldermen has prevented the approval by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of a bill creating a self-perpetuating board of control of the Zoological Garden in Forest Park. President Aloe said yesterday that he will vote against the bill in the Board of Aldermen, as well as in the Board of Estimate and Apportionment unless the provision for the self-perpetuation of the board is withdrawn.

When Mayor Kiel's arguments in behalf of the bill and the representations of George E. Dieckmann, its author, failed to convince President Aloe, the measure was sent to City Counselor Daues to be redrafted, if the State law permits, so that the members of the zoo board may be appointed by the Mayor.

In addition to making the members of the zoo board the sole authority in the selection of their associates and successors, the bill in its present form also clothes them with complete discretion in the expenditure of about $130,000 gathered in the form of a special tax each year for the support of the zoo. The number, compensation and duties of employes, the need of buildings and the amount of their cost, the employment of help and the letting of contracts of all kinds are questions which only the zoo board would determine. Its members would be, after their first appointment, beyond the control of the Mayor, the Board of Aldermen and the Board of Public Service.

The present board consist of five members, including the Mayor, Comptroller and Park Commissioner, who serve ex-officia. The new bill proposes a board of nine members, with only three city officials, who would thus be a hopeless minority.

Dieckmann, who drew the pending bill and who has been lobbying for its passage in the Board of Aldermen and for its approval by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that provision was made for a membership of nine so that the St. Louis Zoological Society, of which he is president, could have larger representation.

"You see, the society worked for the zoo for four years—it is our 'pet'—and we think we ought to have a good deal to say about the development of the plans. The bill is exactly like that under which the Art Museum is managed and we thought that it was the best way to administer the zoo."

In the meeting of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment it was disclosed by Mayor Kiel's questioning of Dieckmann that the latter and Robert H. Keiser, another member of the Board of Control, are at cross purposes. Mayor Kiel said that he would reappoint Keiser on the board. Keiser believes the city should have supervision of the zoo funds.

Dieckmann said he had no objection to Keiser's selection, but continued to urge that the membership be not less than seven. Comptroller Player finally protested against Dieckmann's interruption of business, and he withdrew.

Mayor Kiel says he favors the board of nine members, even if it is self-perpetuating, because it will relieve him of much work in connection with the zoo. Comptroller Player objects to the bill and announces that he will oppose its approval by the Board of Estimate so long as city officials are not constituted a majority of the membership.

NEURALGIA AND SCIATICA

The one symptom of neuralgia is pain and it is unmistakable.

In a large proportion of cases anemia and debility are responsible for neuralgia, particularly in women. To remedy the neuralgic condition it is necessary to build up the blood and improve the general health and for this purpose there is nothing better nor more convenient than Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

If you have neuralgia or sciatic, pains do not go to great expense for treatment until you have tried building up the blood. If you are pale the chances are very strong that the treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are all that you will require. Hot applications and liniments may be used at the same time if you desire. They may relieve the pain and temporary relief is the best you can expect from them anyway. The pain in the nerve is caused by nerve starvation. Dr. William's Pink Pills give to the blood the elements that the nerves need. They contain no narcotics and are not pain-killers. They remove the cause of the pain.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by your own druggist, or will be sent by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. Price 50 cents.—ADV.

WAS ON WAY TO SALONIKI

Only Two Men Rescued by Submersible — Vessel Carried $750,000 Gold.

BERLIN, Friday, wireless to Sayville, Feb. 24.—The Admiralty announced today that the Italian transport Minas, carrying 1000 soldiers to Saloniki has been sunk and that all on board except two men perished.

"A German submarine on Feb. 17 sank by a torpedo in the Mediterranean the Italian transport steamer Minas, 2854 tons. The steamer was bound to Saloniki. She carried 1000 troops, a large quantity of ammunition and 3,000,000 marks ($750,000) worth of gold.

"The steamer's crew and the troops on board perished, with the exception of two men who were rescued by the submarine.

"The destruction of the Minas was reported previously, but only now have the details become known."

The sinking of the Minas was officially announced in Paris last Wednesday, the announcement, however, giving only the name of the vessel and the date it was sunk. On the same day Berlin announced that a transport crowded with men was among a large number of vessels that recently had been sunk in the Mediterranean by submarines. The Minas was 320 feet long, was built in 1891 and was owned in Genoa.

Shipping Tie-Up Among Neutrals Pleases Berlin.

BERLIN (by wireless to the Associated Press via Sayville), Feb. 24.—The Admiralty Press Bureau has given out no data in regard to the submarine warfare, as many submarines, with a long cruising radius, the officials say, have not yet been heard from.

The naval and military leaders are much pleased by the progress of the intensified submarine warfare in the last three weeks. While the tonnage actually sunk in February probably will not exceed 500,000, it is contended the U-boat campaign has had instantaneous and far-reaching effect, not only as regards the destruction of ships, but in the way of tying up neutral vessels.

"A boat interned is as good as a boat sent to the bottom," is the way the men at the Admiralty put it. "We are after tonnage, not lives."

The Admiralty officials are making a close study of the ramifying effects produced by the restriction of shipping, in regard to industries of neutral as well as belligerent countries, owing to the cutting off of coal, lumber and raw materials.

The press and public here are curious as to the unconfirmed reports of the sailing for the war zone of the American merchantmen Rochester and Orleans. Bets are being posted whether they will force their way through the barred area.

"The two American ships, of course, have no special privileges," says the Lokal Anzeiger. "The rules which have been set down for other vessels apply to them. They can count on no special warning. It is erroneous, moreover, to designate them as 'trial ships,' as it is, of course, possible that one or the other may escape the vigil of the U-boats. But Americans had better not hope that such an accident is likely to occur."

The press here says European neutrals fully appreciate the havoc of the unretarded submarine campaign, notwithstanding efforts of the entente to minimize it and conceal the results already attained. The submarine campaign has eclipsed military events on the various fronts, and is almost the only topic of conversation in regard to the war.

British Steamer Sunk, Another Reported Destroyed.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—The British steamer Longhirst has been sunk, according to an announcement by Lloyds. The British steamer Beneficent, 1963 tons, is reported to have been sunk.

Says at Banquet in His Honor in New York He Believes All Stand Behind President.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Charles E. Hughes, speaking at a banquet given in his honor tonight by the New York County Lawyers' Association, declared he returned to the practice of law here, after having served six years on the Supreme Court bench and having been a candidate for President in the recent election, "a wiser but sadder man."

Referring to the bar as representing the patriotic sentiment of the country, Hughes said he did not believe there was a man present who did not "stand behind the President in maintaining the rights committed to his trust."

SALE OF FRUIT, VEGETABLES AND ICE CREAM BY WEIGHT PROPOSED

Bill Will Be Before Mayor Next Week for Approval—Fines of $5 to $100 Provided for Violations.

In a bill which will be before the Mayor for approval next week, weight instead of dry or liquid measure is made the selling basis of fruits and vegetables and ice cream. This would prohibit the sale of oranges, lemons, bananas, apples, etc., by the dozen. Violations of the proposed ordinance are punishable by a fine of from $5 to $100.

There is a provision that when such articles are disposed of in containers subject to inspection they shall be approximately of the same size. This is aimed at the practice of putting all the attractive fruits or vegetables at the top and the inferior sizes and qualities underneath.

When ice cream is sold in quantities of less than a quarter of a pound it need not be weighed. This exception is made so that venders of ice cream soda may continue to use the small scoop for measuring instead of a scale. All peddlers of fruit and vegetables will have to provide themselves with scales and be prepared to make exact change to correspond with fractional pounds weight of what they sell.

$20 BILLS ARE TENDERED IN PROTEST AGAINST EXTRA FARE

Conductor of McKinley Car Starts to Make Change in Nickels and Passengers Capitulate.

About a dozen employes of the Commonwealth Steel Co., who boarded a McKinley car in Granite City yesterday morning on their way to their homes in St. Louis after working the night shift, tendered the conductor $20 bills in payment of the second 5-cent fare demanded by the company of passengers who ride across the bridge.

The conductor was unable to make change, so he backed the car to the Granite City office of the railway company, where he obtained a basketful of nickels.

When he started to count out nickels to make change for each of the large bills, the workmen discovered they had some small change in their pockets. The car had tied up traffic an hour and 45 minutes. The men are said to have agreed upon the plan as a protest against the 10-cent bridge fare. They had been paid off Friday.

Roosevelt has served two summers at Plattsburgh and says he is studying military science in a private class in Boston.

PLAY'S CHARACTERS ALL WOMEN

New English Farce Is Vision of Britain in War Time.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—A farce, in which all the characters will be played by women, is to be produced at the Garrick Theater. Appropriately, it is entitled "Petticoats." It is a vision of Britain in wartime, when all the men have gone to fight and only women are left to carry on industrial and professional life.

The women characters are engaged in male occupations, and all are looking forward to the glad time when man will reappear. The scene is laid in a flat near the War Office and the interest centers in the return from the front of an unmarried and engaging young hero.

$400,000 FOR FOOD INVESTIGATION IS VOTED BY HOUSE

Chaplain Offers Prayer That Prices May Be Brought in Reach of Needy.

EMBARGO IS ADVOCATED

Representative Fitzgerald Says Congress Shows Incapacity to Deal With Situation.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—An amendment by Representative Borland of Missouri to the sundry civil bill appropriating $400,000 for an investigation by the cost of food passed the House tonight, 83 to 51.

In the House, Representative Fitzgerald of New York, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, advocated the imposition of an export embargo on foodstuffs. An unusual incident was a prayer for relief of the food situation, delivered in the House by Chaplain Couden, who asked that the authorities in state and nation might find ways to bring prices within reach of the needy.

A virtual food dictatorship in the capital was proposed by Representative Bennett of New York, in a joint resolution which would empower the District of Columbia Health Department to limit the amount of food consumed at public dinners or served to any person in the district within 24 hours. The measure was referred to a committee.

Fitzgerald declared that the food situation had shown the incapacity of Congress to deal with "the most vital problem affecting the American people today."

"The riots that have taken place," he said, "are not the riots of the thriftless and the worthless. It is the outraged and indignant protest of the thrifty, the industrious and the frugal, who cannot meet the demands for prices of food that now exist."

Watch Packers, Borland Says.

Representative Borland of Missouri, supporting the amendment, said much attention should be paid to the packing interests because they controlled not only the meat supply but, in a large measure, all cold storage products. Borland said he had been told that the belligerent Powers could not borrow a cent in this country until they had settled with the Beef Trust for cargoes of beef seized.

Representative Sherley of Kentucky vigorously opposed any sort of embargo, and Representative London, Socialist, of New York insisted that his plan of appropriating $5,000,000 for opening public markets would offer the best solution.

Federal grand juries at New York, Chicago and Boston, upon direction of the Attorney-General to United States Attorneys at those places, were urged to consider with painstaking care all evidence relating to possible conspiracies to advance prices.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 24.—Thousands of tons of foodstuffs on the Pacific coast are awaiting purchase and shipment East, commission men said here today. Of rice alone there are 125,000,000 pounds, much of which is ready for shipment and the price is lower than it has been for several years.

Authorities said there are millions of bushels of potatoes and beans, besides large quantities of canned and dried fruit and vegetables.

REFERENDUM ON "BONE DRY" FAVORED BY HOUSE COMMITTEE

Agrees to Substitute Gould Bill for Senate Measure on District of Columbia Prohibition.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—The House District of Columbia Committee today agreed to substitute the Gould bill, which embodies "bone dry" prohibition but requires a popular referendum on the subject, in place of the Senate bill for prohibition in the national capital. The chairman was instructed to report the substitute to the House by noon Tuesday.

The Rules Committee majority has not determined when to precipitate the fight for immediate consideration of the bill in the House, but may decide to bring it up Monday.

Prohibition advocates in the House will oppose any change in the language or form of the bill as it passed the Senate, even to voting against the "bone dry" substitute, on the ground that any change would defeat final action by this Congress.

MUNITION PLANT EMPLOYE HELD

CHESTER, Pa., Feb. 24.—Suspected of being a German agent, George Koob, of Philadelphia, an inspector at the Eddystone Munition Co., was arrested at the plant here today.

Koob, who, the police say, came to this country from Germany shortly after the outbreak of war, had in his possession papers which justified his arrest, it is alleged.

Woman Killed When Auto Drops 50 Feet.

CENTERVILLE, Ia., Feb. 24.—Mrs. L. D. Rash was killed and Mrs. Martha Mason, Mrs. Aggie Rash and Miss Lorraine Rash probably fatally injured today when an automobile in which they were riding rolled over a 50-foot embankment near here.

WALDORF STORMED BY FOOD MARCHERS SEEKING GOVERNOR

SEVERAL PERSONS HURT

Executive, Who Was at Another Hostelry, Promises State Aid Toward Relief.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Women of the lower East Side and other Jewish districts gathered this afternoon in Madison Square to protest against the cost of living. Hundreds brought their children, some in arms and some in carriages. A minority of men also came, and at the height of the demonstration perhaps 3500 were listening eagerly to speeches that were being delivered simultaneously from six stands.

Three hours of speechmaking roused the crowd to an unexpected mood. It found its manifestation when Mrs. Bella Neumann Zilberman, one of those in charge of the meeting, cried:

"How many of you will go there and march about that palace of eats, the Waldorf-Astoria, where Gov. Whitman is stopping and show him that you are hungry? You need no leaders. Let your empty stomachs be your leaders."

"Five hundred thousand of us," cried the crowd, and the descent upon the Waldorf was under way late in the afternoon.

Call for Help Sent to Police.

Scouts in advance of the main body gave the hotel people an inkling of what was coming and calls for protection went at once to the police. By the time the main body reached Fifth avenue and Thirty-fourth street, 2000 strong, reserves from three stations were awaiting.

But 60 policemen were no match for the women. It took them three-quarters of an hour to quell the disturbance, and when this was accomplished two women had been trampled into unconsciousness, four arrests had been made and the big hotoel had been in a state of siege for nearly an hour.

By 6:30 the streets about the Waldorf had been cleared. As the crowd began to break up many started north along Fifth avenue. Their objective was the St. Regis, apparently, and the police shunted them into side streets. There was not demonstration about the St. Regis.

Most of those in the crowd at Madison Square were obviously of foreign birth. When the attack on the Waldorf was made there were few who could understand the repeated declarations of the police and others that the Governor was not there, but at the St. Regis.

Crowd Is Forced Back.

At the end of half an hour, however, the police found that argument and pushing with the hands would never get the situation under control. They began then to force the crowd back from the doors.

One man pointed at an automobile and shouted that no one had a right to ride in automobiles when others were starving. The machine was stopped and several persons boarded the running board and tried to drag the owner from the car. Policemen drove away his assailants.

Three policemen who tried to turn the marchers away from the Waldorf-Astoria were swept aside. Traffic was blocked in all directions.

While the police were dispersing the crowd in front of the Waldorf-Astoria a committee which had been appointed at the Madison Square meeting called on Gov. Whitman at the Hotel St. Regis. Several hundred of those who participated in the demonstration at the Waldorf-Astoria assembled in front of the St. Regis. The Governor told the committee that he would support Mayor Mitchel and the other city authorities in relieving the present situation.

"You can count on the Governor and the State Legislature to help to their fullest capacity," he said.

"The situation," District Attorney Swan declared tonight, "shows that there is a premium put on speculation and gambling in the necessities of life." He added that he did not propose to turn over to the Federal authorities the information gained by his staff until he had learned whether New York County was entitled to any seizures that might be made, and also if he had the authority to prosecute those gambling in foodstuffs.

Although 72 carloads of potatoes were in the yards of one railroad company here, only 11 carloads were unloaded, the District Attorney's investigator reported. Similar conditions, they said, had existed here for several days.

Agents of the Federal Department of Justice visited Jersey City today and inspected three large cold storage plants, said to be filled with provisions of all kinds.

Rioting was resumed in five different parts of the Bronx tonight. Stands in several markets were overturned. Reserves were called out and made several arrests. The rioters said they were members of the "Anti-High Cost of Living League."

Stamer Sunk in Collision.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—The Norwegian steamer Geira, of 961 tons, has been sunk in a collision with another Norwegian steamer, according to Lloyds. The second vessel proceeded on her voyage with fifteen members of the Geira's crew.

IMMENSE CROWD ATTENDS FUNERAL OF GEN. FUNSTON

Heavy Rain Falls in San Francisco During Procession and the Service.

SOUVENIRS GRABBED

Crush at Grave So Great That Squad of Soldiers Is Left on Guard There.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 24.—Maj. Gen. Frederick Funston, who died suddenly at San Antonio, Tex., Monday night, was buried today near the body of his on, Arthur MacArthur Funston, in the cemetery of the military reservation at the Presidio, overlooking the Golden Gate. A mixed brigade of coast artillery men and sailors—every available man form the depleted garrisons around San Francisco Bay—with officers of high rank and thousands of San Franciscans, braved the rain to do honor to his memory.

A heavy rain was in progres when the flag-wrapped casket was borne from the city hall, where thousands had viewed it during the early morning, to the First Presbyterian Church and thence to the cemetery.

The route was along Van Ness avenue, lined on one side with old-time mansions which escaped destruction because, in the great fire of 1906, Gen. Funston's engineers dynamited the buildings on the opposite side of the street and checked the flames. The entire route of the funeral procession extended through portions of the city which owed their immunity from destruction largely to the efforts of "Funston's men," and his hillside grave overlooks the camping grounds where slept thousands of refugees whom he fed, sheltered and clothed.

At 10 o'clock the casket was taken from the city hall, where it had lain in state all night. Mounted police preceded a guard riding along with a Major-General's flag, two white stars on a red field. Gen. J. Franklin Bell and his aide, the Third Coast Artillery Band, two regiments of artillerymen and the sailors and their band, preceded the casket.

Directly after came the General's horse. A pair of black riding boots with dangling spurs, were reversed in the stirrups. Mourners in automobiles followed, and companies from various military and patriotic organizations brought up the rear, carrying draped standards.

Great Crowd at the Church.

Coast artillerymen, wearing side arms guarded the entrances of the church and restrained a crowd many times the capacity of the edifice. Here the General's widow, mother, son Frederick, and brother, and immediate relatives awaited the casket, borne by eight enlisted men who had seen service with the General. The honorary pallbearers were: Rear-Admiral William F. Fullam, commanding the Pacific reserve fleet; BrigadierGenerals William L. Sibert, R. K. Evans and Oscar F. Long; Colonels John T. Knight, Guy L. Edy and Capt. Fitzhugh Lee, Gen. Funston's personal aid. They were in full dress and were followed by Mayor James Rolfe Jr. and city officials.

Services conducted by the Rev. William Kirk Guthrie, pastor of the church, were brief. Two of the General's favorite hymns were sung, "Lead, Kindly Light" and "Just for Today."

Funston Service Held by Texans at Hour of That in San Francisco.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Feb. 24.—Memorial services honoring the late Major-General Frederick Funston, in which residents of San Antonio and officers of the Southern Department participated were held here this afternoon at the same hour funeral services were being held for Gen. Funston in San Francisco. Major-General John J. Pershing made his first public appearance here, paying tribute to his predecessor's memory.

"To those who knew him best," said Gen Pershing, "Gen. Funston's personality was a perpetual charm. His friends will remember him longest for his great heart and his great soul. It is the loss of such a man the army and the nation mourn. Entering the service as he did, without military education, his was a difficult position as commander of older, well-trained officers and men of the regular army. But of all those who served under his command, I have never yet met one who has not spoken of him in words of praise. When he died the telephone orderly at the fort sobbed as he repeated the news. Funston's whole nature was attuned to friendliness.

"I do not think that Gen. Funston ever sought his own personal advancement over his fellows. I do know, however, that he declined to allow his friends to undertake special legislation looking to his further promotion. He said, in writing to a friend, 'I have reached the highest rank possible in the army, and can do my work better because I can do it fearlessly, knowing that I have nothing to gain and nothing to lose so long as I do right.'"

BRITISH PENALTIES ON U. S. SHIPPING TO BE INQUIRED INTO

TYPICAL CASES CITED

Vessel Suspected of Planning to Coal Enemy Laid Up; Pacific Trade Involved.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—British aggression on American trade and shipping is revealed in between 4000 and 5000 specific complaints filed with the State Department which will be shortly turned over to the new shipping board for investigation. Only the critical situation with Germany has prevented a grave issue between the United States and Great Britain.

One of the most striking cases is that of the vessels of the Pacific Mail Steamship Co. These ships, sailing between San Francisco and Manila, both American ports, via Hongkong,, must accept the dictation of British consular officers or be deprived of coal at Hongkong.

If an American citizen, who is on any of the forbidden lists of the British Government, wishes to ship goods on a Pacific Mail steamer the goods will go off at Hongkong or no coal will go on the ship. In consequence the Pacific Mail has insisted on the display of British "letters of asurance" before accepting freight passing between San Francisco and Manila.

Case of Marina Quesada.

The case of the Marina Quesada, an American-owned steamer which has been rusting in the harbor of Pernambuco, Brazil, for the past two years, furnishes another striking case in point. This vessel was suspected by British secret service operatives of taking a cargo of coal to South Atlantic waters for the late Admiral Von Spee's German fleet.

The Marina Quesada had been given provisional registry by Costa Rica. It touched at a Costa Rica port, en route south, to complete its registry. At the demand of the British consular officers the Costa Rica Government refused to perfect the registry, and the commander of the Marina Quesada sailed with no flag flying, later putting into Pernambuco. If he intended to coal Von Spee's fleet he did not come in contact with it.

Meanwhile the British secret service dug up the shadowy title of an English company to the vessel, and sent a new crew to Pernambuco to take over the ship. Through the intervention of the State Department the Brazilian Government refused to surrender the Marina Quesada, contending it was clearly the property of American citizens.

The British Admiralty refused to let go. Recently Great Britain made a proposal to the American owners of the ship that the Admiralty would recognize their title to the steamer, provided they would first concede the title of the Furness Withy Co., a Norwegian corporation recognized to be operating in close relationship with the British Admiralty, and would consent to keep the Marina Quesada under the orders of the Admiralty "for the duration of the war."

This proposal was rejected by the American owners, who have appealed to the Shipping Board for redress under the discrimination sections of the law which created that body.

Shipper of Grain Punished.

In another case an American, with the consent of the State Department, shipped several cargoes of grain past the British blockade to a Swedish port. The masters of the steamers evaded the British and French patrol ships by hugging territorial waters of Norway to get into the Skagerrak and the Baltic Sea. Some of this grain is said to have found its way into Germany.

The shipper of this grain owned a controlling interest in a large petroleum company with headquarters in San Francisco. This oil company was engaged in trade with Australia and New Zealand, doing a large business. Just as soon as the connection of the grain shipper with the oil company was established by the British secret service agents it was blacklisted. Furthermore, the Australian and New Zealand customers of the American company, which had never done any business with persons in "enemy" territory, were advised to transfer their account to the San Francisco office of Balfour, Guthrie & Co., the senior member of which is a member of the British Parliament and a close relative of Foreign Secretary Balfour.

RECEIPTS OF FOLLIES LARGEST EVER TAKEN IN HERE IN WEEK

Total Was $30,267.50, Representing Capacity Business and Sale of Standing Room at All Performances.

The Ziegfeld Follies, which closed a week's engagement at the Jefferson Theater last night, did $30,267.50 of business, according to the local management and that of the company. This is the largest week's amount ever taken in by a St. Louis theater in one week, and represents capacity business, and the sale of standing room at every one of the 1[illegible] performances given. It is also the biggest week's business ever done by the Follies, outside New York.

Last year's Follies receipts at the Olympic Theater, also representing capacity sales at nine performances were $26,800. The Jefferson has 600 fewer seats than the Olympic, but 50 cents more was charged for all first-floor seats this season than last. The "top price" in the parquet this year was $2.50.

The New York Hippodrome show, which was here New Year's week, reported receipts of $40,140 at 1[illegible] performances, with a top price of $2, and most downstairs seats at $1.50. This was in the Coliseum, which is not classed as a regular theater.

Sir Herbert Tree's production of "Henry VIII," also here in New Year's week at the Jefferson, which did a business quite satisfactory to the local management, had about one-half the receipts of the Follies. This means somewhat more than one-half the same attendance, as the top price for the Shakspearean production was $2.

MISSIONARY LOST ON ATHOS FRIEND OF WILSON'S BROTHER

Roomed With President's Kinsman in .. College and Is Highly Commended by Him.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 24.—Robert Allen Haden, the American Presbyterian missionary, who lost his life when the French liner Athos was sunk by a submarine, was a close personal friend of Joseph R. Wilson, brother of President Wilson.

"Haden and I were roommates when we were studying at the Southwestern Presbyterian University, at Clarksville, Tenn.," said Wilson. "I saw him last about six years ago, when, on one of his furloughs from China. He was one of the closest personal friends I ever had. He was one of those men whose word means absolutely what it says, and who are not capable of a mean act."

Brother Says Germany Cannot Be Blamed for Haden's eDath.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Feb. 24.—C. H. Haden, brother of Robert Allen Haden, today declared Germany could not be blamed, that he hoped the United States and Germany would not find in his brother's case a cause for war, and that as his brother took the risk, it would be wrong for President Wilson to make any protest to Berlin. He said Robert Haden married a German missionary in China.

It was started at New Rochelle, N. Y., and was first picked up by the station at the University of Pennsylvania at Pittsburg. It was then sent to the University of Wisconsin at Madison, thence to Denver and to Los Angeles.

Washington University took the message to relay it to Denver if necessary. It was sent from here to Dallas and thence to Shreveport, La. A. S. Blatterman operated the Washington University station, and while waiting for the message he caught parts of messages from Havana.

The relay was held under the auspices of the Radio League of America to promote interest in the wireless among amateurs.

The War Department has placed orders also for 46 9.5-inch field howitzers of a type said to equal the 11-inch guns of similar design in use abroad.

FILIBUSTER ENDS; SENATE TO VOTE ON REVENUE BILL

Agreement Is Reached With Republican Objectors That Ballot Shall Be Taken at 8 P. M. Wednesday; "Pet" Measures Crowded to Fore.

DEBATE TURNS TO FOREIGN POLICIES

Fall Resolution Empowering President to Protect U. S. Shipping a Surprise; Lodge Charges Effort to "Efface Congress."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—One of the most spectacular filibusters the capitol has seen in years kept the Senate in session until midnight tonight and was broken only when Republican leaders directing it obtained a pledge from the Democrats that the administration revenue bill would not be urged to a vote until Wednesday.

The Democrats, facing what they declared was a Republican attempt to break down the administration program and force an extra session of Congress after March 4, had threatened to keep the Senate in continuous session over Sunday, if that was found necessary to obtain passage of the revenue measure.

Wanders Far in Its Debate.

During the afternoon and evening the debate went far afield from revenues and hot exchanges between the Democrats and Republicans led into a dramatic discussion of the international situation and of President Wilson's policy in the submarine crisis. For a time it seemed certain that the parliamentary struggle would prolong the session at least well into Sunday, but late at night some of the leaders on the Republican side let it be known that they did not favor carrying the fight to the extent of embarrassing the country by killing the revenue bill and thus weakening its preparation for defense.

After two or three peace proposals had been rejected by the Democrats, the Republican leaders submitted a proposition for a vote Wednesday night at 8 o'clock on condition that in the meantime appropriation bills may be brought up by unanimous consent. The Democrats accepted, believing this arrangement gave them a chance to save enough of their legislative program to avert an extra session.

There was no understanding, however, as to what the Republicans might do with other bills than the revenue measure, in case some of them should hold to their determination to force an extra session, in order to have Congress in session for developments in the European emergency.

Several Senators pointed out that a vote on the revenue bill would not mean that an extra session would necessarily be avoided. Aside from other legislation, three of the most important supply bills, the navy, army and sundry civil, carrying altogether close to $1,000,000,000, have not been taken up at all in the Senate.

Appeals for "Pet" Measures.

On the insistence of Senators Runedell and Vardaman a provision was included in the agreement giving five hours on Monday for discussion of the flood control bill with no assurance, however, of a vote. When, just before midnight, Senator Simmons submitted the proposed agreement to the Senate for ratification, every Senator was on his feet. Senator Ashhurst declared he would object unless assurances were given for consideration of the conference report on the Indian appropriation bill, and it was agreed to give an hour to this report on Monday. When other Senators, including Senator Shafroth, urging the Porto Rican conference report, began to plead for "pet" measures, Senator Penrose declared:

"This has gone far enough. If there is to be any further wording of this agreement, objections will come from the minority. The minority already has sacrificed enough. I will say further to the Senators from Colorado and Arizona that neither of their bills will pass at this session of Congress."

The objections then were withdrawn and at 12:15 the Senate adopted the agreement by unanimous consent and recessed.

Republicans Filibuster Openly.

Openly charged by the Democrats with seeking to defeat the excess profits tax of the revenue bill at the behest of munitions makers, Senate Republicans during the day dropped all disguises of delay and stubbornly filibustered against the bill.

The Democrats promptly countered by deciding to hold the Senate in continuous session through Sunday, if need be, with the purpose of either breaking the filibuster or demonstrating that it cannot be suppressed.

Late this afternoon passages between Democrats and Republicans resulted in a heated debate on the relations between the United States and Germany, which reached its climax when Senator Fall, Republican, introduced a resolution to authorize the President to use the armed forces of the United States to protect American rights on the seas.

Wilson was expected to ask of Congress some time before its adjournment, but its introduction at this time by a Republican Senator, while the administration is forming its course, came as a surprise. It promised to further complicate and embarrass an already much-mixed-up situation.

Senator Fall asked that his resolution go to the Foreign Relations Committee, and Chairman Stone consented, after he had objected to the way in which the measure had been introduced.

Stone Regrets Bill at This Time.

"I greatly regret that such a bill as this has been introduced at this time," said Senator Stone. "Nevertheles, I see no way of disposing of it except by letting it go to the committee."

The bill would give the President wide authority to protect lives and property of Americans or to authorize American merchant ships to protect themselves against searches and seizures or capture.

A conference was held after Republican Senators had participated in an obstructive debate for two hours on the legislative appropriation bill conference report. At the conference, in the Finance Committee room, were Secretary McAdoo and Senators Simmons, Stone, Martin, James, Thomas, Swanson and Hughes.

After Senator Poindexter, Republican, had been talking for five hours, Senator Williams of Mississippi aroused the ire of the Republicans by charging that they had received orders from the munitions makers of the country to defeat the revenue bill.

Senator Lodge of Massachusetts interrupted with a point of order that Senator Williams was violating a rule of the Senate in attacking the motives of Senators. The Mississippi Senator responded that he was sorry he had overstepped the bounds of parliamentary propriety, but that, unfortunately, what he had said came close to the truth.

Move for Extra Session Charged.

"It is reported," continued Williams, "that the Republicans are filibustering to force an extra session because they do not want to leave President Wilson to handle a foreign situation, just as the copperheads didn't want to trust President Lincoln.

"However that may be, I do think it is the real reason for this filibuster. The real reason, I think, is that you Republicans have received orders from the munitions manufacturers saying that heretofore they have contributed generously to the Republican party and that you should remember that now."

Senator Williams said the munitions manufacturers who had been large contributors to the Republican fund were hard hit under the excess profits feature of the revenue bill.

"If a plebiscite were taken today among the American people between Woodrow Wilson and the Congress of the United States, 10 out of 11 would vote for the President against Congress and against its inefficiency, ineptitude and waste of time and waste of words," said Williams.

Senator Williams said the danger lies in the interpretation put on the American attitude in Germany by those who rule that empire and the feeling there that Americans are not united in their stand against foreign aggression.

Senator Borah asked what there had been in the last few months to give Germany this impression.

Senator Borah Gives View.

Senator Borah declared if the President asked for authority to arm American ships he would get it, although he said he believed he has sufficient authority already for this purpose.

Senator Williams replied that he did not know about that, but he did believe the German military autocracy was convinced the United States was divided in sentiment.

Senator Williams further declared the English-speaking race across the sea did not seem able to meet the submarine menace, and that American shippers seemed to be afraid to risk themselves. Such things, he said, caused him to wonder if, indeed, the English race were decadent.

"If I were President," he declared, "I would give American shippers guns with which to arm their ships and I would give them money."

"I wish to God the Senator were President if he would do that," interjected Senator Sutherland, Republican, of Utah.

"I am very glad and the American people may be very glad that I am not President," interposed Senator Williams, "because there is a man in the White House much abler and much wiser than I, who has demonstrated his greatness to the nation on more than one trying occasion.

Predicts Bryan's Course.

"The American people may be glad, too, that Bryan was not President, with his idea that he could overcome a European tornado by pouring sweet oil on its turbulent waves. They may be glad, too, that Roosevelt is not President, for we would already have been in war with Germany and England and France and Russia and Mexico."

"If the President of the United States will act," declared Senator Lodge, Republican, of Massachusetts, "he will have the country and Congress behind him, as he did when the break came with Germany. But when he hesitates and disputes and discusses and lets things go by, we are bound to have differences in Congress and in the country. We are bound to have distrust. There is bound to be a feeling that it would be safer and better for the country that the Congress of the United States should remain in session."

It would be easy, he continued, to answer Senator Williams' connection of the Republicans and the munitions makers, by referring to the "profits made when somebody told what ought not to be told."

"Congress," he went on, "has given the President everything he asked with a lavish hand. I would refuse the President no authority and no money needed for the defense of the United States, but I am not going, on that account, to accept every kind of extension of the presidential power not relating to war but to peace."

Attempt to "Efface Congress."

There has been a persistent attempt, Senator Lodge said, "to efface the power of Congress," by members of the Cabinet and by "every Jack-in-the-box" who gets into temporary power.

"I will support the President to the utmost," he continued, "when he takes a stand against a foreign nation, but I will not be led, under the blackmail of a threat of war, to support an objectionable treaty."

It is true, he said, that Germany "has blockaded," the United States, but it is because shipowners cannot get guns which are in the hands of the navy department.

"Why don't they have the guns?" he asked. "Congress can't give them.

"We have read today our former Ambassador to Germany was afraid to take passage on a ship in Spain for fear it would be demolished. Can Congress send a battleship to bring our own Ambassador home? No, but the navy can. That is not an act of war. Can't we protect the life of our own Ambassador?

"We have heard how the wives of our Consuls have been stripped and acids applied to their bodies to determine if they bore any messages in invisible ink. Yet nothing has been done. Is that the fault of Congress?

"I am loath to say these things, but I cannot permit the charge to be made here that the Republicans are in a conspiracy."

Lewis Assails Lodge.

Senator Lewis, the Democratic whip, charged that Senator Lodge had not upheld the President when he sought to initiate a plan for peace in Europe. The Massachusetts Senator, he declared, had been the leader of the opposition to the President's purposes.

"I cannot permit the Senator from Massachusetts," Senator Lewis continued, "to deceive the country by posing in the garb of a patriot when in reality he has been a political hypocrite.

"The President of the United States has never had his support. All the back stairs gossip in the campaign the Senator from Massachusetts was willing to give utterance to, no matter how much it slandered the honor of his country."

Toward the close of the day, after the heated debate over the international situation had subsided, Chairman Simmons of the Finance Committee bitterly assailed the Republicans for their filibuster. The Democrats, he declared, would hold the Senate in continuous session until a vote could be had on the revenue bill.

Senator Penrose, ranking Republican on the Finance Committee, replied saying: "There is absolutely no intention on the part of the minority to defeat the revenue bill. He pointed out that virtually all of today had been taken up in speeches foreign to the revenue bill because the majority had permitted other measures to displace it. Then Senator Simmons asked what date for a vote would be acceptable to the minority, however. Senator Penrose said he could not make such an arrangement.

As the filibuster proceeded into the night, with no sign of a break, there were indications that the Democrats might attempt a form of cloture unprecedented in Senate procedure by moving the previous question on the revenue bill.

Democratic leaders concluded that the end would justify almost any reasonable means. Some of them insisted that the situation should be gripped with a firmer hand than ever had been held on a legislative fight in the Senate.

The Republicans declared any attempt to throttle debate would be resisted desperately.

Some of the Republicans said a vote on the bill might be permitted early next week, however, if assurances could be given that the President did not propose to ask Congress for special authority to use the army and navy in the German crisis during the congressional recess.

GIRLS! BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR WITH "DANDERINE"

Get a 25 Cent Bottle! Freshen Your Scalp! Stop Falling Hair! Remove Dandruff! Grow Lots of Wavy, Glossy, Beautiful Hair—You Can!

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die, then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and 10 minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?—ADV.

SAYS HOT WATER EACH DAY KEEPS THE DOCTOR AWAY

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, claiming this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Just as soap and hot water cleanse and freshen the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the eliminative organs.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull, aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach; others who are subect to bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to demonstrate the value of inside bathing. Those who continue it each morning are assured of pronounced results both in regard to health and appearance. —ADV.

KOELN TURNS HIS OFFICE OVER TO COMPTROLLER PLAYER

Action Follows Denial of Motion for Rehearing in Suit to Oust Him.

City Collector Koeln, upon learning at noon yesterday that the Missouri Supreme Court had denied his motion for a rehearing in the suit brought to oust him from his position, turned over his office to Comptroller Player. The Comptroller immediately appointed Associate Comptroller Gunn to administer the office until March 5, when Koeln will qualify for the remainder of an unexpired term of two years to which he was elected last November.

The statutes provide that when for any reason o Collector can not serve he shall turn over his office to the County Court. As no such institution exists in St. Louis, the Comptroller is regarded as an equivalent.

It was agreed between Comptroller Player and Collector Koeln that all the employes of the Collector's office are to resign tomorrow and be reappointed by Acting Collector Gunn, so that there will be no question of their right to draw salaries until March 5. Koeln declared he would retain enough of the commissions on taxes collected in February to pay the clerks.

City Counselor Daues asserted that although several legal points are involved he thought Koeln had taken the proper course in putting Comptroller Player in charge of the office of Collector. Koeln was elected last November, but the Supreme Court, in the suit brought by Sidney S. May, who was appointed by Governor Major, Nov. 14, held that Koeln could not qualify until the first Monday in March, 1917. May yesterday would not state whether he would make an effort to gain possession of the Collector's office.

THE STORY OF A DRUNKARD

How His Sister Secretly Cured Him

You Can Prepare It at Home and Use It Without the Knowledge of Anyone.

For 15 years I was a slave to alcohol. Every penny I could get my hands on was spent over the bar. I earned a good salary and at first I was able to disguise my condition, but finally my employer began to grumble. I fought and prayed against it, still I sank lower and lower until I lost my position. Then my friends turned me down, one after another, until I was left a wreck and alone. Whisky was the cause of it all. I was kicked around from one place to another. Drunk practically all the time. All I wanted or cared for was whisky, and I had reached that point where I would not stop drinking of my own accord.

A friend of former days wrote my sister, whose home was in Germany, telling of my pitiful condition. She consulted a famous chemist. He gave her a prescription, a secret formula, and told her if she could arrange to put it in my coffee or tea it would destroy the appetite for alcohol in any form. She took the first steamer for New York, and when she found me I did not recognize her, and she hardly knew me. She immediately began to give me the remedy without my knowledge. In a few days after she arrived I noticed that whisky did not taste the same. I tried other saloons, with the same result. After a month I could not drink a drop, and in a short time my health began to improve, my brain to clear up. All the desire had left me. The chains of alcohol slavery had been broken. I was a new man. I secured a splendid position, and have never taken a drink since. The craving has never returned. After eight years my sister told me how she worked it and gave me the formula. She was afraid to tell me the secret before for fear I might go back. It is a simple, inexpensive home remedy which can be had at Johnson, Enderle & Pauley's, Wolff-Wilson's or at any first-class drug store, and I advise everyone who has a relative or friend addicted to the liquor habit in any form to try it. Here is the prescription: Ask any druggist for prepared Tescum powders; dissolve one powder in Coffee, Tea, Water or any other liquid; give one powder twice a day. Each powder makes a dose. Do not let the individual know Tescum is being administered. It is tasteless and cannot be detected by anyone.

In a short time all desire for drink should disappear. I feel so grateful for what it did for me that I am glad to tell the whole world about it. I feel sure that after you have tried it you will thank me for publishing it.—H. J. BROWN.—ADVERTISEMENT.

RESISTANCE BY U. S. SHIPS IS PROPOSED BY SENATOR FALL

Would Authorize President to Instruct Captains to "Seize or Destroy" German Craft.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—The resolution introduced in the Senate today by Senator Fall, Republican, of New Mexico points to the depredations on the commerce of the United States by submarines of the central Powers, and authorizes the President "to instruct and direct the commanders of the armed vessels belonging to the United States," to protect American ships and property and "to take, seize or bring into port, or destroy" if unable to seize, any armed vessels of either of the central Powers, and particularly of the German Government, which have committed or are threatening to commit depredations against ships conveying Americans or American property.

It would make it legal also for the commander and crew of any American merchant vessel to "oppose and defend against any search or the restraint, seizure, or attack, which shall be attempted on such vessel" by any armed ship of the central Powers and to "repel by force any assault or hostility" so committed and to "subdue and capture or destroy" such vessels.

On the army side the President would be authorized, "in the event of a declaration of war against the United States," or of invasion or of imminent danger of invasion "discovered in his opinion to exist" before the next session of Congress, "to call into service in addition to the regular army and the national guard 500,000 men to serve not more than three years, or during the continuance of the "existing differences" with the central Powers.

The President also would be given authority to accept volunteers and to organize the 500,000 men called into the proper service branches and to officer them when the Senate is not in session by his commission alone.

The resolution says that when Germany and her allies "shall disavow" and cause their commanders "to refrain from the lawless depredations and outrages hitherto encouraged and authorized" and shall cause "the laws of nations to be observed," the commanders of merchant ships may be directed to "submit to any regular search" by central Power war vessels and to refrain from "any force of character." The act would continue in force for six months "and until the end of the next session of Congress thereafter.

GERMANY'S BUDGET FOR YEAR INCREASED TO $1,258,500,000

New Expense to Be Covered by Taxes, Thus Reassuring War Loan Subscribers as to Interest.

BERLIN, Feb. 23. (By Wireless to Sayville, Feb. 24.)—This year's imperial budget amounts to 5,035,000,000 marks, ($1,258,500,000) as against 3,758,000,000 marks last year, an increase of 1,277,000,000, it was announced in the Reichstag today by Count von Roedern, the Finance Minister.

The ordinary income provided for amounted to 4,941,000,000 marks, as against 3,659,000,000 marks, Count von Roedern stated, while the extraordinary budget totalled 93,000,000 marks against 99,000,000 marks.

"The new expense," says a summary of the address, "which amounts to 1,250,000,000 marks, ($312,500,000) will be covered by taxes in order to maintain the safe practice all along observed in war financing. Thus the subscribers to the war loans are assured that the interest on their loans will be regularly provided for by taxation."

The new taxes will be on war profits and also on coal, while additional taxes on traffic are estimated to produce about 300,000,000 marks.

Giving of Short Weight, Attempts at Bribery and Injury to Competitors Alleged.

BOISE, Idaho, Feb. 24.—Eight corporations and 11 individuals were named in an indictment returned this afternoon by the United States grand jury for alleged conspiracy and unlawful combination in restraint of interstate commerce and in violation of the Sherman antitrust act in the buying, selling, manufacture and shipping of creamery and dairy products.

The indictment alleges that these operations injuriously affected the business of 172 independent concerns and caused injury to the general public, "but more particularly the States of Idaho, Montana, Utah, Washington, Oregon, Wyoming, Nevada and California."

"They have given short weight in manufactured products," the indictment recites. It is charged that the defendants made attempts to bribe the agents of common carriers to divert to them shipments of raw materials intended for competitors; that they hired employes of competitors to injure such competitors, and that they prevented competitors from obtaining storage facilities.

Georgia "Dry" Law Upheld.

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 24.—The State Supreme Court today upheld the constitutionality of the Georgia prohibition law which limits the amount of liquor a citizen may have on hand at any one time. It held also that liquor in excess of the prescribed amount may be seized and destroyed by State authorities, even though it was in possession of a citizen before the new law became effective.

Building Housing 100 Lepers Burned.

HAVANA, Feb. 24.—The pesthouse at Mariel, in which more than 100 lepers were kept, was burned today. Many of the lepers made threats to fire the building when they were removed to Mariel from the San Lazaro Hospital some weeks ago.

The DUO-ART

Is Godowsky at His Best

A number of Godowsky's finest interpretations, played in his happiest moods, are recorded on Duo-Art rolls. Godowsky himself wondered at the reproduction of his playing on the Duo-Art. He exclaimed:

*" * * * * it would be inconceivable if I had not actually experienced this marvel of hearing myself play—if I had not recognized my touch, my characteristics, my art itself."*

The Duo-Art is the world's great pianists. The very art of the masters of the keyboard is preserved in Duo-Art rolls. Besides actually reproducing the very playing of these immortal artists, it is a perfect Pianola, using any standard 88-note music roll—and it is a piano, which can be played from the keyboard.

—FOR THE REST OF YOUR LIFE.

Every morning your trousers will look spick and span from belt to boot—smooth and free from wrinkles and without that shiny look that the iron usually leaves. You will feel satisfied and confident with your natty appearance and the inspiring thought that you have started the day as a successful looking man.

ONE DOLLAR is the only cost. You save that the first month in tailors' bills. Furthermore you save your trousers, for the tailor's hot pressing iron scorches the life out of the cloth—makes it shiny—while the hot steam rots the fabric.

Leahey's HEATLESS Trousers Press
(Protected by U. S. Letters Patent Number 1,112,923)

A Presser, a Creaser, a Stretcher and a Hanger that protects your trousers from dust and moths, all combined in one. First cost is the last cost—no operating expense whatsoever. You have your trousers freshly pressed every morning of your life, FREE.

Live Dealers!

One dealer alone has sold 36,000 Presses. Another sold one a minute for 8 hours in first day's sale. It's the greatest seller since the Safety Razor.

The Leahey's Press is advertised to 15,000,000 people subscribing to 49 leading magazines and Metropolitan newspapers.

Have you placed your order? If not, better write, phone or wire NOW for sample lot of 25 presses—dealer's discounts—and get in shape for a quick turnover at our advertising expense.

How the HEATLESS Press Works

Simply lay your trousers in the press at night. Snap on the spring steel clips. Hang over the back of a chair or in the closet—that's all. It don't take much more time than to throw them over a chair.
In the morning you have freshly pressed trousers that wear like iron because the cloth is not hammered and ground to pieces by the tailor's hot, heavy pressing "goose."
By this 20th century method of HEATLESS pressing one pair of trousers lasts like two pair used to, and the millionaire with 50 pairs has nothing on you.
Made of specially selected, tough fibre board. No wood to warp, check, split or splinter.

Two Fashion Pointers for Well-Dressed Men

1. Have all your trousers always in condition. Keep them in Leahey's Presses in the closet instead of the ordinary hangers. They stay correctly creased, pressed, retain their shape and are always protected from dirt and moths.
2. The pressing iron will not take the bag out of loosely woven cloth like Scotch mixtures. Leahey's HEATLESS Press will. Stretch the trousers well when placing them in your Leahey's Press.

Out-of-Town Men

Every live dealer has the Leahey's Heatless Trousers Press. If yours hasn't, give him a dollar and tell him to get you one or send us a dollar and we will send you one by parcel post provided you send your dealer's name together with the names of five friends whom we might interest in purchasing through your dealer when he gets them.

,000-TON WARSHIP IS LARGEST UNITED STATES COULD EMPLOY

avy Department Reports That it Is Biggest Craft Which Could Use Panama Canal and American Harbors.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—An 80,000-on battleship mounting fifteen 18-ch guns, having a sped of 25 knots n hour and costing $50,000,000, would e the largest war craft which the nited States could employ, according a report to Congres prepared by the Navy Department in response to a request for specifications of the biggest fighting craft that could use the Panama Canal and American harbors.

"A single such vessel, however," it adds, "would not be of great value to the United States Navy, as it would not be suited to act in unison with the other major units of our fleet. It would be necesary to lay down not less than five."

The European war, the report says, has as yet brought no conclusive answer to the question of what types are most desirable.

ACTION ON GERMAN SITUATION MAY COME THIS WEEK

President Expected to Ask Congress for Some Authority Before Adjournment.

LANSING ON A VACATION

American Negro Among Survivors of a Ship Torpedoed Without Warning.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—President Wilson's plan for meeting the crisis with Germany gave no outward evidence of change today.

Although three submarine disasters in which American seamen were involved were reported to the State Department today only one seemed on first information to constitute an invasion of American rights. American Consuls reported that the Norwegian steamer Skrim and the Norwegian bark Blenheim, each with an American seaman aboard, had been destroyed, but provision had been made for the safety of the crews.

A dispatch from Consul Osborn at Havre, however, said the Norwegian steamer Alice had been attacked and shelled without warning, and that Theodore Joseph, an American negro, was among the survivors.

Complete information on the Alice case had not been received tonight, and for the present it takes its place with several others about which the State Department is preparing evidence. President Wilson is understood to be particularly anxious that any request he may make for further authority have behind it incontestible proof that such authority is needed to protect American rights.

So far as learned, the arrival of Consul Osborn's dispatch regarding the Alice was the only development of note. In most quarters it is believed there will be no important announcement before Tuesday at least.

Lansing on a Vacation.

The possibility that Secretary Lansing, who departed last night for a three-day visit to White Sulphur Springs, may in reality be preparing an important document for the President was given some credence today, especially in diplomatic quarters. It was recalled that on several occasions previously the Secretary had taken advantage of such trips to compile data on important subjects. There has been no intimation at the State Department, however, that his absence is due to any other cause than a desire for a rest.

President Wilson this afternoon had a half hour's conference with Chairman Stone of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Vice President Marshall, Senator Saulsbury, President pro tem. of the Senate, and Senators James, Pomerene, Hollis and Swanson. It was stated the conference did not discuss the present legislative situation, not the international situation.

Austrians Investigating Questions Raised in American Note.

VIENNA (via Berlin and wireless to the Associated Press via Tuckerton), Feb. 24.—It was stated at the Foreign Office today that the inquiry of the American Government respecting Austria's submarine warfare policy was receiving all possible attention, but that the date on which the reply might be expected was still unknown.

It was learned that authorities on international law and naval affairs are investigating the questions raised in the aide memoire presented by Ambassador Penfield and their bearing on the notes exchanged in the cases of the steamers Ancona and Persia. The reply will be made as soon as the officials entrusted with this matter have reported.

Germany Said to Guarantee Safeguarding of Chinese Lives.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—Germany has sent a reply to China's note regarding submarine warfare, Reuter's Shanghai correspondent telegraphs.

The reply, says the dispatch, declares that Germany has been compelled by the necessities of the military situation to institute her submarine warfare, but that she will take adequate measures to safeguard Chinese lives.

ROOF OF INJURED MAN'S MOUTH IS SUPPORTED BY BRACES

When Driving Auto He Ran Into Wire, Which Caused Upper Teeth and Palate to Fall Down.

Charles J. Dawdy, a veterinary, of Greenville, Ill., is at the Baptist hospital here, in a critical condition from injuries suffered a week ago at his home in a peculiar automobile accident.

In driving his machine around his own house, Dawdy ran into a wire clothes line, stretched between two trees. The wire struck him in the mouth, throwing him into the back seat of his car, cutting his lips an inch on both sides and fracturing the upper jaw on both sides, causing his upper teeth and palate to fall down. Several other bones of his face were fractured. Since his arrival here he has been unable to talk. The roof of his mouth is supported by braces, placed in the mouth after the manner of shoring in a mine.

4 Killed When Auto Hits Street Car.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 24.—Four men were killed and another probably was fatally injured here today when their large touring car crashed into a Madisonville street car. The motorman of the car and several passengers were cut by flying glass. Andrew Kreis, C. F. Johnson, James Montgomery and Edward Ewald were killed. Martin Kreis, a brother of Andrew Kreis, was probably fatally injured.

Last year 40,594 Automobile Want Ads were printed in the Post-Dispatch, 5403 more than were printed by the FOUR other St. Louis newspapers COMBINED!

ANOTHER GENEROUS MILLIONAIRE TELLS THE WORLD ABOUT SELF.

Mr. J. C. B. Walthall, an oil and gas millionaire from Oklahoma, stopping at a well-known hostelry, states in an interview how his life and happiness was saved by reading the following prescription in his paper. He is quoted as saying: "Strange how a little incident changed my entire life. Wealth came to me after years of toil, and naturally, as most men, I abused its privileges until I became a nervous wreck, with throbbing brain, aches and pains, loss of appetite, energy and ambition. In fact life seemed not worth living. Hope was dead and pleasure had fled. Then I read a prescription for just such ailment as beset me. My druggist filled it for me. Improvement followed improvement and I continued its use until hale and hearty once more. Judicious living has kept me strong, stronger than before. I kept the prescription and want it published to help others. Here it is: One oz. each of tincture cadomene compound, compound fluid balmwort, compound essence cardiol and three ounces compound syrup sarsaparilla, mix together, shake well and take a teaspoonful after each meal and one at bedtime. My what vim it gives, only one such as I can ever realize."

NOTE—Local druggists and physicians commend highly the peculiar virtues of this prescription and any good druggist can fill it.—ADVERTISEMENT.

BRITISH ADVANCE ON THE ANCRE AND CAPTURE VILLAGE

Line South and Southeast of Serre Pushed Forward on Mile and Half Front.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—The village of Petit Miraumont, south of the Ancre, in France, has been entered by British troops as a result of an advance southeast of Miraumont, says the official statement tonight. The British line south and southeast of Serre, north of the Ancre, has been pushed forward on a front of over a mile and a half.

The text of the statement reads:

"As a result of the unceasing pressure of our troops, the enemy today vacated further important positions on both banks of the Ancre. We made considerable progress south and southeast of Miraumont on a front of a mile and entered the village of Petit Miraumont. We also advanced our line on a front of more than one and one-half miles south and southeast of Serre.

"During the night the enemy rushed one of our posts west of Lens. We recovered the post by an immediate counter attack.

"There has been considerable mutual artillery activity at intervals during the day and night on both banks of the Somme, southwest of Arras and south of Ypres."

Parts of Advanced German Position in Somme Abandoned.

BERLIN, by wireless to Sayville, Feb. 24.—The Germans yesterday abandoned parts of an advanced position in the Somme sector to the British, the War Office announces. A French attack in the Champagne failed.

German Lines in Vosges Penetrated by French Detachment.

PARIS, Feb. 24.—The War Office announces that a French detachment penetrated the German lines in the Vosges, north of Senones, last night.

"One of our dirigibles last night dropped bombs on factories in the region of Briey and returned without incident to the station to which it is attached," the statement says. "Four hundred kilograms (880 pounds) of projectiles were thrown by our aviators on the German bivouacks in the forest of Spinecourt."

LEGALITY OF GARDNER LOAN PLAN IS BEING CONSIDERED

Governor Meets St. Louis Bankers in Effort to Borrow $2,000,000 to Pay State's Debts.

The application of Gov. Gardner to the St. Louis banks for a loan of $2,000,000 to pay off the State debts of the Major administration was referred yesterday by the St. Louis Clearing House Association to Attorney-General McAllister, Frederick W. Lehmann and John F. Lee for an opinion on the legality of the proposed loan.

It was understood in financial circles that the St. Louis banks would make the loan if it could be legally done.

Gov. Gardner, as has been told, is seeking the loan at 4 per cent interest to refund loans aggregating $2,000,000, bearing 6 and 8 per cent interest. If he can get the money at 4 per cent the Governor figures that he can save the State about $60,000 a year in interest charges.

A special meeting of the Clearing House Association was called at 11 a. m. yesterday to hear Gov. Gardner's proposition. The Governor and the presidents and other officials of most of the banks and trust companies were in conference for nearly an hour. N. A. McMillan, president of the Clearing House Association, stated that the bankers would await the opinion of the attorneys before giving the loan further consideration.

15,169 VEHICLES USED FREE BRIDGE IN THE LAST WEEK

Total Is Largest of Any Seven-Day Period Since the First; Total to Midnight Friday Was 63,619.

Last week's traffic on the free bridge was the largest, except for seven days beginning Jan. 27, which has been recorded since its opening on Jan. 20. The total of vehicles passing over the bridge in both directions for the week, including the hours from 7 p. m. until midnight, was 15,169.

This was 2552 more than in the preceding seven days, but 595 fewer than for the period between Jan. 27 and Feb. 2. The count for the last-named week was for day traffic only. Between Jan. 20 and midnight Friday, 63,619 vehicles of all kinds had crossed the bridge.

GUARD SERVICE AS SUBSTITUTE

Washington U. Art Faculty Accepts it for Physical Education.

In response to a request from Lieutenant-Colonel Leroy K. Robbins of the First Missouri Infantry, the faculty of Arts and Sciences of Washington University has voted to allow the substitution of service in the national guard for physical education.

This places Washington University on a footing, in this respect, with the University of Michigan and several of the leading universities of the East, in which one year's credit in physical training is allowed students who belong to the national guard, upon the presentation of a certificate from the commanding officers in that organization.

DEUTSCHERBUND ASKS BRYAN TO LEAD AGAINST WAR

Detroit Body Wires Wilson Not to Press for Authority to Use Armed Forces of United States.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 24.—Deutscherbund has sent an appeal to President Wilson to avoid war with Germany. It has also nominated William Jennings Bryan to be its leader in opposing a "hypocritical and cowardly war." The following telegram was sent by the bund to the President:

"His Excellency, Woodrow Wilson—Since the Senate Judiciary Committee has, according to press reports, failed to agree to the bill authorizing the President to use the armed forces of the United States, we, American citizens, about 300 in number, believing we represent a general sentiment, have discussed the welfare of our country and now do petition you, the honorable President of our country, to let the matter rest there. It will restore good feeling everywhere and preserve that what our people desire—peace."

The telegram is signed by Charles Ruesskamp, C. H. Schrieter, William Wuestoff, Philip Schaubner and Hen Schumaccher.

This telegram was sent to Bryan:

"Tories, the subsidized press, ammunition makers and those who put the dollars above humanity are doing everything in their power for a technicality to force this country into a hypocritical and cowardly war. The patriotic people look to you and have selected you as their leader to save them from this horrible situation, as you have done before."

Few Drops When Corns Hurt, Pain Stops! Corns Lift Out

Don't let corns ache twice! Lift any corn or callus off with fingers—Here's magic!

No humbug! Any corn, whether hard, soft or between the toes, will loosen right up and lift out, without any pain.

Ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus.

Put a few drops directly upon any tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly the corn or callus will loosen and can be lifted off with the fingers.

Freezone doesn't eat out the corns or calluses but shrivels them without any irritation.

Just think! No pain at all; no soreness or smarting when applying it or afterwards.

Women! Keep freezone on your dresser and apply a few drops whenever a corn begins aching. Pain stops, corn goes! —ADV.

DUTCH INDIGNANT OVER TORPEDOEING OF SEVEN SHIPS

Vessels Attacked by Submarine Thought They Were Proceeding Under Safe Conduct.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—Great indignation has arisen in Holland against Germany because of the torpedoeing of seven large Dutch steamers, which believed they were proceeding under safe conduct from Germany. Four of the vessels remained afloat. They were torpedoed Thursday near the western entrance of the English Channel. It is estimated the steamers with their cargoes were worth $11,600,000.

The German legation at The Hague, says a Reuter dispatch from the Dutch capital, has issued a long explanation of the torpedoeing in which it says:

"The date for the safe home coming of Dutch vessels from English ports, which at first was fixed for Feb. 5, was subsequently, in view of the situation in Holland, postponed to Feb. 9 and Feb. 11. On Feb. 14, Dutch ship owners were informed that their vessels could leave in a group on Feb. 22 or March 17.

"For those vessels leaving on Feb. 22, only relative safety could be guaranteed, but vessels leaving on March 17, would have an absolute guarantee against submarine attacks, as it would be impossible by Feb. 22 to inform with certainty all submarine commanders of the concessions made to Holland."

Vessels Sailed Thursday.

The fleet of seven Dutch vessels left Falmouth on Thursday, three being outward bound from Holland and four homeward bound. The steamers had been released at the special request of the Dutch Government. No inquiry was made of the British authorities as to the best way of sailing or the proper precautions to take. The captains received special private instructions from the Dutch Government. An official of the Dutch legation at London went to Falmouth and interviewed the captains of the seven ships so as to be sure that they understood the instructions. The vessels bore the customary marks and lights. When they were a short way from Falmouth (at the western end of the English channel) they were attacked by a German submarine and three of the vessels were sunk and four damaged severely.

The crews were landed yesterday.

An official statement from Berlin received in Amsterdam and forward by Reuter repeats the statement issued by the German legation at The Hague, and adds:

"The responsibility for it falls on the ship owners who preferred to send out their vessels on Feb. 22 on the promise of relative security instead of waiting until March 17, when absolute security was promised. The report of our submarines has not yet arrived."

DOG STANDS GUARD OVER BODY OF MASTER, DEAD IN SALOON

Abandons Post Only When Daughter of Man Is Summoned, After Nearly Half an Hour.

A small but determined dog stood guard over Jacob Laum's body for for nearly a half hour after Laum fell dead on the floor of Mike Molinski's saloon, 933 Brooklyn street, at 7:45 last evening, and kept all comers, including a physician and two policemen, from touching the dead man. It was not until Laum's daughter, Marie, was summoned from the family home at 928 Tyler street, that the dog was called off and the body removed.

Laum fell to the floor just after he had placed a tin pail on the bar, to be filled with beer. The dog, which was described as a "lumberyard cur," took its stand over the body immediately, growling savagely at strangers, and as it was apparent that the man was dead, the policeman did not think best to kill the dog.

At the city dispensary it was said that Laum had died from heart disease. He was 53 years old, and a foundry foreman.

It is the intention of the Broadway Savings Trust Co. to dispose of the property as rapidly as possible.

COMMISSION PLAN OPPOSED

Maplewood Residents Voice Opposition to Proposed Government.

About 300 residents of Maplewood attended a meeting at the city hall there last night to voice opposition to the commission form of Government, which is to be voted upon at a special election March 6. The proposed commission form will replace the present Mayor and eight Councilmen with three commissioners, who would serve without pay.

Under the present system the Mayor draws an annual salary of $120 and the Councilmen $60 each. Four of the present Councilmen spoke last night against the commission form. The proponents of the plan declare it would save the city $2500 to $3000 a year in salaries.

ROOSEVELT AGREES OLD MEN SHOULD GO TO WAR FIRST

Commends Pennsylvania Editor for Advancing This View; Duty to Save the Young.

FRANKLIN, Pa., Feb. 24.—Col. Roosevelt believes, with a Franklin editor, that the old men should be the first to answer the call to arms. Recently W. P. F. Ferguson wrote an editorial in the Venango Daily Herald under the caption: "Let the Old Die First." He sent a copy of the editorial to Col. Roosevelt and received the following reply:

"My Dear Ferguson—Good for you. I entirely agree with you the old should go where possible, and it is for the old to die, where that can be brought about in a war, so as to save the young. Of course, if a man has a wife and children dependent upon him he ought not to go to war until there is such a demand as there was in the civil war, but he should go if his wife and children are not dependent upon him for their bread.

"If we now go to war with Germany I should a good deal rather be killed myself than to have my two oldest boys, who are married and have children, killed. And, bitter though the choice would be, I would rather expose them to battle than their two younger and unmarried brothers."

Birth Rate at Lowest Level.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—The 1916 birth rate in Islington was only 22.38 per 1000 of population, the lowest in the history of the borough. The average for the preceding 10 years was 25.29.

DOG SHOT, BUT FOUND TO BE INNOCENT OF BOY'S DEATH

No Sign of Rabies in Animal Which Was Suspected of Having Bitten Sappington Lad.

The killing of a foxhound owned by Emil R. Kiesling of Sappington, St. Louis County, proved that the dog did not have rabies and was innocent of the death of 5-year-old George Sappington, who succumbed to rabies two weeks ago at Alexian Brothers' Hospital.

Before the boy died a number of dogs were taken to his bedside in the hope that he could identify the one that had bitten him. He took no notice of any of the dogs except Kiesling's, from which he turned away. This fastened suspicion upon the dog and the authorities insisted that it be shot, although the owner protested.

The dog's brain was examined by City Bacteriologist Baldwin, who yesterday reported no sign of rabies in the dog.

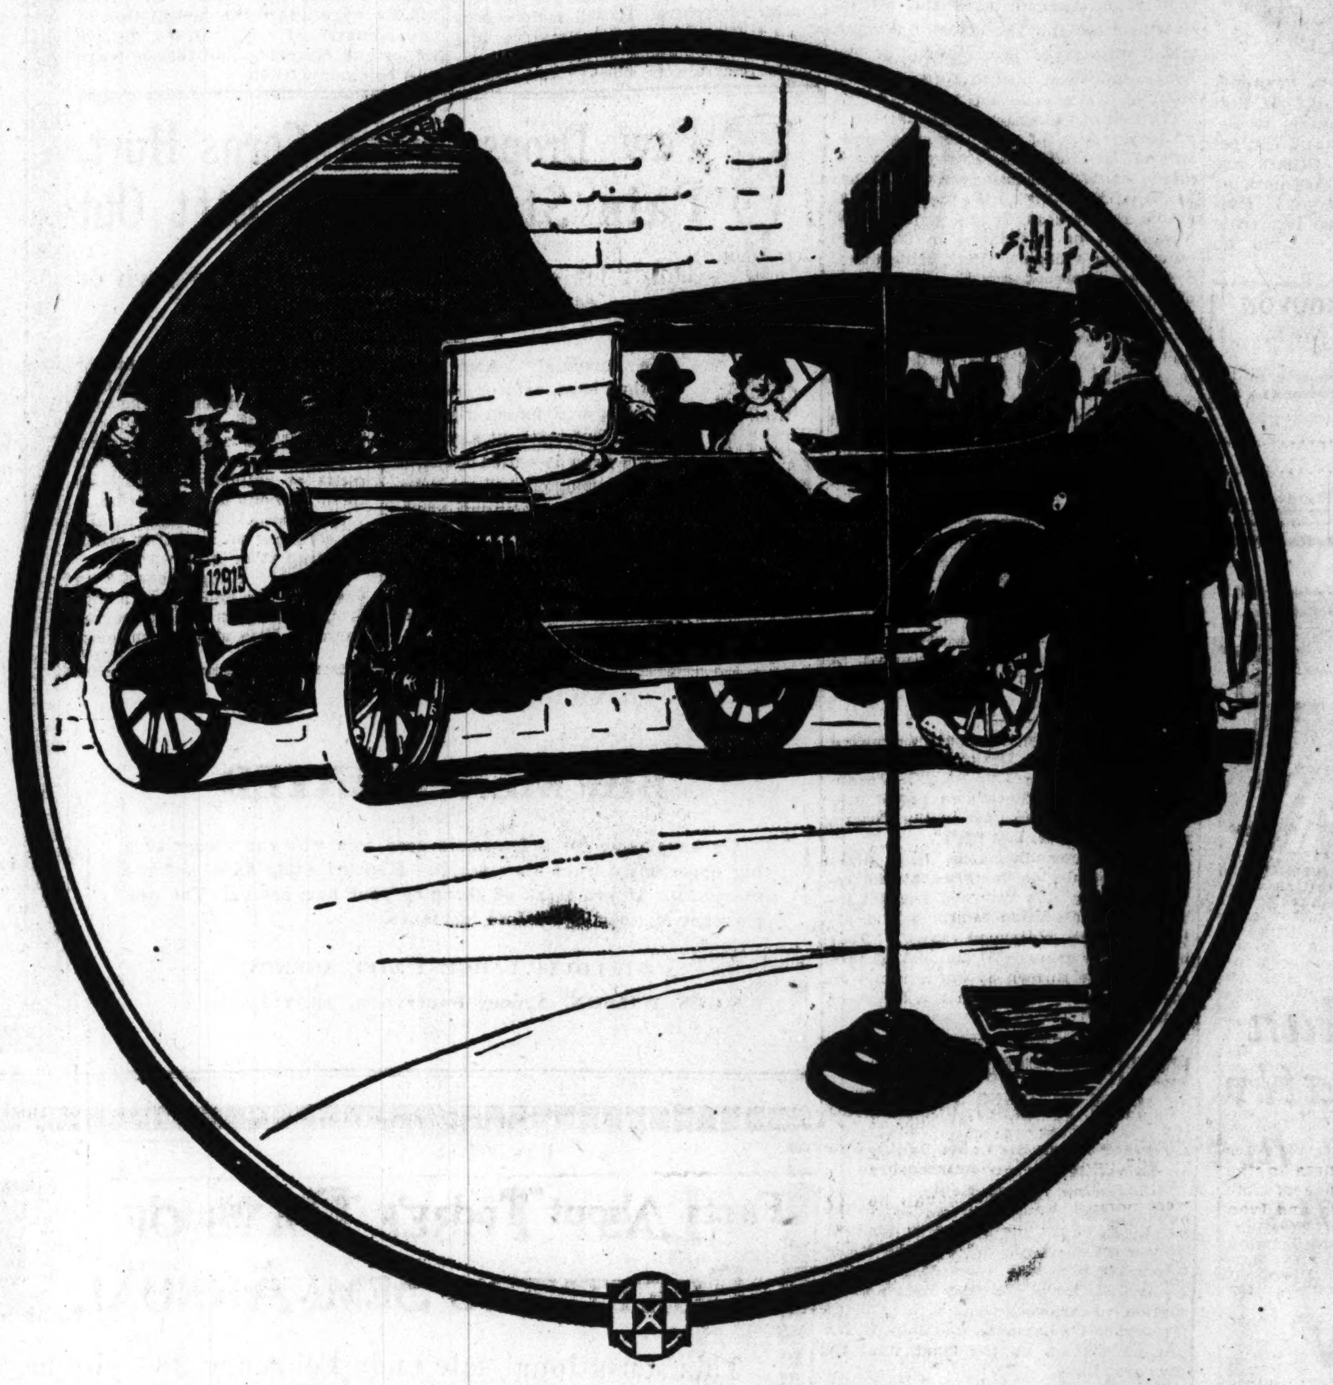
CHANDLER SIX $1395



There Is No Other Six Like This For Anything Like This Price

THE Chandler offers intrinsic value greater than other cars for which you are asked to pay much more. Greater value in materials, design, equipment, and, above all else, in the dependable and enduring service of its marvelous motor.

You may say it is easy to make such a claim for the Chandler. It is. And IT IS EASY TO PROVE SUCH A CLAIM FOR THE CHANDLER.

Year-old Chandlers command as high or higher price in the used car market than year-old cars of other makes selling, when new, for two or three hundred dollars more.

Could any further evidence be asked, to prove Chandler leadership in value? It wouldn't seem so, but let's make thorough inquiry.

What other make of car, at anything like the Chandler price, offers you a motor which has been developed, refined and perfected throughout four years of conscientious manufacture and not subjected to radical changes or experimental devices? None.

What other make of car, at anything like the Chandler price, offers you such a proven mechanism as the whole Chandler chassis? None.

What other make of car, at anything like the Chandler price, offers you all those features characteristic of the highest priced, high-grade cars—Bosch high tension magneto; solid cast aluminum motor base, extending from frame to frame; big silent chains instead of noisy gears for driving the motor shafts; full floating and silent spiral bevel gear rear axle and light running annular ball bearings in transmission, differential and rear wheels? None.

What other make of car at anything like the Chandler price offers you more beautiful and comfortable bodies than the Chandler? None.

Chandler policy has always kept the Chandler price low. Relatively it is lower today, when so many prices have been inflated, than ever before.

RECORD-BREAKING DISTANCE RUNNER TO COMPETE HERE

Joie Ray Consents to Meet Ivan Meyer and Others in Coliseum Feature.

MICHIGAN TO SEND TEAM

Wolverine Relay Quartet Agrees to Meet Missourians in Dual Event.

A program made up of 11 relay races, five special invitation events, five open handicap numbers and four races exclusively for the high schools will be presented on March 10 at the Coliseum as the first Annual Indoor Relay Carnival of the Western Association of the Amateur Union, according to an announcement made last night by President Tom Watts of the W. A. A. U.

This meet is to replace the annual relay carnival of the Missouri Athletic Association, and is being arranged on fairly pretentious lines.

Of the special events, the 50-yards high and low hurdles stand out as the most attractive. The success of the promoters in securing the entry of Fred Murray of the New York A. C. for these events promises two races of unusual merit. Murray will be asked to compete against Bob Simpson, world's champion, who will run in the Missouri U. colors, Roscoe Packer of Ames and Renick, another Missouri U. star.

Vieing with these events will be the special relay race between Michigan and Missouri universities and the race of probably more purely local interest between Washington and St. Louis universities. The Billikens are striving hard to win this race, as they have been entirely unsuccessful in their conflicts with Washington in every branch of sport for the past two or three years.

The special 50-yard dash has drawn out considerable talent, too, having Hardy and Dowding of the Illinois A. C., Renick and Simpson of Missouri and Mahl and Scholz of this city.

Joie Ray in "Ball Mile."

The "Ball Mile" will bring together some of the greatest runners in the Middle West, the apeparance of Joie Ray, the famed I. A. C. flier, and Ivan Myer, his teammate, Carroll of Michigan U. and Tenny of Chicago U. being assured. The trophy for this event is now held by A. H. (Mike) Mason of Illinois U., who won the race at the Coliseum last season.

The full list of events will be as follows:

RELAYS—W. A. A. U. championship at two miles; Illinois State high schools; Missouri State high schools; St. Louis high schools, Mercantile schoolboys (eighth and ninth grade), Sunday schools, Turnverein Alumni; Michigan vs. Missouri and St. Louis vs. Washington.

SPECIAL INVITATION — 50 yards low hurdles; 50 yards dash; 50 yards high hurdles; "Ball Mile," and pole vault.

OPEN HANDICAP—50 yards dash, 600 yards run, 1000 yards run, high jump and one-mile walk.

INTERSCHOLASTIC—"Hess half mile," 50 yards dash (junior and senior) and 600 yards run.

This meet is being promoted and will be conducted by officials of the W. A. A. U., who have enlisted the aid of Dr. C. W. Bassett, physical director of the M. A. A., and his assistant, Wilbur Hutsell, at the almost certain risk of a financial deficit. Conservative estimates of the probable expenses run as high as $3500. Only the generous support of the public will make it possible to take that much in "at the gate."

However, President Tom Watts of the W. A. A. U. is sanguine in his belief that St. Louisans will support athletics of a superior brand. He also has been instrumental in bringing to this city for the outdoor season the senior National A. A. U. championships to be held next summer.

Rival Show in the East.

For the indoor games, however, he has been successful in securing many of the foremost performers in the game today, despite the fact that the Meadowbrook meet will be held on the same night in Philadelphia. This purports to be the most stupendous indoor meet of the season.

Just what the talent will be for the handicap and high school events in the Coliseum meet, Watts and his assistants are as yet unable to determine, as entry blanks were mailed only during the past week. However, for the special invitation events the entry of all the stars sought already has been pledged.

Clubs in 3-Cornered Race.

It is also known that teams representing the I. A. C. of Chicago, the M. A. A. of this city and the Kansas City A. C. will contend in the triangular race for the two-mile relay championship of the W. A. A. U. This event should be productive of some of the keenest sport of the night. For the commercial and other nondescript relays little is known of the personnel of the teams, although it has been the experience of promoters in the past that many of these races are interestingly perpetrated, although no records are broken.

The meet, it has been found, has the ardent support of many followers of the sport who hitherto took only an impersonal interest in athletics. They are, however, mostly of the class who are disappointed over the failure of the M. A. A. to more actively support athletics of any description. Competitive athletics are no longer a vogue at the M. A. A.

JOHNNY GOLDEN BENEFIT NETTED INVALID $3448

A check calling for $3448 was mailed Saturday to Johnny Golden, the former newsie, who is critically ill in Phoenix, Ariz. It represented the total sum realized from the testimonial entertainment held at the Imperial Theater, two weeks ago, for the benefit of Golden.

Sam Greenberg and "Lefty" Mason, newsboys, arranged the affair which from the standpoint of attendance and the number of boxers, wrestlers and singers participating, was the greatest ever known in St. Louis. Hundreds of St. Louisans contributed. The newsboys donated a sum approximating $400. Box office receipts totaled $900.

CONDITIONS—Men must wrestle to a finish, best two falls in three, strangle hold barred.

WEIGHT—Men will weigh in at 133 pounds, give or take two pounds.

By John E. Wray.

TIMOROUS parents, crying out against enlistment of the family's pride and joy for military duty, need not feel that all danger is past, if he escapes the patriotic fever. You never can tell—he might live to become a wrestler.

It must be understood that war has no monopoly on physical horrors. Considering the number of men participating in honest-to-goodness matches, the percentage of wrestling casualties would be found to be quite high, though perhaps not as severe as on the battlefield.

Also, they have a wide range in variety. Any mishap from a fractured spine to a broken promise not to swear, may result from mat matches. And it all comes under the head of sport, be it understood.

When a man picks you up and essays to smash you bodily to the ground; when he tries to put your arms in escrow, while clamping his legs across your wind-pipe or short ribs, squeezing like a cider press betimes; when he thrusts your arm upwards behind your own back till either it or your resolution breaks; when he holds you immovable with one hold, while he racks your toes or feet to the cracking point with another; when, in short, he tries to apply every variety of physical torture known to the inquisition, during struggles that sometimes last for hours, you are inclined to wonder what in the name of Joe Miller ever caused it all to be called a sport.

No Money in Wrestling.

AND yet sport it MUST be—for there is no money in it, if we except the rather isolated instances of Frank Gotch, Joe Stecher and one or two others, not over half a dozen all told.

At this point we arrive at Al Wasem, formerly of St. Louis, now of Clifton, Ariz., holder of the world's lightweight championship, who will this afternoon, at the Columbian Athletic Club, wrestle Jack Fisher of Oklahoma for the lightweight championship of the United States.

Al looks and talks as though he were normal, but something must be wrong. Although he can prove by figures that wrestling is a terrific test, with few financial rewards, even for the topmost, here he is back at it again, after a rest of two years.

Wasem is not being treated for his trouble; nor has he been under observation. He is merely one young man who loves the game and is willing to defend his title, despite the risks and the lack of rewards.

To illustrate the lack of money returns from wrestling, even for a champion, Wasem can point to the fact that it cost him $102 to stage the match in which he won the title from Johnny Billiter; and that he will receive only $300, out of which he pays all expenses from Clifton, Ariz., for risking his honors against Fisher.

Wasem Explains.

"GLEN WALLAR hypnotized me," said Wasem. "That's the only excuse I have for re-entering the game. I'm married, in business and making good money without having to take punishment. What do I want coming back to a sport which doesn't earn a decent living for half a dozen men in the country?

"Every time I think of Max Luttbeg, in his day the most noted wrestler of his weight, and then think how he had to grub for a few dollars, after he lost his grip, I get cold feet. Wrestling is only fit for a rubber man, with a life interest in a subtreasury. A poor flesh-and-blood man with his way to make had better keep out of it."

Olson Bouts End Fatally.

AS for the rough side of the game, just recall that Charley Olson, well known to St. Louisans and now the controlling figure in Indianapolis amusement enterprises, killed two men on the mat, and you can see that the firing line is not the only danger point.

The terror of the test is the real answer to the often asked question: "Why are so many wrestling bouts faked?" The punishment feared in finish bouts causes many frame-ups.

Wrestling is supposed to be a game of leverage. In reality it is a game of torture, in which the most adept at inflicting pain gets the surest and quickest results.

"I have learned my lesson," said Wasem, who exhibits only one mark of his many encounters, a cauliflower ear. "The first real match I ever had was with Frank Tiefenthaler, of this city. He had won the first fall. In the second he had me tied up so that I couldn't escape and was twisting my leg until I could hear something cracking.

"'Let go that leg—what are you trying to do?' I shouted at him.

"He was so startled that he dropped his hold and I flopped him for the fall a few seconds later, and he gave up the match. But had he seen my leg in the dressing room after that fall he would have been a sore butcher. My knee was as big as a bucket and I could not possibly have gone on.

"A remark sometimes throws you clear out. In one of my matches with a first rater I had a hammer lock on him. You know what that means—pushing his arm back until it either pops out of the shoulder socket or breaks. One of the spectators in the front row exclaimed: 'Let go of him, man, you're breaking his arm.' I was so surprised that I let go. And I had to work a long time before I obtained another effective hold.

Three Punishing Holds.

"THE toe hold, hammerlock and the scissors are the most punishing of the ordinary holds employed. They are not leverage grips which enable you to turn over a foe by force. They succeed by punishing the opponent until his tongue hangs out and his reason goes—in other words until he's limp.

Former Champion Wants to Wrestle Winner for $1000

Johnny Billiter, in Letter to Post-Dispatch, Offers to Post $500 Forfeit.

Johnny Billiter, former lightweight wrestling champion, in a letter to the Post-Dispatch offers to post a forfeit of $500 to bind a match with the winner of today's title match between Al Wasem and Jack Fisher, here.

Sam Jordan, who handled Billiter in the days when he campaigned for the title, writes in part as follows:

Sporting Editor Post-Dispatch.

Dear Sir—On behalf of Johnny Billiter I dispute the claims of Al Wasem and Jack Fisher, who are wrestling for the world's lightweight title in your city.

I stand ready at any time to match Billiter against the winner of the Wasem-Billiter bout for $1000 a side, winner to take all of the purse given by any organization in your city.

To show you I mean business I will deposit with you a New York draft or money order for $250, or even $500. The weight must be 135 pounds at 3 o'clock the day of the contest. Fisher weighed 139 when Billiter met him before, but he will have to do 135 at 3 o'clock or no match.

Billiter has a better right to the title than either Wasem or Fisher, as he is at all times willing to defend the title and back himself with cash, and that's more than Wasem or Fisher will do.

If the winner of the bout will post his money with you I will have mine there promptly.

Yours truly,
SAM JORDAN,
Navarre Hotel, Toledo.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., Feb. 24.—Members of the Chicago National League baseball club arrived here today and left immediately for their training camp at Pasadena, Cal.

C. C. Pell Wins Racquet Title From Club Mate in Three Straight Sets

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Playing with a brilliancy and dash that surprised even his most ardent admirers Clarence C. Pell, representing Tuxedo, defeated his clubmate, Stanley G. Mortimer, in straight games in the final round of the national racquets championship tournament in the court of the Racquet and Tennis Club, yesterday. Incidentally, in surrendering the crown Mortimer returned it to the man who had won it in 1915.

The match was undoubtedly the fastest played between amateurs in this city in a long while. Probably Mortimer's pride was touched more than his body, for not since he has been prominent at this game had he ever received such a beating. In the second game, especially, Mortimer took on a bewildered look as his opponent piled up the aces in rapid succession, to win at 15 to 1.

Unquestionably Pell is playing the best racquets of his career right now. He not only has more power to his stroke, but by a turning of the wrist at the finish he imparts additional cut to the ball, thereby making it more difficult to handle.

Final round—Clarence C. Pell, Tuxedo, beat Stanley G. Mortimer, Tuxedo, 15—11, 15—1, 15—5.

Kutters and Stars Tie.

In a game between the Keen Kutters and All-Stars of the Saturday afternoon division of the Municipal Soccer League yesterday afternoon, the score resulted in a deadlock, 2—2. Dooley booted both goals for the Kutters while Sexton tallied twice for the Stars.

St. Louis Soccer Men Change Offer to Bethlehemites

Mound City Team Willing to Play Title Series on Champions' Home Grounds.

President Winton Barker of the Missouri State Soccer Football Association stated yesterday that he had again sent a letter to Manager H. W. Trend of the United States soccer champions, presenting the final terms of the Mound City men for a return series. The St. Louis teams had defeated Bethlehem in one game and tied another contest in the holiday series here.

Several letters have passed between the rival football leaders looking to a new series here. St. Louis offered to play Bethlehem three games here, naming a guarantee and a percentage of the receipts.

Thus far the offer has not proven satisfactory. President Barker's latest letter includes a renewal of the old offer, for dates late in March, on the old terms as to guarantee and percentage.

He adds that if Bethlehem does not see fit to accept this proposition the St. Louis team will gladly go to Bethlehem for the series, on the same terms that St. Louis offered.

Owing to the lateness of the season and the ararngements to play the winners of the municipal soccer series, the winners of the St. Louis-professional league race can only compete with Bethlehem on either March 18 or March 25, as far as the Sunday date is concerned.

On March 18 the contract with Robison Field is up and in order to use the park on March 25 or dates in that week, extra payments will have to be made.

LEVINSKY OFFERED GUARANTEE TO BOX JACK MORAN HERE

WADE AND KELLY MATCHED

Welterweights Will Furnish Fistic Feature at F. C. A. C. Show Next Tuesday.

Matchmaker Tommy Sullivan of the Future City Athletic Club, has wired to Bat Levinsky, one of the best light-heavyweight title claimers in the country, an offer to box Jack Moran at the Coliseum, March 6.

Considering the meager returns Levinsky once made on an investment of close to $900, made in him by the same club, on a previous engagement here against St. Louis Tommy Burke, Levinsky ought to feel highly complimented. On the occasion of his previous appearance here fans roared loudly and long because the Battler failed to descend on the unoffending Burke and annihilate him. They considered that Levinsky was not extending himself. Whether this was out of pity for Burke failed to enter into the consideration.

The proposed Levinsky-Moran bout, if closed, will be 12 rounds. Considering that Jack Moran, the youthful Springfield heavyweight, went the same distance with Gunboat Smith, promoters of the bout think the Levinsky match a good one. Gunboat Smith is reported to have advised Moran to take on Levinsky at once. Whether revenge or esteem prompted the suggestion does not appear.

That Levinsky-Dillon Marathon.

Levinsky is one of some six or eight fighters weighing around 175 pounds (Moran's weight is about this figure) now claiming the light-heavyweight title. When not spending his time claiming the title, Levinsky's principal occupation is in fighting Jack Dillon, with whom he has fought no less than 12 engagements. Their trail of no-decision and limited-round fight engagements extends from Toronto to New Orleans, and from Boston to Memphis. They have fought over 100 rounds and only four of their fights, in which decisions were rendered, appear in the guide each winning twice. Last year they fought no less than seven engagements.

This will be Levinsky's eighth year in the ring and only in two of the eight seasons has he failed to battle Jack Dillon.

All of which proves that if Dillon is a Giant Killer, Levinsky must be a super-giant and a tough foe for Moran.

Kelly and Wade Signed.

Next Tuesday's card was altered last night, Jack Moran and Jack Geyer were to have fought, but Geyer could not be located in time to close arrangements.

Instead of this card, Jimmy Wade of Winnipeg, Canada, and Leo Kelly of St. Louis, are announced to furnish a 10-round feature, weight about 145 pounds. Wade recently fought and beat Jack Torres, at Kansas City, according to Sullivan. Other bouts announced are:

| OPPONENT. | Dec. | Rds. | City. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Harry Stone | D | 20 | Sidney |
| Frankie Burns | D | 15 | Boise, Idaho |
| Lee Morrissey | W | 15 | Boise, Idaho |
| Freddie Welsh | ND | 10 | Montreal |
| Johnny O'Leary | ND | 10 | Vancouver |
| Jack Duffy | KO | 7 | Montreal |
| Willie Ritchie | D | 4 | Frisco |
| Frankie Flemings | W | 4 | Frisco |
| Frankie Murphy | KO | 3 | Baton Rouge |

M. A. A. Bowlers Win in Special Matches With Topplers From Chicago

In an intercity bowling match between teams representing the Missouri Athletic Association and the Illinois A. C. of Chicago, at the former club last night, the M. A. A. pin-topplers were victorious by a rather secure margin.

In the first match, the M. A. A. team (Nelson 478, Healy 580, Scharff 530, Bronenkamp 506, Rhoades 517), with a total of 2611 easily defeated the visitors (Anthony 486, Gadd 471, Sandfelder 524, Hicks 508, George 436), who had a team total of 2425.

The M. A. A. bachelors (Roach 544, Lee 477, Brammann 503, Otto 551, Waltke 541) then took the I. A. C. second team into camp, 2616 to 2427.

Healy was high man of the evening with 580. Otto led the second team with 551. On the night, the M. A. A. won by a margin of 377 pins.

McGraw's Advance Guard Alone Totals 44; Main Army Goes South, Later

Giants Pass Through En Route to Marlin—Cardinals Move on Texas This Week With 11 Privates in General Huggins' Baseball Division—N. L. Race Seems Already "In."

By W. J. O'Connor.

A DENTIST, a doctor, a circuit judge, staff photographer and four war correspondents were component parts of the van guard of Giants who who passed through St. Louis last night, creating the impression that there are very few persons left on Broadway, in old New York town. When noses were counted at Union Station by Superintendent of Transportation Eddie Brannick, it was announced that the party totalled 44.

DAVENPORT EXPECTS TO PLAY IN 10 DAYS

CUERO, Tex., Feb. 24.

DAVE DAVENPORT, the Brown pitcher who accidentally shot himself in the left side with a 30-30 rifle last week, is able to be up and about and says he feels no ill effects of the accident. The danger of blood poisoning has passed, the attending physician thinks.

Davenport says he will report to the Browns in Palestine in 10 days unless the doctors prohibit it. He has already signed his contract for the coming season, which he expects to be a good one.

"But," said Brannick apologetically, "the main squad of McGraw's men will not start south until next week."

We don't exactly get McGraw's "main" idea; but unless he intends to colonize a county in Texas or relieve Pershing's expedition along the border, we take it that he's playing a practical, but expensive joke, on a lot of young men who have honest ambitions with baseball as their fruitful field of endeavor.

Before the season is well under way, McGraw must cut his squad to 22 men. Counting only a very few of the regulars, who entrain next Saturday for Marlin Springs, he is already assured of a squad for duty on the diamond tomorrow of almost double the legal requirements.

Did He Overlook Hornsby?

Unquestionably McGraw is an advocate of immediate preparedness. His theory is that an offensive-defensive is the best. Therefore he has corraled all the players in the National League with the exception of Grover Cleveland Alexander, Rogers Hornsby and a few in Boston and is ready to start the training season.

He has retained Dr. George Birs as the club dentist. The Giants must be able to masticate their food. He has hired Dr. Frank Finley as the club physician. There must be no ailment handled by the itinerant Texas pill pounder. Joe Ironson will take snapshots of crowd and spread his pictorial stories broadcast. It pays to advertise.

And in case the Giants encounter any legal entanglements, Judge Francis X. McQuade will rush to the bar.

Sam Crane of the Journal, Sid Mercer of the Globe, Jimmy Sinnot of the Mail, Frank Graham of the Evening Sun and Joe Taylor of the Tribune will keep the wires hot. The power of the press is mighty.

Of course there are some ball players i nthe party: Walter Hoelke, Jeff Tesreau, Rube Benton, Ferd Schupp, Benny Kauff, Jack Murray and Lew McCarthy are the only performers in last night's party who were recognized by local fans. But others there were, to wit: Stryker, Vinal, Sandberg, Wagner, Way, Corcoran, Harscher, Shacht, Hoyt, Kocher, Smith, Morrisette, Barrs, Josefson, Ritter, Schepner, Witterstaetter and Trainer Mackall.

Big Guns Coming Later.

Next week the heavy artillery will be hauled into position. The rear guard will include Heinie Zim, "Choke-'em" Charley Herzog, George Burns, Art Fletcher, Bill Rariden, Harry Sallee, Anderson, Polly Perritt and others too numerous to mention.

It is a typical New York party. When all hands have reported at Marlin Springs a week from today, there will be upwards of 65 persons charging their meals to the New York club.

All of which forces the conclusion that this coming National League race is all but over before it starts. Why go to the trouble of making the Giants struggle lazily through six months of a campaign to prove it? Let's admit it now and get 20 minutes out for a new book.

P. S.—Next Saturday evening the Cardinals—11—count 'em—11—will start for San Antonio. Oh, man!

Rickey Doubts Report That Cleveland Paid $15,000 for Former Boston Star

BRANCH RICKEY rushed into the publicity ring yesterday with a few verbal uppercuts that he swung from his heel.

"I read two items today that make me wince," said Branch as he ran his fingers through his hair like a man suffering from diplomatic repression, if there is such a thing.

"I read where the Cleveland club paid $15,000 for Joe Wood. I don't believe it.

"I read where Mr. Ball refuses to spend big money for ball players. It isn't a fact.

"Let me tell you about Wood. I went to Harry Frazee, and not without authority, and offered him more money than any club in either league; in fact, I told him to write his own ticket for Joe Wood, if Joe Wood proved sound after a 30-day trial with the Browns. All I asked for was some assurance that Wood was not a cripple.

"I don't think it would be good business or sportsmanship to pay $15,000 for a pitcher who scarcely worked at all last season, and who was unable to finish many of the games he started in 1915.

Wood's Salary Exorbitant.

"Despite his apparent weakness Wood demands a salary of $8000 a year. I don't approve of that, either. But we would have taken him at any figure if he would have proved serviceable after a trial. But Frazee wouldn't consider the proposition. He said he was disgusted with Wood, who refused a salary of $5000. He wouldn't gamble with him, merely insisting that Wood get off the Boston club.

"I know that the Brown club went to New York willing to pay more for ball players than any other club in the league. We courted competition on players of merit. Such players were not to be had. But let me conclude by saying that I don't believe that Cleveland paid $15,000 for Wood. I can't believe it."

Lavan Still Unsigned.

Except for this shot of poisonous gas, there was little activity on the local American League sector yesterday. Field Commander Jones magically converted a dozen or more cigars into ashes and called it a day. Ricker watched the mails for a letter from Cuba but it didn't arrive.

Nevertheless, the Browns will start Saturday night for Palestine with all the players they need, barring John Lavan, the eminent surgeon of the city dispensary staff.

They're trying the absent treatment on both sides in this case. Dr. Lavan isn't knocking down the doors trying to get an audience with either Ball or Jones while either of these two are sitting on the back steps of the city dispensary to get a chat with Dr. Lavan.

But it's dollars to lightweight doughnuts that Lavan goes South with the first squad. If he doesn't some of the Brown backers who have wagered that Fielder Jones will finish in first division, will begin to hedge.

At the local National League headquarters, our pickets report that nothing resembling a prospective purchaser was in sight at any time during the day. Indeed, Mrs. Britton, president of the club, took occasion to deny some of the reports current yesterday about a purported deal pending with Manager Huggins.

Among other things she was quoted as saying "I am sure that my refusal to accept Mr. Huggins' offer for the Cardinals will not affect his loyalty to the club."

To the Post-Dispatch last night, Mrs. Britton said: "I don't ever remember making such a statement. I have not discussed the sale of the club with Mr. Huggins for several weeks. I cannot understand from what source such erroneous reports emanate."

Joe Wood Sold to Cleveland for $15,000 (?)

At Least That's the Purchase Price Announced for Pitcher With Lame Arm.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Joe Wood, who because of salary differences refused to play with the Boston American League club last year, was sold to the Cleveland American League club by Boston today for $15,000.

It was a straight sale and no other players were involved. Robert McRoy, business manager of the Cleveland club, came to New York and made the deal with Harry H. Frazee, the new Boston owner. Wood will go to Cleveland Monday to sign a contract. He has not pitched since 1915, when he was troubled with a sore shoulder, which caused the differences between him and the then Boston management.

TURNER BASKET LEAGUE PLAYS 3 GAMES TODAY

Three games are scheduled to be decided this afternoon in the Turners Basket Ball League. At present North St Louis with six straight victories is leading the first division, while St. Louis and Rock Springs with 5—1 are tied in the second. Today's schedule is as follows:

St. Louis vs. Tower Grove at St. Louis Turner Hall, 1508 Chouteau avenue; Concordia vs. Swiss National at Concordia Turner Hall, Thirteenth and Arsenal; Rock Springs vs. North St. Louis at Rock Springs Turner Hall, Boyle and Chouteau.

Ben Millers Can Clinch Flag With a Victory Today

Soccer League Leaders Will Oppose St. Leos in Feature Contest at Robison Field.

The Ben Millers, present St. Louis soccer champions, and right now leaders in the St. Louis League, can clinch the championship for this year by winning from the St. Leos in the first game scheduled today at Robison Field. In the closing encounter, the Innisfails battle the Naval Reserves.

When the teams take the field today, three stars will be missing. They are Joe Lancaster of the Millers, Tommy Mitchell, Innisfails, and Eddie Mulligan, St. Leos, all of whom have been under indefinite suspension for their conduct last week. Lancaster and Mitchell staged a fist fight, while Mulligan refused to leave the field when ordered to do so.

With his team practically out of the race for the pennant, Manager Brannigan of the Leos, will use several new players, grabbed from the Municipal League in the contest today. He intends to bench Abstein, Bucher, McCarthy and McMahon.

Whether or not Matt Diedrichsen will be used by the Innisfails against the Navals depends upon the condition of the field, it was announced yesterday by Manager Foley.

JAYHAWKER FIVE DEFEATS PIKERS IN FINAL CLASH

Husky Visitors Even Up Series by Winning, 29-19, in Fast Game.

CLEVELAND FIVE WINS

South Siders Remain in I. L. Pennant Fight by Beating McKinley, 57-31.

BASKETBALL RESULTS

Kansas 29, Washington 19.
Cleveland 57, McKinley 31.
Central 39, Soldan 22.
Indiana 24, Ohio State 19.
Pennsylvania 23, Cornell 18.
Princeton 34, Columbia 20.
Springfield 41, Jacksonville 11.
Illinois 20, Wisconsin 17.
Centralia 45, Jerseyville 28.

Washington University's basketball players suffered a relapse last night, sinking suddenly into defeat at the hands of Kansas, 29-19, in their final conflict of the season. The Pikers won the first game of the series Friday evening, 23-16.

In last night's game, Duncker who played right-forward for the Pikers, suffered a broken nose and was forced to retire early in the second period. Thereafter other Pikeway players, who were greatly outweighed, began to tire and many changes were made.

Washington was on the short end of a 15—8 score at the conclusion of the first period and was trailing, 23—11, at one stage of the second half when a rally was started that brought the tally to 23—17. There was high hopes in the Pikeway rooting section until Kansas organized for another vicious attack and put the game beyond the reach of the locals. The lineup:

| Kansas. | Position. | Washington. |
|---|---|---|
| Uherlaub (9) | L. F. | Benway (4), Stout (8) |

Referee—Hord. Hardin. Halves—20 minutes.

Cleveland Easy Winner.

Cleveland High remained in the pennant fight in the Interscholastic League last night by swamping McKinley, 57—31, in the feature game of the usual weekly double-header. This puts Cleveland only one-half a game behind the pace-making Yeatman quint and if Yeatman loses its last game while Cleveland wins two unplayed matches, there will be a tie existing.

Cleveland was entirely too much for McKinley last night, shooting around, under and over the common enemy for a top-heavy score. Lindsay and Lippert were the bright stars of the game.

Central showed smart team play against Soldan and easily defeated the West Enders, 39—22. At the conclusion of the first half, Central was safely in the lead, 24—5. After that the mid-cityans went in for the spectacular stuff, shooting many baskets from the center of the court. The line-ups:

| Central (39) | Position. | Soldan (22) |
|---|---|---|
| Nelson (14) | R. F. | French (4) |
| Crystal (10) | L. F. | Stratton (3)Smith (7) |

Dickson and West Are Victors Over Senseney and Francis at Racquets

In the second round of the doubles handicap racquet tournament at the Racquet Club yesterday afternoon, Allen T. West and Joe Dickson Jr., playing from scratch, defeated T. T. Francis and Eugene Senseney, who were allowed seven aces in a seven-game match that embraced 159 points. The scores were 15—10, 15—12, 8—15, 11—15, 15—10 and 17—16.

In the second match J. Perry Francis and Eddie Limberg (two aces) defeated Fred Gardner and Jimmy Berg (10 aces), 15—10, 15—11, 15—11 and 18—13. Some match!

WHITEHEAD AND STEIN DEFEAT CHALLENGERS

Otto Stein and Oscar Whitehead vindicated their claim to the "best two-man team in the city" title, last night, in the first of a series of challenge matches. Wooster Lambert and George Muenninghaus were the opposing team. Whitehead and Stein easily won with a grand total of 3894 pins to 3771 for Lambert and partner.

Lambert failed to do himself justice in several games and was the principal cause of the team's downfall.

BOB SIMPSON WILL START BUSY TRACK SEASON THIS WEEK

Missouri U. Star Is Scheduled to Oppose Loomis in Kansas City Meet March 3.

Simpson to Compete in 10 Meets Before Graduating in June

ROBERT SIMPSON, the Missouri University star, holder of the world's record in the 120 yards high hurdles, will compete in 10 meets before his graduation from the agricultural and mechanical department next June. Of these events, three are indoors and seven on the outdoor cinder path. This is a busy schedule for an athlete in his graduation year.

Indoor.

March 3—Kansas City A. C. meet in Kansas City.

March 10—Western A. A. U. meet at Coliseum.

Kansas-Missouri dual meet in Kansas City.

Outdoor.

Drake relay meet, Des Moines.

Wisconsin-Missouri dual meet, Madison.

Ames-Missouri games, Columbia.

Missouri Valley conference championship at Ames.

Kansas-Missouri dual meet, Columbia.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Feb. 24.—The Missouri University indoor track and field program for the 1917 season will be started next Saturday night, when Coach Henry Schulte escorts a squad of 12 Tigers to Kansas City to compete in the annual Kansas City A. C. indoor carnival. The performances of these athletes in the Kaw City meet will determine the personnel of the squad that will represent the State institution in the Western A. A. U. meet in St. Louis on March 10.

Bob Simpson is being advertised together with Joe Loomis of the Chicago A. A. as the big attraction of the meet. Simpson and the Chicagoan will compete in a low hurdle event and also a 50-yard dash. Robert Scholz, formerly of Soldan High School, will be the other Tiger to start in the dash. Earl Renick will be entered in the hurdles. A relay team composed of Wyatt, Daggy, Selby and Pittem, will compete in a Missouri Valley Conference relay race. Wyatt is a St. Louisan. Several middle-distance men who have not yet been picked, will also make the trip.

Working upon strength of advices from St. Louis that he would meet Fred Murray, the Pacific Coast star, in the high hurdles at the W. A. A. U. meet, Bob Simpson is working overtime these afternoons. C. L. Brewer, director of athletics at Missouri U., states that Murray as a hurdler is second only to Simpson. Simpson will also compete in the low hurdles and the 50-yard invitation.

Want Conference Referee.

Negotiations for the selection of a referee for the two games between Missouri and Washington the second week in March are now under way between Directors Edmunds and Brewer. Washington officials always hold out for a St. Louisan to act as official, while Brewer prefers an acting conference referee, none of whom reside in St. Louis. Brewer states that there is not enough college basket ball in the Mound City to keep the officials in shape.

This Washington series looms up especially big, as it may decide the conference title. Since the Tigers eliminated Kansas last week only the Kansas Aggies and Missouri remain in the fight. Missouri has a record of eight won and two lost, while the Aggies have won six and lost a pair. Besides their two-game series which will be played here March 6 and 7, each team plays Washington a pair of games on the Pikeway court. If Clevenger's and Miller's teams break even here Washington can settle the race by winning one contest. It is for this reason that Brewer wants one of the acting M. V. C. officials to work. Washington objects to Quigley, so it is probable that "Lefty" Sproull, the former Kansas U. star, will have charge.

Local Boy Enters Missouri.

George Tightman, who has been conspicuous on the athletic squads of the Grover Cleveland High School for the past year, has entered as a student at the university. Tightman is an especially good track man and will go out for freshman athletics this spring.

Spring football practice is now under way. Daily, from 20 to 30 gridiron veterans and hopefuls report in full regalia on Rollins Field. At present only the fundamentals are engaged in, but Coach Schulte intends to run his charges through scrimmage before the last session.

Jarrett and Borgwald to Replace Geo. Willis and Plummer in Tenpin Event

Two new bowlers will make their debuts within the next two weeks in the Greater St. Louis individual bowling tournament on Peterson's alleys. They are Brace Jarrett, who will replace George Willis, and Fred Borgwald, who succeeds Bob Plumer, who as present is on the shelf on account of illness. Both of the newcomers are rated as stars.

Borgwald will make his first appearance this afternoon, when he tackles Harry Deen. Jarrett will also get into action, opposing Monnig. Harry Rood, the leader, has a hard match for the coming week, being booked to tackle Bill Hammann next Thursday.

This week's schedule:

Sunday—Bender vs. Vahrenhorst, 2 o'clock; Borgwald vs. Deen, 2 o'clock; Jones vs. Ameling, 3:45 o'clock; Randall vs. Werner, 3:45 o'clock; Whitehead vs. Rell, 5:30 o'clock; Jarrett vs. Monnig, 5:30 o'clock.

Thursday—Cassin vs. Muenninghaus, 8 o'clock; Monnig vs. Hoefle, 8 o'clock; Bryan vs. Schmitt, 8:45 o'clock; Rood vs. Hammann, 8:45 o'clock; Fuerman vs. Schierbaum, 9:30 o'clock.

Michigan Players Busy.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Feb. 24.—Baseball practice has started at the University of Michigan. The squad began working out in the gymnasium with Shorty Miller and Robbins, veteran pitchers, and "Maurrie" Dunne, who again will be behind the bat, getting in shape.

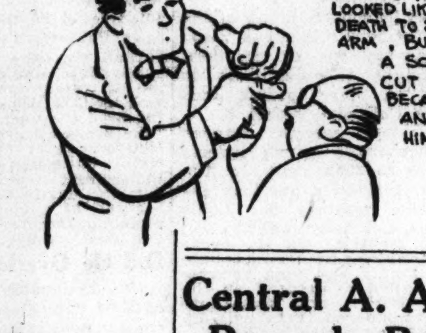
LES DARCY JUMPED OVER THE TRACES WHEN HE DISCOVERED THAT HIS MANAGER WOULD MAKE MORE MONEY SIGNING CONTRACTS THAN LES HAD MADE BY FIGHTING.



JEFFRIES RISKED WHAT LOOKED LIKE SURE DEATH TO SAVE HIS ARM, BUT WANTED A SORE FINGER CUT OFF BECAUSE IT ANNOYED HIM.

Even Jim Jeffries, With His 58-Inch Chest Was Too Temperamental to Let the Doctor Operate, Edgren Says, in Relating Rare Stories.

By Robert Edgren.

RACE horses, opera singers and artists haven't a monopoly of all the temperament in the world. There's more temperament in the average ring fighter than in a chorus queen. And the bigger and beefier and thicker necked the fighter the more temperament. Funny, but it's so.

Fighters "pull some funny ones," as Promoter Jim Coffroth used to say. Jim had a wider experience of fighters than any other man I know. He handled more champions. And the nearer a championship the more temperamental, too.

You wouldn't think that Jim Jeffries, with a 58-inch chest, a 19-inch calf and a 19-inch neck, would be full of the stuff that makes prima donnas interesting. But he was.

A couple of months ago, on his California ranch, Jeffries got blood poisoning in a cut finger. A doctor was called. After an examination he said: "Mr. Jeffries, the infection has gone up your arm. Unless your arm is taken off at the shoulder you'll be dead within a few days. You must prepare for an immediate operation."

"If you cut my arm off anywhere," said Jeff grimly, "you'll cut it off right here," and with the word he drew the forefinger of his well hand across his throat.

There was much cutting and draining, and finally, because of his great vitality, the poison was beaten and driven out, except from the finger in which it started. This finger was swollen, stiff and sore. Jeffries sent for the doctor.

"Say, Doc," he said, "cut this finger off. It gets in the way and I'm always hitting it on things."

The doctor grinned. "Nothing doing," he said. "You'll have to stand it until it gets well."

Sharkey's Temperament.

Who would think there was any temperament in Tom Sharkey, the bull-necked sailor? I was in Sharkey's New York cafe one night, years ago. Tom was delivering a lecture on the utter worthlessness of the innumerable "bums" who came in every now and then for a "touch."

"I'm through with them," said Sharkey. "I wish one av thim bums would come up to me now. I'd hit him in the eye."

At this moment a ragged, hulking fellow slouched in from the street, looked around and made a bee-line for Tom. Tom's chest was still swelling with indignation as the stranger drew near.

"Could I speak to you for a moment, Mr. Sharkey?" he asked.

"Is it a touch?" growled Tom; "because if it is"—and he took a threatening step forward.

"You don't know me, do you?" asked the stranger, backing away.

"No," roared Sharkey.

"Well, I'm the first man you knocked out in this country. You were on the Philadelphia and I was a fireman on another ship. You knocked me out in a punch and made a bum of me. They ragged me out of the navy. I'm broke and I want to get back to California."

"It's you, is it?" asked Tom, staring. "Do you drink?"

"Sure," said the stranger.

"Give him two drinks," said Sharkey to his bartender.

"I'll give you no money," Sharkey went on. "You'd drink it up. But I'll buy your ticket to California, put you on the train, give the ticket and $15 to the conductor for you and tell him to pay for your meals. How's that?"

And Sharkey did it.

Call It Temperament.

And there's Les Darcy. Les left Australia, smuggled out by a friend of the moment, O'Sullivan. He landed in America and told everyone that O'Sullivan was his friend, manager and protector. In a few weeks O'Sullivan had signed three fight contracts for Darcy, totalling, it was claimed, $70,000. O'Sullivan was to get a third of Darcey's earnings. This is according to O'Sullivan's statement. Darcy didn't explain it in just that way. Everything was lovely until Darcy happened to do some figuring and fell upon the fact that for merely signing up three pieces of paper, friend O'Sullivan was to receive more than Darcy made in half a dozen of his biggest Australian fights.

"What," said Darcy, "O'Sullivan worth more for making three matches than Les Darcy is for six fights!"

Darcy was peeved. He felt that somebody had failed to appreciate his high rank among champions. He notified O'Sullivan that two of the matches signed for were off, as Darcy hadn't authorized their making. Then he put O'Sullivan in his proper place, with all due hauteur. He said that instead of a percentage, he would "hand O'Sullivan what he thought his services were worth, after the fights." Temperament! Yea Bo!

Bat Nelson Refused to Go on When "Another Actor" Shared the Lead

BAT NELSON was the roughest and toughest living lightweight when he held the championship. Nobody would expect to find any temperament hidden under Bat's scarred battle front and disguised by his cauliflower ear, bent nose and thickened lips. But Bat was full of it. He was doing a vaudeville turn in an Eastern city—call it Boston—and was extremely proud of the fact that the theaters had been packed along the circuit. Arriving in Boston on the night of the first show, Bat took a survey of the front of the theater to see how his name was being played-up. He found the name of an actor sharing the electric light blaze with that of Bat Nelson—yes—glittering above it in letters of equal size. Bat went into his dressing room in a rage. The time for his monologue drew near. The manager, nervously entering Bat's quarters, found Bat sitting sulkily in a chair dressed in ordinary street clothes, no make-up on his face. And believe me, Bat was fond of that "dress soot" and the flesh tints that gave him an almost human aspect above the footlights.

"Great guns, Nelson!" exclaimed his manager. "Don't you know your act is on in five minutes? Why aren't you dressed?"

"Aw, go on!" growled Bat. "If I ain't the top line guy in this show, I ain't goin' to wear no dress suit."

And there's Champion Jess Willard. Even Jess, for all his vast smiling good nature, has a temperamental streak. I was talking with Jess about the men he might fight. I suggested Carl Morris. Jess stopped smiling.

"Not him!" he exclaimed.

"Why not? He's nearly as big as you. It would look like a good match. You'd get a big purse. And there isn't the slightest doubt that you'd beat him now, is there?"

"Sure do."

"That was just after that accident in Los Angeles. I was afraid to hit a hard punch for a long time afterward. I was afraid to hit Morris. Every time I squared off I saw Bull Young's face come up between Morris and me. And when the last round was over Morris turned around and laughed at me.

"He laughed at me—the big joke!" roared Willard. "I know I could get a lot of money for beating him, but he'll never get a chance to fight for the championship while I'm champion! Never!"

John L.'s Brand.

John L. Sullivan was drunk. This was years and years ago, when John was a great fighter, but unfortunately given to wild streaks of dissipation between fights, which was almost a characteristic habit of fighters in his day. Now it's different. Successful fighting men don't dissipate. They're models of clean living.

John was pickled—no doubt about it. He was walking through Forty-second street in New York, near Broadway. It was after midnight. John's pockets bulged with big yellow bills.

To John came a half-tipsy fellow who tapped him familiarly on the shoulder and in a whining voice said: "Mr. Sullivan, I'm down and out. Slip me twenty, will you?"

John surveyed the fellow distastefully.

"What do you want it for—to get drunk on?"

"Yes," said the stranger, sneeringly, "I wanta get drunk. I wanta get good an' drunk, like you."

Sullivan straightened up.

"Like me, huh? Like me?" he roared. "Say, look at this."

"I don't give my money to bums—like me"—he bellowed. "I give it to decent people who can make good use of it."

The University of Chicago was second with 18. Joie Ray of the Illinois Athletic Club, National A. A. U. 1000-yards champion, clipped 5 1-5 seconds off the one-mile record, although he did not win the event. Charles Mellar of the Mystic A. C., who had a handicap of 100 yards, was first. The time was 4:16. Ray started from scratch.

Wasem Defends Lightweight Title Against Fisher, Today

obtained a foothold on Hack early in the fray. Nearby spectators were able to hear Hack's groans and the exclamation wrung from him: 'For God's sake, Frank, don't break my leg!' Gotch eased up but only after Hack laid down on his back.

"Twice I wrestled a young fellow called Young Gotch. I put him out in one fall, the first time, disabled. I clamped a head scissors on the boy, in the second match and he gamely let me hang on there until he was unconscious. He was helpless for over half an hour and of course was unable to come back for the second fall.

"I lost my first match with Johnny Billiter, then champion, when he threw me out of the ring among the chairs. When he met me in a return match in St. Louis I threw him on his head, off the mat, and the doctor decided that Johnny had had about enough for that day.

"It's a fine game—if you like punishment and don't expect too high reward."

Wasem Emigrates to Clifton.

WASEM left St. Louis after defeating Billiter for the title. He married and settled down in Clifton, Ariz., quite by accident. Clifton, like most western cities, likes a contest of speed or strength. One of its local celebrities was a wrestler named Hall, the pride of a Mormon community. He boasted that no man was strong enough to bend his neck. He could pull back the skin from his flesh and snap it back like an elastic bandage, to show that he was invulnerable to mere tormenting by an opponent.

He weighed about 150 pounds, perhaps more, and was the terror of the vicinity. Wasem's backer, a man named Franz, for whom Wasem now works, wanted to see the Mormon trimmed. If he could bring in a regular wrestler he thought he and his friends could win a pot of money from the cocky supporters of the Mormon.

Enter one Schmalz of St. Louis. Schmalz, after a tryout, was found not good enough—they feared to send in the coin on him. He recommended either Billiter or Wasem, who, by their size, would disarm suspicion and cause the odds to swell.

Wasem was summoned West. He went to work in Franz' store, where, later on, it was allowed to leak out that he could wrestle. He exhibited a little bit of his wares. The suckers took the bait, line and sinker. They proposed a match, but the Franz faction wouldn't listen. It was too unequal a contest, size and experience considered, they contended.

Then a handicap was proposed. Hall agreed to throw Wasem twice an hour. Money was put up—several thousand dollars—and the match came off as scheduled.

At the start Hall darted in for a hold and Wasem sidestepped. Hall came in again and Wasem let him pass again and then pounced on his foe and rode him to the mat, after which Hall saw Wasem only once more during the contest—being the underdog for the rest of the day.

• • •

Hall on the Torture Rack.

WASEM tortured Hall in every conceivable way, sapping his strength, marking up his features and gradually exhausting the larger and stronger man. Wasem could have thrown his opponent time and again had he cared to; but the fact that as soon as a fall was registered his opponent was entitled to 15 minutes' rest, deterred him. For the agreement contained no stipulation that Wasem could win by tossing his foe. It was up to the champion not to be thrown twice in one hour—that was all.

There was a time when the outcome seemed grey for the champion. Hall had boasted that he would let his opponent wear himself out, during the first half hour, then tear in and "take" him.

True to the prediction, a "break" came about 30 minutes after the bout had begun. Hall staggered up from the mat with Wasem raised in his extended arms over his head, ready to throw him to the canvas. In order to render Wasem dizzy, so that he would be too dazed to light on his feet if hurled to the floor, Hall whirled his opponent in semi-circles over his head parallel to the canvas. But in doing so he twisted his legs out of position and Wasem, with an unexpected effort, overbalanced Hall and, in falling landed on top of his man. That was the last view Hall got of his opponent during the match.

For the remainder of the hour he was underneath, taking a flaying that would have caused the Rock of Gibraltar to groan.

Fisher Defeated Biliter.

JACK FISHER, whom Wasem opposes this afternoon, is a veteran of several years' experience. He is 30 years old, while Wasem is 29. Both have defeated Billiter, the former champion, Fisher turning the trick about 40 days after Wasem won from the Ohio veteran.

Billiter was 31 years of age when Wasem defeated him. He succumbed to the punishment inflicted by Wasem's "scissors" hold, which the lightweight star had brought to perfection before Joe Stecher was ever heard of.

Wasem, last night had already placed $250 in side wagers himself and had wired to Clifton, Ariz., for $1000 more. Lloyd Carter and Fisher's supporters stated that they expected to raise a sufficient sum to cover it all before this afternoon.

Experience and craft are possessed by both men. If Wasem's great speed and his endurance still hold he expects to win without great trouble.

Wasem declares he has not wrestled much since he left St. Louis and doubts his own wind and endurance. However, he's backing himself.

Kansas City's Football Champions After Dates With St. Louis Leaders

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 24.—Ray C. Johns, amateur sports promoter, is arranging for a two-game series between the St. Louis and the Kansas City soccer champions. The Tigers have won the championship of the soccer league here and Johns plans to bring the champions of the St. Louis Municipal League for games Saturday and Sunday, April 7 and 8. Johns is trying to fashion a municipal sport association here, after the St. Louis Municipal Association.

Makes 250-Yard Hole in One.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 24.—Golf has its luck as much as any other athletic game, but it isn't often that a player has the fortune to make a hole in one. But Charles M. Sawyer, chairman of the board of the Kansas City Federal Reserve Board, has hung up a new record for the Blue Hills course here by negotiating the 250-yard blind hole No. 11 in a single stroke. His luck came in a practice match with several other bankers.

SPORT SALAD BY L. C. Davis

Hymn of High Living.

IN days of old
Fresh eggs were sold
At ten and fifteen cents;
And we could eat
A piece of meat
At very slight expense.

Soup bunches then
Were five and ten
And pies a nickel each;
But things that were
A jitney per
Are now beyond our reach.

C-B and C,
Fromage de brie
And other staple chuck
Have taken flight
And gone from sight,
Along with garden truck.

With navy beans
Beyond our means,
The jig will soon be up;
Hot dogs have soared,
We can't afford
The super-heated pup.

There was a time
When half a dime
Would swing some little deal;
And half a buck
Would buy the truck
To make a goodly meal.

A dollar bill
Would make us thrill
With bloated opulence;
But, here of late,
Oh, sad to state,
It looks like thirty cents.

Alack-a-day!
We have to pay
The ransom of a king
To get a smell,
Or bagatelle
Of almost anything.

TENTH AUTO-SHOW PRONOUNCED A MARKED SUCCESS

Brilliant Motor Car Exhibit Financially and in Attendance Greatest in St. Louis Show History.

Nearly 8000 people saw the tenth annual St. Louis Automobile Show come to a close Saturday night at the Overland Building. The close was spectacular. From 7:30 on the crowd was pouring into the building through the turnstiles, and on arrival at the sixth floor found there, and on each successive floor, professional entertainers furnishing additional amusement, intended to bring the show to a brilliant ending.

The attendance was the largest in its grand total ever known at a St. Louis show. Monday night was the big night, when the building was so congested with people that it was impossible to do justice to the exhibits, but a system of handling crowds downward and upward corrected this, so that on all succeeding evenings there was no time when seeing the automobile show was not a comfortable undertaking.

During the six days of the show 8200 dealers from the territory surrounding St. Louis attended the show. Their registration showed that they came from 12 states. These states were Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama, Iowa, Texas, Louisiana, Indiana and Oklahoma.

Although the price of admission had been raised from 25 cents to 50 cents on the 1917 show, the total attendance of cash paying patrons was larger by nearly 75 per cent than at the last Forest Park Highlands show. The total attendance for the week was considerably above 70,000 admissions.

The St. Louis show for the first time in its history was given under conditions entirely favorable to both exhibitors and the public. The Overland Building, with 132,500 square feet, afforded ample opportunity for the proper showing of automobiles. This is not the case in any other show in the United States. Even in the big national shows at New York and Chicago the spaces allotted to exhibitors were such that with a comparatively small crowd in the building the cars could not be properly seen. At Forest Park Highlands the St. Louis show used 68,000 square feet of space for exhibiting cars and trucks. At the 1917 show the total space used was 132,500 square feet.

Another feature of the show was that for the first time in St. Louis the accessory exhibitors were given all the space they asked to show their lines. Two-thirds of the second floor was allotted to them and there were 72 separate and distinct exhibits showing everything from a gasoline pump for the garage or a public station, to a spark plug, and from the model of a new engine to a guaranteed lock for the steering wheel or the carburetor.

The St. Louis show was the only one in the United States where trucks have been given space. There were 53 light and heavy trucks and truck units shown. The heavy trucks were kept on the main floor, which was jammed with them. The light trucks and truck units were on the east side of the second floor. Both of these displays attracted large crowds and the crowds were men who were interested in the problem of deliveries and transportation, very few women visiting these exhibits.

The show was notable for its smooth running, not a single accident or untoward incident having occurred during the week. Exhibitors admitted they had better treatment and better opportunities to talk to prospective customers than ever before. The Show Committee, consisting of Jos. A. Schlecht, its chairman; Jas. D. Cathey, H. W. Spalding, W. L. Johnson, W. S. Roberts and F. W. A. Vesper, had planned the work of the immense undertaking carefully beforehand, and these plans were carried out by the general manager, Robert E. Lee.

Saturday night at 11 p. m. the show closed to the public and the real activities began. The show management began at once to move out the exhibits. Elevators ran all night, cars were taken out, and accessories packed and shot down to the first floor for delivery Sunday morning. All day Sunday the building will be a bee-hive of activity, and by Monday morning the tenth annual St. Louis automobile show will be but a memory with no aftermath save the handsome rebate which will come to the exhibitors who were members of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers and Dealers' Association.

FRIDAY, 13 AND 23 BROUGHT ILL LUCK

No. 13, Friday, the twenty-third of the month and a black dog, all ill-omens to automobile men, were combined in a series of mishaps to the Mississippi Valley Motor Co., distributors of the Oakland car, this week. Thirteen carloads of Oaklands arrived at a North Broadway railroad station Friday, the twenty-third, two of them for the show, and were unloaded. William Smythe was in one of these, which was being towed by a service car, when a street car hit the towed car, which overturned and "spilled" Smythe under the car. He escaped with a few bruises, but the car was badly damaged. This was at Broadway and Brooklyn street.

Friday, also the twenty-third, one of the Oakland demonstrators was being driven to the show building, when a playful black dog about 12 inches high attempted to grab the front tire. The dog was sent to the rendering plant.

Mr. Hatheway, president of the Mississippi Valley Motor Co., drove a $1585 Oakland car to the show Friday night, the twenty-third, and left it at the Twenty-third street side. Within an hour it was stolen and found at 8:30 p. m., two blocks away, badly damaged from a collision with a street car.

The Mississippi Valley Motor Co. will occupy its new fireproof building, two stories high and basement, at 3137-39 Locust street, after Sunday morning. The building is one of the best equipped in St. Louis.

WINTON WAS A FEATURE

One of the best displays at the St. Louis Automobile Show was by the Von Arx Automobile Co., which showed five models of the Winton six. These handsome high-priced cars were viewed by thousands of people during the week and their verdict seemed to be that they were the acme of the coach builders' art. Such of these cars as were not sold at the show will be displayed at the salesrooms of the Von Arx Automobile Co.

NEW NAME TAKEN BY JEFFERY DISTRIBUTOR

Henry Rottersmann, local Jeffery distributor of the Jeffery cars and trucks, announced at a luncheon given his organization yesterday, that the firm name has been changed from the Jeffery Distributing Co. to the Rottersmann Automobile & Truck Co.

The new organization has been incorporated for $20,000 with Henry Rottersmann as president; Eugene Meyers, secretary and treasurer; J. Van Raatle, vice president, and E. Rottersmann as sales manager.

At the luncheon E. G. Soward, assistant sales manager of the Nash Motors Co., explained to the Rottersmann organization the hopes and aims of the factory for the coming year. He emphasized the progressiveness of the factory since C. W. Nash had taken the guiding rein of the Jeffery organization. Production, which formerly averaged around 30 cars a day has been brought up to 45 and will go a 60 cars schedule on March 1.

Comparing the St. Louis show with that of Chicago Mr. Soward pointed to the fact that in retail sales the local exhibit surpassed Chicago. Mr. Rottersmann announced the following sales for the week: J. T. Rombauer, 3638 Flora boulevard, Special Show Sedan Six; F. R. Carter, 6142 Plymouth, Touring "Four;" E. Davis, 816 Olive, Touring Six; Sam Rifkin, 3949 Moffet avenue, Touring Four; E. Watkins, 816 Olive street, Touring Six; Leslie Mathews, 5190 Raymond avenue, Roadster Six; O. H. Dougherty, 4928 Page, Touring Four; T. W. Finnegan, East St. Louis, Touring Four. Among the out-of-town sales were: George W. Clark, Rolla, Mo.; G. W. Albright, Fredrickstown, Mo.; W. B. Massey, Bonne Terre, Mo.; A. M. Howell, Hillsboro, Ill.; E. Klocke, Gillespie, Ill.

The sale of four Jeffery trucks were also made: Holman Paper Box Co., St. Louis, ¾-ton; A. F. Mauer, Cape Girardeau, Mo., ¾-ton; R. S. Edler, Springfield, Mo., ¾-ton, and G. W. Albright, Fredericktown, Mo., 1½-ton.

NEW GOODRICH STORES

The opening of 38 new stores throughout the United States has just been announced by W. O. Rutherford, general sales manager of the B. F. Goodrich Co. of Akron, O.

Three of these, Little Rock, Ark., Quincy and Springfield, Ill., will come under the jurisdiction of the St. Louis branch and serve to greatly increase the importance of the local division of the Goodrich sales organization.

In commenting upon this announcement, Mr. W. C. Dold, local branch manager, said: "While these stores are intended to act only as a source of supply to the various dealers in their territories, they will at the same time give these dealers and their customers the advantage of that close contact with the factory organization that is so necessary to promote and maintain absolute satisfaction. All of the 38 managers and their assistants have just completed an eight weeks' course in our educational department at the factory under Mr. A. Koehler, and the instructions they have received covers every detail in our established methods of doing business as well as to familiarize them with our various products and the sales policies that apply to them."

In the St. Louis branch territory these stores will have as managers and assistants H. Schafner and D. V. Messer at Little Rock, Paul Tibbitts and D. S. Wortham at Quincy, and B. Thompson and W. J. Ospring at Springfield.

DETROIT ELECTRIC DISPLAY THIS WEEK

Milton B. Strauss of the Detroit Electric Co., announced last night that he had completed arrangements with the factory for the special show cars which made up the Detroit exhibit at the auto show, to remain in St. Louis all this week.

Mr. Strauss plans to have these cars on display at the Detroit showroom, which is directly across from the Overland Building. This will give the many people who were unable at the show to give these cars thorough inspection, an opportunity to look them over at their leisure.

Probably no car on display last week caused more favorable comment than the convertible roadster which was shown for the first time in St. Louis. This car, built on the regular model 68 chassis, is a new idea in electric car body construction, listing for $1775.

COLE RAISES PRICE.

Yesterday, just at the close of the automobile show the Cole St. Louis Auto Co. received advice from the factory that a further raise in price of $100 would be effective on the Cole, beginning April 1.

At the present time the new price will only apply on the touring cars and roadsters, no advance being made on the Cole-Springfield tourcoupe or the toursedan. These last two models proved one of the attractions of the automobile show.

The factory, however, makes no promises that the closed models will not be advanced within the near future. The increased cost of production and the constantly rising price of materials have made this increase necessary, according to the factory officials.

LITTLE GIANT LINE NOW COMPLETE

The appearance of the Little Giant truck at the St. Louis show is simultaneous with the announcement that the Little Giant line of trucks is now complete. In addition to trucks with a capacity range of one ton to five and one-half tons, there is also a new conver-a-car unit, whose name indicates its purpose.

Reviewing the past year in the truck business, President W. O. Duntley of the $12,000,000 Chicago Pneumatic Tool Co., makers of the Little Giants, said: "Last year was easily the best truck year the industry has ever known. Demand was beyond production at every period, even those usually not marked by truck sales.

"This year should see, in the light of the increasing well being of our country, an unusual increase of truck business.

"The young man, considering his lifework, would do well to give thought and investigation time to this tremendous field."

CADILLAC COAT OF ARMS

"Many people have inquired as to the meaning of the coat of arms attached to the front of the radiator of the eight-cylinder auto show Cadillac cars," says H. H. Walker, secretary of the Cadillac Automobile Co. of St. Louis.

"The ancient coat of arms was a general symbol of the ideals of the family to which it belonged. To the early pathfinders and leaders like Sieur Cadillac, the family escutcheon was a sacred thing and its degradation was avoided and prevented at any cost, even giving up one's life to uphold it.

"The device used is the coat of arms of Antoine de la Mothe Cadillac. While it is not described in available books on heraldry, considerable information has been gathered concerning its import."

SEVEN DAYS, NO STOPS

A demonstration of interest to motorists generally, as proving the all-year-round nature of the efficiency of the modern motor car, was that given during the recent annual automobile show at Milwaukee, in the seven-day, nonstop engine run of a model 45, eight-cylinder Oldsmobile. The run was conducted by the State distributor of the Oldsmobile, Leslie D. Frint, and attracted more than State-wide interest.

The engine was started on the Friday before the opening of the show, and ran continuously for seven days and nights. From early in the morning until late at night the car traversed the country roads about Milwaukee, rough and filled with snowdrifts, and ran idle for only a few hours out of the 24. The record for the entire run shows that during the first day the car ran active from 9 a. m. until 12 p. m., and the engine ran idle from 12 p. m. until 9:30 a. m. the next morning. The second day's record was, in active travel from 9:30 a. m. until 1 a. m. The third day found the car demonstrating its ability to surmount road difficulties from 9:30 a. m. until midnight and the motor ran idle from midnight until 7:30 a. m. On the fourth day the car started out at 7:30 a. m. and traveled until midnight, when the engine ran idle until 8 a. m. The fifth day's record was active traveling from 8 a. m. until 12 p. m. and the engine running idle from 12 p. m. until 9 a. m. On the sixth day the performance of all previous days was eclipsed, when the car started on the road at 9 a. m. and ran all that day and night continuously. The roads were very heavy, as shown by the photographs, and the test severe. The last day of the run found the car on the road at 9 a. m., and in active travel until 11 p. m., when the engine ran idle until 9 a. m., at that time being stopped by the committee in charge.

WHIRLWIND SALES PLAN

The forces of the sales organization of the Park Automobile Co. have been marshaled for the final two weeks' drive of a strenuous February selling campaign of Peerless and Chalmers automobiles.

The prices of both makes will be increased March 1, the increase ranging from $90 to $200.

A whirlwind finish is expected by the manager of the sales department, and the auto show added impetus to the gratifying results so far obtained.

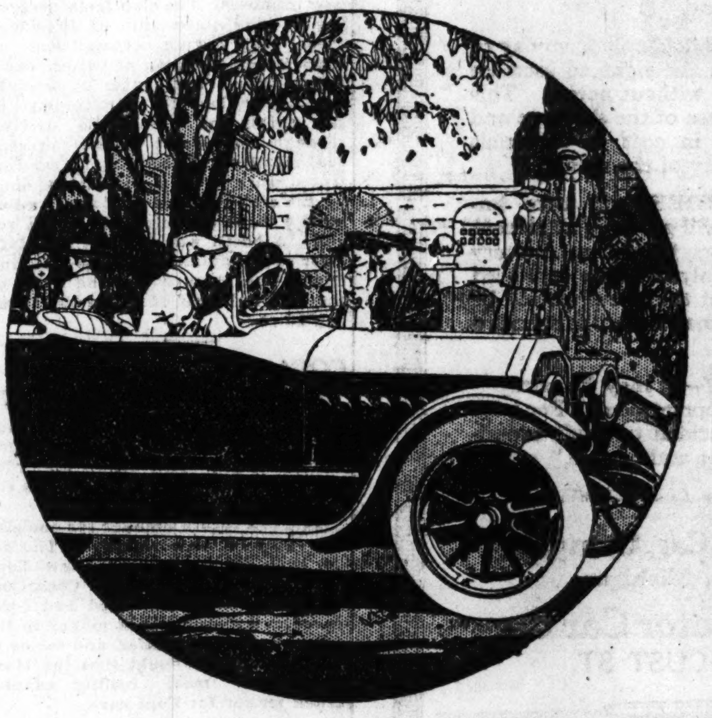
The Glorified Eight

Peerless introduces extremes of performance in one and the same distinguished car



IN the Peerless Eighty Horsepower Eight extremes meet—limitations that formerly stood in the way of complete motor car enjoyment have been overcome. The most pleasing characteristics of equally attractive but opposite types of cars have been combined in one—The Peerless Eight.

Ultra smoothness, the extreme of responsive flexibility, delectable softness, are yours with marked economy of operation in a car capable of the speed of the charging racer and of prodigious feats of power.

Two Power Ranges

The "Loafing" Range

Imagine, if you will, your ideal car for ordinary every-day uses. It must creep on high gear with absolute smoothness. It must respond to the throttle without trace of hesitation and accelerate in a flash to any permissible city speed. It must give no sign or sound of effort in this accomplishment.

The Peerless Eight in its "loafing" range is ready to realize this ideal for you and to do it on half rations—consuming fuel so sparingly as to shame many a lesser powered six—even many a four.

The "Sporting" Range

But there comes the emergency which calls for superpower or the need or desire for speed of which no other ideally soft, smooth motor would be capable.

You have only to open the throttle wider to release the double poppets of the Peerless Eight and use her "sporting" range.

And now you have a brute of a car, responding with a deep note of rugged, relentless power which makes you master of any situation with which any motor car can contend. You have utterly changed the whole character of your car.

Let us demonstrate the well-nigh unbelievable contrasts in performance of which this car is capable.

VESTA STORAGE BATTERY

Three Improvements Make it the Most Dependable, Longest Lived Battery in the World

Three exclusive, patented Vesta features—the only battery improvements in the last twenty years—make Vesta last twice as long as any other battery.

These features are the Vesta Indestructible Isolators, Vesta Impregnated Wooden Mats and the use of Titanium, a rare mineral. They prevent short circuits, "treeing" and impurities in the battery liquids. Combined, they give Vesta double life—and even more.

Every feature—even the use of Titanium which hardens the lead plates and precipitates all impurities in solution—is covered by U. S. Basic Patents belonging to Vesta. Vesta, with all these improvements, costs you no more than the battery you are now using.

IN THE TRUCK DISPLAY

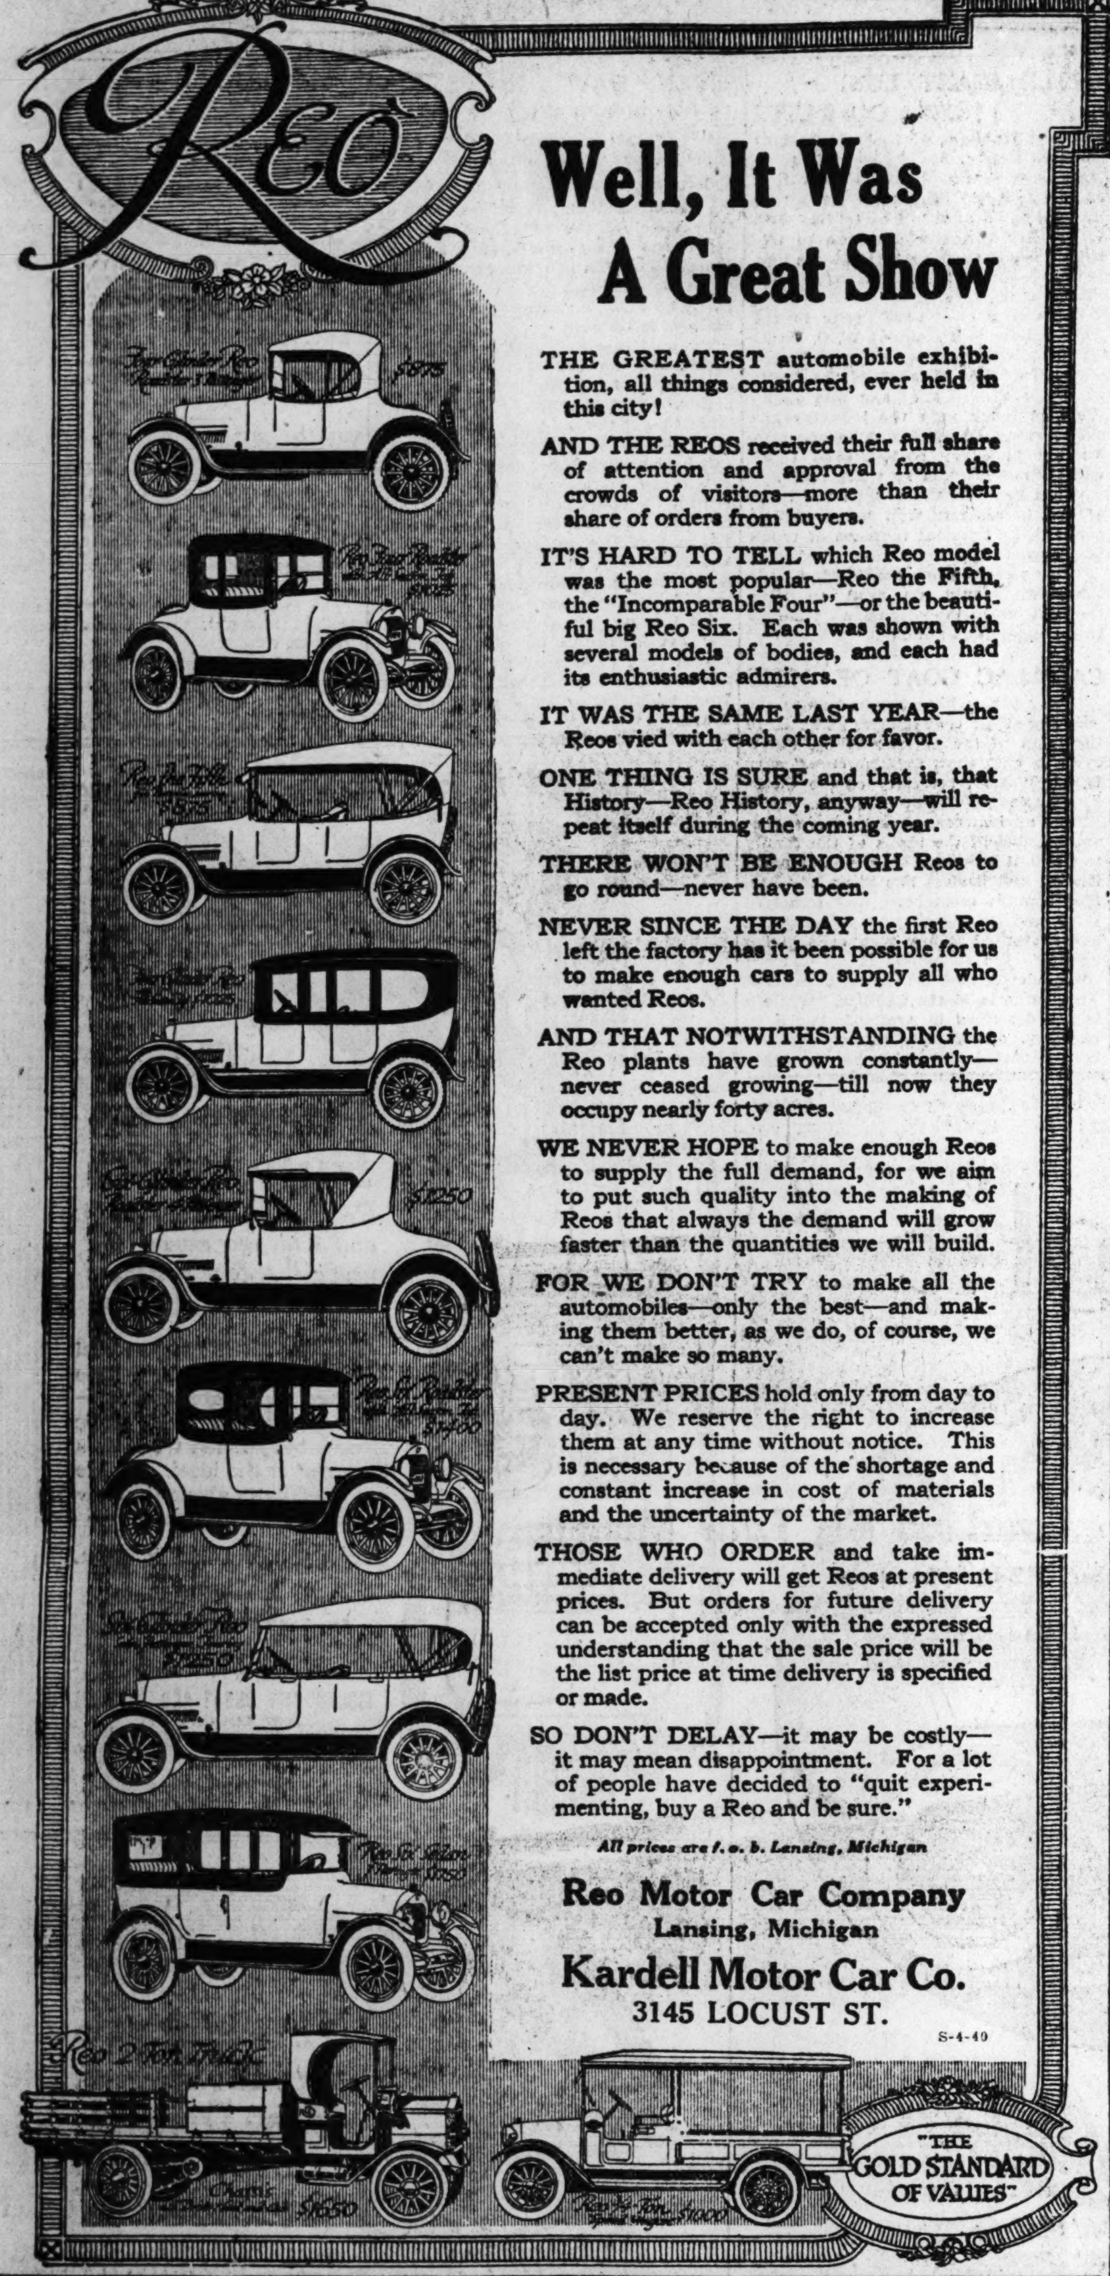
Among the exhibits at the St. Louis show in the truck department was the Menominee truck, which is represented in St. Louis by P. H. Fuchs, 5610 Easton avenue. This truck attracted large attention. It has the worm drive and is made in three sizes, three-quarter ton, one and one-half tons and three and one-half tons.



"THE GOLD STANDARD OF VALUES"

Well, It Was A Great Show

THE GREATEST automobile exhibition, all things considered, ever held in this city!

AND THE REOS received their full share of attention and approval from the crowds of visitors—more than their share of orders from buyers.

IT'S HARD TO TELL which Reo model was the most popular—Reo the Fifth, the "Incomparable Four"—or the beautiful big Reo Six. Each was shown with several models of bodies, and each had its enthusiastic admirers.

IT WAS THE SAME LAST YEAR—the Reos vied with each other for favor.

ONE THING IS SURE and that is, that History—Reo History, anyway—will repeat itself during the coming year.

THERE WON'T BE ENOUGH Reos to go round—never have been.

NEVER SINCE THE DAY the first Reo left the factory has it been possible for us to make enough cars to supply all who wanted Reos.

AND THAT NOTWITHSTANDING the Reo plants have grown constantly—never ceased growing—till now they occupy nearly forty acres.

WE NEVER HOPE to make enough Reos to supply the full demand, for we aim to put such quality into the making of Reos that always the demand will grow faster than the quantities we will build.

FOR WE DON'T TRY to make all the automobiles—only the best—and making them better, as we do, of course, we can't make so many.

PRESENT PRICES hold only from day to day. We reserve the right to increase them at any time without notice. This is necessary because of the shortage and constant increase in cost of materials and the uncertainty of the market.

THOSE WHO ORDER and take immediate delivery will get Reos at present prices. But orders for future delivery can be accepted only with the expressed understanding that the sale price will be the list price at time delivery is specified or made.

SO DON'T DELAY—it may be costly—it may mean disappointment. For a lot of people have decided to "quit experimenting, buy a Reo and be sure."

WE WANT A QUALITY DEALER TO REPRESENT A QUALITY CAR

QUITE naturally we want the best sort of representation for the ROAMER. We know the car deserves it; we know that the car has this sort of representation elsewhere. St. Louis and its environs are logical territory for this beautiful motor car. We could close for dealer representation immediately, but we are more particular about the character of the agency than the number of cars contracted for. We are intentionally waiting our time. We prefer to pick and choose until we find our man. It is quite possible that you have all the qualifications. If you have, the ROAMER proposition will appeal to you.

DORRIS MOTOR CAR CO. TO HAVE NEW HEAD AND LARGER CAPITAL

Krenning Retires and Will Be Succeeded by W. R. Colcord; Becomes a $1,000,000 Corporation.

The Dorris Motor Car Co. yesterday announced an increase of the firm's capital from $30,000 to $1,000,000, and the retirement from the presidency of H. B. Krenning, organizer of the company. The new president will be W. R. Colcord, heretofore the president of the Colcord-Wright Machinery and Supply Co.

Krenning will retain an interest in the corporation, but expects to spend most of his time at his country home at Arcadia. He is one of those who early saw the possibilities of the automobile industry, and in 1905 he and George P. Dorris and Webster Colburn formed the Dorris Motor Car Co. here.

Colcord, a native St. Louisan, started in the machinery business in a small way in 1894 and has built up a large business. He will retire from the presidency of the Colcord-Wright Co., but will retain an interest in that firm. He is president of the Midland Valley Country Club.

The other officers of the Dorris company as now organized are: Dorris, vice president; Colburn, treasurer, and A. C. Schmid, secretary. Frank C. Thompson, president of the Carondelet Foundry Co., and I. C. Muckermann, president of the Polar Wave Ice and Fuel Co., have been added to the directorate.

The increase in capital was to provide for a greatly increased output. The exhibit of the Dorris company at the automobile show the past week attracted considerable attention. The officers of the firm say St. Louis is ideally located as a manufacturing point for automobiles and they expect a great growth of the industry here.

CLUB OFFERS REWARD FOR AUTO THIEVES

The St. Louis Automobile Club has, by action of its executive board, added another to its list of activities in the direction of making automobiling and automobile owning safer. It has hung up a standing reward of $50 for the arrest and conviction of each thief who steals the machine of a member of the club, and President E. M. Flesh yesterday instructed acting Secretary Waller Edwards to notify the Police Departments of St. Louis and other cities and other automobile clubs throughout the country of this action and to supply descriptions and numbers of machines that may be stolen. Further assistance is to be given to secure convictions by the legal aid department of the club.

With the opening of the automobile show the club began a campaign for new members. The club feels, according to the statement of President Flesh, that, having accomplished so much in the direction of better roads, better streets and better automobile regulations, looking particularly to the safety of automobile driving through the efforts of the present 3000 members of the club, by concentrated work much more could be done by the added influence of other automobile owners aiming at a like result. A booth was kept on the sixth floor of the automobile show building during the show where the work of the club in behalf of its members was explained.

COCA COLA CO. BUYS 87 MAXFER ATTACHMENTS

Nickerson & Schroeder, distributors for Maxfer in New York and Brooklyn, have just closed an order for 87 Maxfer truck makers with the Coca Cola company.

This is a record breaker for one single order for truck makers. The order was obtained by the New York distributors only after the Coca Cola company had tested, tried and compared every other truck maker in the market with the Maxfer, and seems to prove without a doubt that the Maxfer is the most readily adapted truck maker for Ford cars.

A NOVEL DEMONSTRATION

One of the astounding demonstrations made at the Automobile Show was seen at the Franklin exhibit, where the absence of friction was shown and what little power is necessary to move the car.

To the front brackets is fastened a small silk ribbon and to this is attached an ordinary hand spring scale. With this the car was pulled, it taking a 24-pound pull to start the car after which it only takes 10 to 15 pounds to keep it moving.

An amusing instance occurred when a small child, about 3 years old, who saw a Franklin salesman demonstrating this fact, took hold of the string and started to pull the car across the floor. Manager Wolffe immediately wanted to put the child on the pay roll.

BIG HUDSON SALE.

One of the biggest retail and most important sale of the St. Louis Automobile Show was made Wednesday night, when Charles E. Gregory, salesman for the Hudson-Phillips Motor Car Co., sold Dr. P. DeMoraes Barros, of Brazil, four Hudson super-sixes for his family's private use and for the use of his personal staff. The cars were two stock seven-passenger touring cars, one town car, in maroon, and a limousine in blue, the order specifying immediate delivery.

Dr. Barros visited the auto show with a desire to purchase an automobile that had been proven under all kinds of tests. Remembering the wonderful feats and performances made by the Hudson super-six in his home country he decided to purchase not only one super-six, but four.

TO GIVE NEWMAN SERVICE

The "original" Harry Newman, before he left for Chicago last night, in company with Frank B. Willis, vice president of the Hal Motor Car Co., announced that he was sending to St. Louis as his personal representative M. C. VanAllen, who has been associated with Mr. Newman for a number of years.

Mr. Newman has always been a firm believer in service to owners as the strongest sales help in the automobile business. VanAllen, through his association with Mr. Newman, has seen the result of Newman service, and it will be his work to bring that same service to St. Louis to future Hal owners.

PUT STOMACH IN FINE CONDITION

Says Indigestion Results from an Excess of Hydrochloric Acid.

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather, ferments the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that indigestion is caused by Hyperacidity, meaning, there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in the stomach much like garbage sours in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest, we belch up gas, we eructate sour food or have heartburn, flatulence, waterbrash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead, get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink while it is effervescing and furthermore, to continue this for a week. While relief follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.—ADV.

Has Used Duffy's Since 1879

MR. MICHAEL J. GIBBONS

A noted physician prescribed Duffy's for indigestion and gastritis when Mr. Gibbons was 37 years old. Today, at 74, he is hale and hearty which he attributes to having religiously followed the advised dosage of this famous tonic stimulant for nearly 40 years. Read his straightforward statement:

"I am in my 74th year of age. I was born Dec. 17, 1842—came to this country in 1866 from Ireland. Shortly after that I contracted Gastritis and Indigestion. I suffered very much from those complaints and tried all sorts of medicines to cure me, but failed to get anything to do me good until a distinguished physician (the late Dr. John T. Doyle, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa.) advised me to take Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. I followed his advice and have been taking Duffy's Pure Malt ever since 1879 in small doses, two or three times each day. That accounts for the perfect health I am now enjoying and a big appetite. I go to my meals regularly three times each day hungry. Previous to my taking Duffy's Malt tonic my appetite was always impaired." (Signed) Michael J. Gibbons, 2337 Christian Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

has earned the undisputed reputation of an excellent tonic stimulant for temperate use. Because it improves digestion and assimilation of the food and helps give tone and vitality to the system, it is to the troublous hours of waning life like oil is to machinery. To delay the effects of old age and bring back some of the vivacity of youth, many medical men recommend Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, for it aids in generating sufficient strength to enjoy the peaceful retrospective which should be the blessed lot of all in the evening time of life. ## ECZEMA

Also Called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Water Poison, Weeping Skin, etc.

DR. CANNADAY,
Eczema Specialist
for 15 Years.

For fifteen years I have been treating one disease alone—ECZEMA. I have handled over one million cases. I do not pretend to know it all, but I am convinced the disease is due to an excess of acid in the blood, and closely related to rheumatism and cancer. This acid must be removed.

Eczema is called by some people Itch, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Weeping Skin, etc. I am fully convinced Eczema is a curable disease, and when I say it can be cured, I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D—and not merely patched up for a while to return worse than before. It makes no difference what other doctors have told you, or what all you have tried, all I ask is just a chance to prove to you that this vast experience has taught me a great deal that would be of help to you. If you will write me today I will send you a free trial of my mild, soothing, guaranteed treatment that will do more to convince you than I or anyone else could in a month's preaching. It's all up to you. If you suffer any more with eczema and refuse to merely write to me for free trial just blame yourself. No matter where you live, I have treated your neighbors. Merely dropping me a postal today is likely to give you more real comfort in a week than you ever expected to enjoy again. Do it right now, your very life may be at stake.

NOLKER TELLS HOW HE GOT ONE OF HIS SHIRTS BACK

Declares Lawyer Who Had Seen Riccardi Wear It, Recovered It for Him.

With the filing in the Circuit Court yesterday of Robert E. Nolker's 50,000-word deposition in his divorce suit against Pearl Elizabeth Hyman Nolker, details were given for the first time about a shirt, upon the possession of which the wealthy electrical supply dealer and heir to a brewery fortune has laid much stress.

Some of the parties to the dialogue on the subject were Nolker, Abe Frumberg, Nolker's attorney; and P. H. Cullen, Mrs. Nolker's lawyer, who conducted the examination of Nolker. The lawyer Riccardi, who is mentioned, is Constantino Vincent Riccardi, the "beau brummel" of the cabaret circuit, who left town a few months ago. A portion of the questions and answers runs as follows:

Cullen: Now you told about having a shirt that was once in the possession of a man named Riccardi, a former law partner of George D. Little.

Frumberg objected that Riccardi was never Little's partner, and the question was changed to read: "Former associate."

Cullen: Who gave you the information about the shirt?

Nolker: Well, the shirt speaks for itself.

Cullen: No, it's dumb.

Nolker: I heard about it from Mr. Little, and also an Italian office boy who worked in Riccardi's office.

Says Little Told Him of Shirt.

Cullen: Did your first information about the shirt come from Little?

Nolker: To the best of my knowledge, yes. Little asked me if I had a shirt with my initials on it. I told him I had one with "R. E. N." on the left side, and when the shirt was shown to me I immediately identified it as mine. I bought a number of shirts in New York for $12 or $14 apiece. The shirt had Riccardi's laundry mark, "V. C. R.," in ink, adjoining mine. Little said the Italian office boy also identified the shirt, and said he had seen Riccardi wear it, and was going to get it. That shirt was got.

Cullen: Did Little tell you how he got it? (An objection was sustained that this was a confidential communication between lawyer and client.)

Cullen: You gave the shirt to Little, didn't you, and Little brought it back to you?

Nolker: I gave it to him?

Cullen: Yes, that's what I'm asking you. Little didn't steal it from you, did he?

Nolker: He didn't have to steal it.

Nolker: Riccardi was flashing it, showing everybody my initials on the shirt, blowing all over town of who he could go with and what he could do with them, and all that business. Fine fellow! Fine chap! Fine lawyer!

Questioned About Intoxicants.

Questioned as to his use of intoxicants, Nolker said he had been "raised that way from childhood," but added that he was not in the habit of getting drunk. He said he had seen his wife inebriated many times, but denied that he taught her to drink or urged her to drink. "One little drink," he said, "would sometimes destroy her equilibrium." Asked if she had only "one little drink" every time he saw her intoxicated, he replied: "No; she's drank many a bottle."

That the names of many men and women well known in the cabaret life of St. Louis will be brought forward at the trial of the case was indicated by the deposition. Nolker denied that he was the donor of a bouquet containing a diamond ring which was handed to Miss Dorothy Obermeier, formerly a singer at Cicardi's. Nolker admitted that he contributed $5 to a pool to buy a gold cigarette case, costing $30 or $35, which was given to Mrs. Carl Broessel at the Jefferson Hotel. Broessel afterward threatened to sue Nolker for alienation.

Some of the names mentioned were those of Helen Kuhlman, who, according to Nolker, was introduced to him by "Mr. Niedringhaus;" Marcella Norse, to whom Nolker denied writing a letter containing $50; Molly Cromwell, introduced to Nolker, he said, by "Mr. Pope;" Ines Wilson, a Miss Goessel, May or Mamie Mitchell and "a lady named Steele." Nolker said he had a passing acquaintance with them all, but had never been alone with any of them.

Nolker also denied that he had ever bought photographs or pianos, to be given as presents, or that he had ever "rented the orchestra" or given a wine supper at Fauna Flora, a St. Louis County resort operated by Mark Gumberts. He was asked about a conversation he was alleged to have had with Gumberts, in which it was declared Gumberts told him he "wouldn't know anything" if called as a witness at the divorce trial. Nolker denied that any such conversation took place.

HOMER MOORE'S OPERA DEFICIT SAID TO BE AT LEAST $10,000

Loss on "Louis XIV" to Be Made Good by Guarantors Placed by Some at $12,000.

A deficit of at least $10,000 will have to be made up by the guarantors of Homer Moore's opera, "Louis XIV," a Post-Dispatch reporter was informed yesterday. By some the loss was estimated at as high as $12,000.

A guarantee fund of $14,000 was raised by H. Worthington Eddy, who subscribed $100. Nine other St. Louisans, it is said, pledged a like amount. Taking the minimum loss as $10,000, each of them would have to put up about $715 to make good his pro rata share of the shortage.

It was also learned that some of the local musicians who figured as guarantors risked only $10 apiece.

Acquitted in Trial Lasting 60 Days.

FREMONT, O., Feb. 24.—One of the longest trials in the history of Ohio ended here this afternoon when a jury returned a verdict of not guilty in the case of Joshua R. Kiser, charged with the poisoning of his wife. The trial began on Dec. 27, 1916. The defense maintained that Mrs. Kiser had died of ptomaine poisoning.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

NARROW PRICE CHANGES MARK WEEK'S TRADING IN NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

OUTLOOK IS CLOUDED

Uncertainty Regarding Success of Submarine Campaign Checks Buying.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial weekly review, says:

"The slow and tentative advance in Stock Exchange prices last week, followed by a similar yielding of prices in the present week, were such movements as might have occurred at times when no momentous issue in public affairs or international relations was hanging in the balance. They are precisely the kind of ebb and flow in values which would be expected when a period of speculative excitement has reached its natural end and been replaced by normal equilibrium.

"A market of this week's character no doubt expresses curiosity and uncertainty as to what the next turn in events will be, but it hardly indicates either bewilderment or apprehension. The significance of this attitude of the Stock Exchange lies in the fact that such a position should be taken in the face of such grave possibilities as are overhanging. The news has, on the whole, pointed to the probability of war with Germany. Therefore, the stock market's action (or inaction) would appear to mean either that sober financial opinion does not agree with that view of the situation, or else that it is not alarmed at the financial consequences of that final step.

Opinion Is Mixed.

There is a respectable body of financial opinion which holds to each conclusion. On the one hand, it is pointed out that Germany's proclamation of Jan. 31 was one more instance of her Government's complete misapprehension of public feeling in other nations; that our Government's severance of diplomatic relations took Berlin absolutely by surprise; that the reply of all the neutral Powers must necessarily have shaken the German people's faith in the military cabal which had just regained ascendancy. This being so, the party in Germany which looks beyond the events of next week of this year, and considers soberly the political and economic relations of Germany with the rest of the civilized world, after the present, is bound to get a wider hearing, and is reasonably sure to compel the exercise of sanity and prudence by the German Government.

"On the other hand, there is quite a general contention that, while the circumstances render actual war almost inevitable, and although the political consequences may be very disturbing, the financial consequences will not be of immediate concern. This judgment is founded, in the main, on the fact that, from an economic point of view, the United States is on a virtual war footing already.

"The protective measures which are necessary in the home financial machinery of a nation entering on war, and the absence or inadequacy of which, in July, 1914, made the European panic what it was, have already been taken in our markets. Those markets are, moreover, powerfully intrenched by the immense accumulation of capital and gold, which has occurred since 1914. The extensive credit entanglements between home bankers and the bankers of the enemy country, which paralyzed European finance at the outbreak of the war, would, in our own case, not exist.

Market Is Steady.

"Either conclusion would go far towards explaining the recent stock market. Yet neither would make allowance for the Stock Exchange's composure in the face of the imagined embargo on a great part of our foreign trade by the illegal warfare of the Germans. In this regard, however, the financial markets are evidently watching for developments, and apparently with skepticism as to the probability of disastrous results.

"A long continued tieup of merchant ships plying between England and the United States would certainly have had effect on the plans of our producers, manufacturers and merchants, when $89,000,000 out of the total $202,000,000 exports from this port, last month, were consigned to the United Kingdom. But, in the first place, it is by no means clear as yet whether any formidable decrease in such trade has yet occurred, and, in the second place even supposing that it has occurred, it remains to be seen whether it can continue.

"By far the greater part of our export trade with the British Islands consists of merchandise which England must continue to import. This fact is strikingly indicated by the list of commodities on which, in line with Lloyd George's speech of yesterday, the British Government places an embargo or a heavy restriction. The American trade appears to be scarcely touched by it; the consequence being that the additional freight room, obtained through discontinuance of the imports named, should be available for our own important shipments.

"The market showed irregular price changes on the week, mostly gains. Yesterday's trading was rather uncertain in tone."

London Review.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Feb. 24.—Announcement of the general result of the war loan and progress of the German submarine campaign were the absorbing incidents of this week. Lloyd George's statement of Friday, regarding restriction or prohibition of certain imports, was immediately designed to provide more tonnage for necessaries in the face of the loss of ships. But it also bears on the general "economy movement," which salient feature all along has been the plan to restrict importations.

We still hold that the main importance of the German submarine campaign, as now resumed and conducted, is to convince the world of the real character of the war as waged by Germany. Whether the United States enters the war or not will no doubt be determined by circumstances; but the mere prospect of that event shows the nature of the German policy.

Germany's utter inability to understand other nations explained in large part her action in forcing the war originally, and it may yet prove her undoing. Since the only possible prelude to any permanent peace for humanity must rest on recognition of the character of this war and the real issues involved, it is possible that the end may be achieved by convincing the German people (as distinct from the military party), and this would be best accomplished through the open support of the allies by every neutral country, as a result of the actions of the German military organism.

The New War Loan.

In a further statement to be made on Monday, the Chancellor of the Exchequer is expected to show his preliminary figures, of £700,000,000 sterling subscriptions to the war loan, to have been considerably exceeded. There is no truth whatever in the assertion from Germany that its success was not genuine.

It is quite true, however, that the money raised in mainly required to redeem short-term indebtedness. But that is always the case on the eve of a great war loan; no one here ever pretended that this had not been contemplated, and the position has to that extent been vastly improved. The outcome wholly justifies the assertion that the ability of the allies to finance the war through borrowing in their own countries, is unlimited.

So far from true is it that this present loan has exhausted the English public's resources, that what might be described as a "boom" has been commenced on the basis of saving. The Government's war savings' pound certificates, which a year ago were merely realizing a few thousand sterling weekly to the treasury, are now bringing in £3,000,000 to £5,000,000 weekly. The demands last week were so great that they actually exhausted the supply of printed certificates.

HOG PRICES AT THE RECORD TOP; TRADES AT $13

Hogs Sell at $13 on the St. Louis Market.

The $13 mark for hogs on the St. Louis market was reached yesterday, when 61 head of an average of 201 pounds changed hands at the National Stockyards. The hogs were sold by Sparks-Deaggon Commission Co. and were purchased by Kennett-Tippetts & Co. They were shipped by Clough & Hardcastle of Carrollton, Ill. The hogs were farrowed last May and were 10 months old. On the basis of sale the price averaged $26.13 per head. Last year the top price on the St. Louis market was around $8.25; and in 1910 the top previous to the war was $11.15. In 1896 the top of the market was only $3.10.

The influence of the Lenten season was responsible for general weakness in the cattle trade last week, steers closing 10c to 15c lower, with butcher stuff 15c to 25c lower than the week prior. The first and last week of Lent usually has more effect on the cattle market than in between the periods, and in view of the fact available supplies will undoubtedly rule moderate during ensuing weeks.

Choice to prime beef steers are quoted at $11.25 to $12; good to choice $9.85 to $11; medium to good $8.85 to $9.85; common to medium $7.75 to $8.85; common off-colored light killing steers $6.75 to $7.75; good to choice stockers and feeders $7.40 to $8.15; medium to good $7 to $7.40; common to medium $6 to $7. Good to choice stock cows $6.50 to $7; common to fair $6 to $6.50; good to choice light stock heifers $7.25 to $7.75. Choice to prime fat yearling butcher cattle $9.50 to $11; good to choice $8.50 to $9.50; common to medium $7 to $8.50. Choice to fancy heavy beef cows $8.50 to $9.25; good to choice $8 to $8.50; medium to good $7 to $8; cutters $6 to $7; canners $5.25 to $5.75. Good fat beef bulls $8.50 to $9.25; heavy sausage bulls $7.75 to $8.25; light sausage bulls $6.50 to $7.25.

Hog Market Higher.

An advance of fully 25c per cwt. on all classes of swine during the week indicates the strength and activity that has pervaded the trade. Early Thursday morning the highest crest ever obtained on this market was realized when prime heavy hogs reached a top of $12.97½, lacking but 2½c of making the coveted goal of $13, which was generally anticipated as being within reach for nearly a month. Yesterday the goal was reached when a lot of 61 hogs sold at $13.

While the trade has shown its remarkable strong tone, there has been an entire switch or change in buyers' attitude towards the different weights, and while the choice heavies are bringing the top of the market, the demand is generally surprisingly strong for pigs and light hogs weighing less than 200 lbs., these gradually working up towards the top of the market. Yesterday the trade closed generally 5c to 10c higher than Friday. Choice hogs 225 lbs. up 12.85 to $13; 160 to 210 lbs. $12.65 to $12.90; 150 to 190 lb. mixed hogs $12.50 to $12.80; 120 to 150 lb. pigs $11.50 to $12.25; lighter pigs $8.50 to $11.50; best rough hogs $12 to $12.25; half fat roughs $9.50 to $11.

Receipts of sheep continue small, as they have been for some time, but the feeling has not been quite so brisk for lambs as heretofore, and this indifference resulted in a decline of 15c to 25c per cwt. However, all classes of sheep and goats went fully steady. Good to choice lambs $14.25 to $14.50; medium lambs $13.50 to $14.25; plain lambs $12.50 to $13.50; common to best cull lambs $9.50 to $12.25. Fat sheep $10 to $11; choppers $7.50 to $9.50; bucks $9.50 to $10; canner sheep $5.50 to $6.50. Choice Angora goats $8 to $8.50; choice Angora kids $9 to $10; fat straight-haired goats $7.25 to $7.75; fat straight-haired kids $8 to $9.

Big purchases for Europe led to decided advance yesterday in local wheat values. The outcome was a strong close, 1½c to 2½c net higher, with May at $1.78⅝ and July at $1.49. Other commodities, too, scored gains—corn ¼c to ⅜c and oats ¼c.

Uncertainty at the outset in the wheat market gave way quickly to widespread bullish sentiment that resulted from announcement of export sales aggregating 1,600,000 bushels. Accompanying demand for future deliveries was especially urgent from houses with Eastern connections. Besides the foreign business, stated as having been actually put through, it was said there were inquiries in the market for immense additional quantities. Altered views in regard to Lloyd George's speech tended further to lift prices. The opinion most popular was that the Premier's address implied a long continuance of extraordinary demand for foodstuffs, and had even precluded much of a break in values on peace news.

Assertions that a fleet of the largest merchant vessels in the world would be shortly convoyed from this side of the Atlantic by British cruisers helped to carry the wheat market to the topmost point of the day. Bad crop reports from the Southwest continued to oppress the bears. On the other hand, no substantial relief for the car scarcity here was in sight.

Corn followed wheat, heaviness at the start being displaced soon by unmistakable strength. Shorts covered freely. Oats hardened with other grain. Trading, though, was of small volume.

At the moment traders in wheat are all at sea as to the future of the market. The bulls claim that the distruction of ships by submarines is continually lessening the world's wheat supplies, and that this grain will have to be replaced by further purchases of the allies, also that the submarine menace will necessitate England buying large amounts of wheat in American markets, even if the grain has to be convoyed across the ocean.

The bears assert that the near approach of spring weather will cause the farmers to market the last of their crop, and with supplies piling up at export points without any assurance that the shipments abroad can be made, that before long the trade will be congested and even the foreigners forced to resell their holdings in the American markets. Last year in the spring the market got a bad break, as it did the preceding year. Bears expect history to repeat regardless of the smaller supplies the world over.

COTTON MARKET UP 15 POINTS IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—The feature in the cotton market today was the strength of the near positions. For the first time since the beginning of the war, the spot month sold above the next active position, March being exchanged for May at a premium of 5 points on March, while there was regular business in March at 8 points over May. This reflection of the spot situation exercised an influence on later deliveries and the general list closed steady at a net advance of 3 to 15 points. May contracts fluctuated between 16.21c and 16.31c, closing at 16.30c.

The market opened steady at unchanged prices to an advance of 6 points. The bearish view of the British import policy responsible for the liquidation and sharp break of yesterday, appeared to have undergone some modification over night and the market sold 3 to 13 points net higher right after the call on covering by some of yesterday's sellers. This advance met another flurry of liquidation and prices reacted to about last night's close. Offerings were limited, however, and the market soon firmed up again on renewed covering. March advanced to 16.33c or 21 points above last night's close, while July sold up to 16.37c, or 9 points net higher. New crop positions were relatively quiet, but sold about 6 to 8 points above Friday's closing, in sympathy with the near month strength. Closing prices were a few points off from the best under realizing.

Manchester trade advices said the prospects were uncertain and that goods were beginning to accumulate owing to the reduction in export facilities. These reports probably promoted some of the early selling, but advices from the domestic goods trade were encouraging. Larger sales were reported in Fall River, with prices showing advances of 1-16c to ¼c on some lines.

The advance in near positions was accomplished by reports that offerings of hedged cotton had been pretty well cleaned up, and that buyers were now more dependent upon securing supplies from holders of unhedged cotton in the interior.

Port receipts today were 12,201 bales; for the season 5,335,713 bales; exports today 8476 bales; for the season 3,965,933 bales; port stocks 1,304,026 bales.

TIE COMPANY BUYS CARONDELET SITE FOR ROLLING MILL

$1,500,000 Concern, With Offices in Chicago and Philadelphia, Leases Office in St. Louis in Which to Establish Headquarters

REALTY SITUATION IS STRENGTHENED

Syndicate Takes Six Months' Option on DeMun Tract and Great Developments Are Expected—Big Week at City View Place.

By BERRY MOORE.

While the volume of real estate transactions during the past week was not large, developments were of a sort that tended to strengthen the situation generally in this sphere of activity.

The most important deal was that by which the Railway Tie Co. acquired four acres in Carondelet as a site for a rolling mill that will employ 300 men. The boundaries of the site are Haven and Kraus streets, and the Mississippi River, the location being most attractive for such an industry.

The sale was effected by the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., which recently started the ball rolling in the manufacturing district of northwest St. Louis when it closed the deal by which the Pullman Car Co. will erect a mammoth plant at Natural Bridge road and Semple avenue.

The Tie company, which is capitalized at $1,500,000 and which has offices in Chicago and Philadelphia, has leased offices in the Boatmen's Bank Building, and will make St. Louis its headquarters.

It was announced yesterday that the building to be erected on the Moser Hotel lot in conjunction with the 14-story Shops building at the southwest corner of Eighth and Olive streets, would be eight stories high. This site, which is located on the north side of Pine street between Eighth and Ninth, was leased by the Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co., agent for Leo Moser, to the Mortgage & Finance Co., which is erecting the Shops building, for 99 years.

Option on De Mun Tract.

Another significant announcement was that the De Mun tract, adjoining Hillcrest on the south, the Maffit tract on the north, and extending west from Skinker road, had been taken under a six months' option by a syndicate of which David P. Leahy is the prime figure.

This move on the subdivision chess board, according to realty circles, foreshadows the early extension of the Hamilton avenue car line west and south through Hillcrest and the DeMun and Maffitt tracts to the Market street car line, which has its terminus at West End Heights. The Clayton car track, which runs south on Skinker road from Delmar and which skirts the north line of Hillcrest, would be used in this connection, together with the tracks already laid on DeMun avenue, which run south through Hillcrest to the De Mun tract.

The introduction of the Hamilton avenue line as outlined is expected to reawaken this entire area, especially the part adjacent to Skinker and Clayton roads, since it will, by virtue of its ramifications, provide transportation facilities for the entire region lying west of Forest Park.

As a result of the efforts of David P. Leahy, A. R. Schollmeyer, W. J. Holbrook and Charles DeLargy, the United Railways Co., it was stated, has agreed to extend the Hamilton avenue line, and work on it will be commenced early this spring.

Maffitt Grading Begun.

Preparatory to placing the Maffitt tract on the market, the grading there has been started and construction of surface and municipal improvements, which will be of a superior grade, will be started as soon as the ground is available. This tract will be marketed by the Broadway Savings Trust Co., through Charles DeLargy, its real estate officer, for a syndicate composed of wealthy clients of this progressive financial institution. Primarily it will be a high-class bungalow subdivision, but parts of the plat will be reserved for dwellings. The scheme of the subdivision was conceived by Henry Wright, the landscape artist.

While no intimation has been given to this effect, the supposition is that Leahy has obtained control of the De Mun tract to link it with the Maffitt tract, Leahy, Holbrook, Schollmeyer and DeLargey having been the prime movers in the organization of the syndicate that purchased the latter tract.

The Davis Realty Co. had another big week at City View Place, breaking the record of the previous week by a substantial margin. The largest sale was made by Everett Davis, president of the company, who disposed of $10,000 worth of lots to a nonresident, who made the purchase as a speculation. And not a few lots are being purchased in this tract for speculative purposes.

Plans have been disclosed for many attractive homes, ranging in price from $5000 to $10,000, which will be erected in this subdivision this spring by lot owners and building operators. This property is situated just north of University City and occupies a commanding plateau, thus forming a superb site for homes of the better class.

Harris Sees a Big Season.

John S. Harris, who put ginger into the real estate market two or three years ago by the launching of a series of big sales, through which were opened many sites in the outlying districts for high-class homes, including Hillcrest, North Parkview addition and the Country Club tract, is jubilant over the outlook for the coming spring and summer, not only in the residential, but in the business district. Conditions are ripe for a wide and comprehensive real estate market in St. Louis, he says, and, barring untoward developments, he predicts a banner spring and summer in the local realty and building field.

Harris, who heretofore has made a specialty of large auction sales and subdivision properties, has entered the general realty and building field as secretary of the Fletcher R. Harris Realty Co., which succeeded the McNair & Harris Real Estate Co., and doubtless his enterprise will be reflected in realty and building operations in St. Louis.

Permit for Hotel-Apartment Building on Rock Island Tract Taken Out.

A permit was taken out yesterday for the eight-story hotel apartment building to be erected on the south side of Berlin avenue west of Union boulevard by a syndicate, promoted by Sam Hamburg Jr., of the Rosenbaum-Hauschulte Real Estate Co., which will provide the capital for the project.

Plans for this building, which will, it is said, be the acme of hotel-apartments, were prepared by Preston J. Bradshaw in collaboration with Sam Koplar, who is financially interested in the enterprise and under whose supervision the building will be erected.

Are pets your hobby? Animal, bird and poultry fanciers published more want ads in the Post-Dispatch last year than were printed in the four other St. Louis newspapers combined.

RICE GROWERS OF ARKANSAS PROPOSE MILL IN ST. LOUIS

Delegation Enlists J. I. Epstein to Interest Capital and He Finds It Sympathetic.

Planters in the rice country on the Cotton Belt Railroad, in Arkansas, were in St. Louis last week, trying to interest capital in the establishment of a rice mill here, according to J. I. Epstein, a prominent real estate agent at 617 Chestnut street, who owns a rice plantation of 1000 acres near Hickory Ridge, Ark.

That section of the country, Epstein says, must ship its rice either to Memphis, Tenn., or to New Orleans, the only rice mills south of the Ohio River being in these cities. Better prices could be obtained for their rice, they believe, if mills were located in St. Louis, by reason of the fact that the geographical position of this city would facilitate the distribution of the cereal.

The rice belt of Arkansas extends for 135 miles along the Cotton Belt, with Jonesboro and Gilette as centers, and produces, according to Epstein, the largest crops of that cereal grown in the South.

Epstein has been enlisted to interest St. Louis in the proposed enterprise, and from the interest already evinced he believes the requisite capital will be forthcoming.

Why John Quit Drinking

By John's Wife

I'm the happiest little woman
In all this little town,
And my merry laugh and singing
Takes the place of sigh and frown,
For JOHN HAS QUIT HIS DRINKING
And is like himself once more,
And the world is just a paradise
With such happiness in store!

One day I read some verses—
"Mary's Miracle," the name—
And I said, that's John exactly,
And I'll send and get the same,
So I sent for GOLDEN TREATMENT
(As sly as sly could be),
And I put it in John's supper
And I put it in his tea.

And it didn't taste a little bit;
Had no odor, so, you see—
It was smoothest kind of sailing
For little Doctor Me.
And I watched and prayed and waited
(And cried some, too, I guess),
And I didn't have the greatest faith,
I'm ashamed now to confess.

And John never thought a minute
He was being cured of drink,
And soon he's as well as anyone,
It makes me cry to think!
Just makes me cry for gladness,
I'm so proud to be his wife—
Since he is cured of drinking
And leads a nice, new life.

"Since John he quit a-drinking!"
I can't say it times enough!
And hates and loathes a liquor
As he would a poison stuff.
And when I say my prayers at night,
As thankful as can be—
I pray for John the most of all—
Then GOLDEN TREATMENT.

LITTLE EFFECT ON TRADE HERE LIKELY FROM ENGLISH EMBARGO

Opinion of Men Engaged in Boot and Shoe, Hide and Leather and Fur Lines.

There will be little effect on trade conditions in St. Louis as a result of England's embargo on boots, shoes, hides, leather and furs, men engaged in these lines declared yesterday.

Jackson Johnson, chairman of the International Shoe Co., pointed out that there has been practically no shipments to England of shoes or leather during the last year. England has been manufacturing shoes for herself and her allies, he explained, and has a large stock of leather on hand. It was his opinion that the embargo on leather and shoes would be raised when England finds she needs more leather.

The embargo on furs was anticipated, acording to Albert M. Ahern, vice president of the Funsten Bros.' Fur Co. A good many furs were shipped from here in January for the March sales there. As a result of the foresight of the fur dealers, the embargo will have little, if any effect on the local market, he pointed out. No effect will be noticed until fall, he declared, when the next big sale of furs is scheduled and the ultimate effect will depend entirely upon developments in the situation between now and December.

Local dealers may be affected by the embargo on fruit. While there are no exporters in St. Louis many of the largest dealers ship fruit to Eastern merchants who export it, and the embargo probably will cause a falling off, within a few weeks, of the amount of business here.

POULTRY PROBLEMS SOLVED

Shellac in Incubator.

I painted the inside of my incubator with shellac, not thinking what results this might have. Kindly advise me as to whether shellac gives off any poisonous fumes under the heat, enough to hurt the eggs, as you know shellac contains a large per cent of wood alcohol. Also tell me what 103 degrees Fahrenheit will register on a tested Centigrade thermometer.—H. R. D., Overland, Mo.

If the incubator has been thoroughly aired and dried out the coating of shellac inside should have no injurious affect on the eggs. But be sure that the machine has stood open for several days, and that the shellac is well dried out before putting in the eggs and starting the machine. On the Centigrade thermometer the freezing point is designated as zero, while on the Fahrenheit it is 32 degrees. The rule for changing from Fahrenheit to Centigrade is to subtract 32 from the former then multiply by 5-9. By this rule 103 Fahrenheit would be slightly more than 39.4 Centigrade. To change from Centigrade to Fahrenheit, add 32 and multiply by 9-5.

Egg Records.

I am a reader of your Sunday paper and have been reading about laying contests in the poultry page. I have Rhode Island Reds and on Feb. 1, 1916 I began keeping a record of the eggs they laid. I will give it to you by months and would like to have you tell me what you think of it. I started with 26 hens but only had 18 when the year was up. I also set some of the hens in February, March and April. This is the record: February, 375 eggs; March, 427; April, 243; May, 341; June, 268; July, 232; August, 155; September, 76; October, 27; November, 65; December, 76; January, 116. Total 2392 eggs.

J. F. C., Corsicana, Tex.

Figured on the basis that you kept an average of 22 hens for the entire year, these hens averaged about 109 eggs a year. The average of all hens is said to be about 80 eggs annually, so that your hens have done considerably better than normal. However, when you consider that many flocks, bred and handled for intensive laying, average more than 200 eggs annually, you will realize that your flock could make a much better showing without doing anything very remarkable. But undoubtedly you have some good individuals and it would pay you to find out which ones they are so that you could breed from them and build up a laying strain. The fact that your birds laid quite well in winter—January and February—also indicates that you have good foundation stock from which to build up a good line of layers.

Let Dog Have Part in Your Pleasures

The greatest happiness which a dog can know is to be the friend and playfellow of some master or mistress who is young and frolicsome enough to enjoy the fun as much as he does himself.

How ungrateful and unkind it is to shut him out from a share in our own pleasant walks or outdoor amusements. Some people are hard-hearted enough to go out and leave their dog chained up at home, others force the unhappy creature to run over hard roads after bicycles, panting and footsore. Those who keep a dog should see that it has good food regularly and that it has plenty of fresh water.

FOX TERRIER EMBODIES MANY IDEAL QUALITIES

Student-Fancier Says Dog Is Descendant of the Hound, for Fox and Badger Chasing.

Fox terriers, while not the most popular of breeds, nevertheless occupy a much-loved niche in the hearts of dog fanciers, as he is admitted to embody many of the qualities that go to make up the ideal terrier.

Hugh Dalziel, author of a book about fox terriers, claims the animal is the descendant of the hound, used to chase the fox and badger. It is not claimed the dog is of direct descent, without intermixtures of blood, but the inference is drawn that through all the centuries since Caius, and probably for many centuries before that time, the terrier was used for the same work. Dalziel says the fox and the badger in their form, nature and habits being unchanged, the dog used to follow them into their "terriers," would, of necessity, be kept of a certain type, however modified in trivial points. Dalziell adds that the word "terrier," which is from the French "terrier out of low Latin terrarium," and this against from the Latin "terra," clearly indicates that the dog is one that burrows or goes to earth after its quarry; and the suitability of the term is enhanced when we recollect that the hole, berry, burrow or earth of the rabbit, fox or badger is called in French a "terrier." The prefix, "fox," Dalziell says, to this particular variety of dog, show him to have been selected from others as specially suited to bolt that animal.

Fox terriers are of two varieties, smooth and wire-haired, and while the smooth dog, by reason of popularity and early recognition as a breed, is given the right of way, he is not believed to be the older of the fox terrier family. No reference can be found of a smooth-coated terrier of this class earlier than 1785-90, and then this was was attributed to a single breeder, one Col. Thornton.

The fox terrier is a sporting dog, and is used in all countries where the exhilarating sport of fox-hunting can be enjoyed. Their predominating color is white, with markings of black and tan. Fox terriers are of gay, lively and active appearance, and are remarkably intelligent.

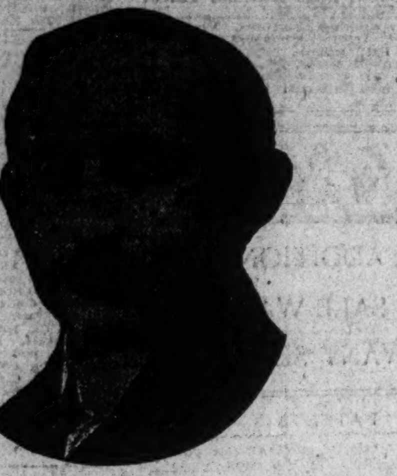
SOMETHING TO EXCHANGE?
It's still valuable—but more valuable to somebody else than YOU. "Somebody else" has something YOU WANT TO SECURE. A Post-Dispatch Want Ad should introduce you to the "other party."



I want the people of St. Louis and vicinity to read my next Sunday ad. They will learn how five million people have read "What St. Louis thinks of the New Edison."

We must live up to our motto,

MOONEY SENTENCED TO HANG

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 24.—Thomas J. Mooney, a labor agitator, was sentenced today to death, by hanging, by Judge Franklin A. Griffin, in the Superior Court, for a bomb explosion that cost 10 lives during a preparedness parade here last July.

Mooney was convicted of murder in the first degree two weeks ago. Judge Griffin set May 17 for the execution. An appeal will be taken from Judge Griffin's refusal to grant a new trial, Mooney's counsel said.

SURE WAY TO GET RID OF DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all that you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.—ADV.

WAR NURSE FROM FRANCE TO TEACH BANDAGE-MAKING

Will Begin Demonstration in Red Cross Headquarters, Seventh and Olive Tomorrow.

CAMPAIGN FOR MEMBERS

Chairman Simmons to Take Active Charge and Try for Minimum of 20,000.

The Red Cross membership campaign, which already has resulted in 15,000 members being pledged, will be intensified tomorrow with the expectation of speedily raising the total to the 20,000 minimum requested of St. Louis by the national headquarters. George W. Simmons, chairman of the Membership Committee, will move his desk from the Simmons Hardware Co., of which he is vice president, to the Red Cross headquarters at Seventh and Olive streets, and will take active charge of the campaign.

This step was decided upon by Simmons after H. J. Hill of Washington, D. C., director of membership extension, was called away from St. Louis by the death of his father, Friday night, at Allentown, Pa.

One of Simmons' first activities will be to organize and instruct a number of men loaned to the Membership Committee by business firms, organizations and societies. Each man will be trained as an executive to take charge of the membership work among the employes in a particular line of business.

Demonstration of Bandage Making.

Another activity to begin tomorrow will be the demonstration at headquarters of the making of septic bandages by Miss A. McColloch, a Red Cross nurse, who was at Pau, France, in a base hospital, for six months. She will give instruction to all women desiring it.

At a banquet Friday night at the Washington Hotel, individuals pledged themselves to obtain members totaling more than 15,000. J. J. O'Connor, director of the central division of the Red Cross, with headquarters at Chicago, explained the activities of the organization, stating that it is not a body or group of nurses, doctors, ambulance drivers and stretcher-carriers, but an army of American citizens, who, by becoming members, have given their moral support to the nurses, doctors and other field workers.

He explained that membership is divided into six classes: Annual, $1; subscribing, $2; contributing, $5; sustaining, $10; life, $25, and patron, $100. No membership is more valuable than the other, except that, together with all these save the annual, a subscription to the American Red Cross, the organization's monthly publication is given.

St. Louis Chapter's Duties.

He explained that the duties of the St. Louis Chapter will be to supervise and take care of local disaters, to instruct women who care to learn how to make bandages, soldiers' kits and other necesary articles in time of war, take care of the families of soldiers sent to the front or border, and to act in a general way as the St. Louis agency of the American Red Cross. Field service must be voluntary, and as far as nurses are concerned the most expert graduate nurses only are accepted.

The instruction of both men and women in first-aid qualifications and bandage making is purely a matter of choice, the Red Cross local chapter merely being authorized, as the representative of the national organization, to take up this work. In times of war, the director said, those women who have taken the training given by the Red Cross are capable of taking the places of the Red Cross nurses who go to the front.

St. Louis already has a base hospital in the making. The initial cost was $25,000, which was privately donated.

The local committee decided yesterday to incorporate the motto given Friday night by Archbishop Glennon in place of a benediction, into some of its literature. The motto is: "Give us the Red Cross; God wills it."

ST. LOUIS A "HOODOO" CITY FOR MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK

Once Snowbound on Way Here, Contracted Pneumonia Another Time, and Friday Suffered Broken Ribs.

Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink yesterday canceled all of her engagements for the remainder of the season, following an automobile accident in which the celebrated diva suffered fractures of two ribs, Friday night. She will remain at the Planters Hotel for two or three weeks, and while she is in considerable pain and able to take only short breaths, her physician said that owing to her splendid physique there is little danger of complications, despite her age, 56 years. No visitors would be permitted, he said, for a week.

The singer's manager said that St. Louis is proving itself to be her hoodo city. In 1913, on the way to keep an engagement with the Symphony Orchestra, she was snowbound between here and Chicago and did not arrive until night, missing her afternoon concert. Two years ago she was engaged for a recital here and the Odeon was almost sold out, but she contracted pneumonia just before the date.

The Symphony Orchestra's repeat concert last night was given without Mme. Schumann-Heink.

Senator Gallinger Has Grippe.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—Senator Jacob H. Gallinger of New Hampshire, the Republican Senate leader, is confined to his home here with grippe. Physicians said tonight his illness was not serious. Senator Gallinger is in his eightieth year.

PRUSSIAN TAX ON BACHELORS

LONDON, Feb. 24.—Dr. August von Lentze, Prussian Minister of Finance, has announced a new heavy tax on bachelors, according to a Berlin telegram transmitted by the Exchange Telegraph Co.'s Copenhagen correspondent.

Families with children, on the other hand, the announcement states, will be relieved of a part of the burden of ordinary taxation, according to the number of their children.

FOR A BAD COUGH

Here is a fine old-fashioned recipe for coughs, colds or catarrh trouble that has been used with great success: Get from your druggist 1 oz. of Parmint (Double Strength), about 75c worth, and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and 4 oz. of granulated sugar. This will make full half a pint when mixed. Take one tablespoonful 4 times a day.

No more racking your whole body with a cough. Clogged nostrils should open, air passages of your head clear up so you can breathe freely. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has a stubborn cough, or hard cold, or catarrh in any form, should give this prescription a trial. —ADV.

BONE DRY AND ANTI-CIGARETTE BILLS ALLOWED TO BECOME LAW

Oklahoma Governor Does Not Sign Measures; What They Provide.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Feb. 24.—The Ferguson "bone dry" liquor bill, passed Feb. 19, and the amended cigarette bill, passed on the same day, today became laws without the formality of being signed by Gov. Williams. The bills had been in the Governor's hands over the constitutional period in which he must act on them or allow them automatically to become laws.

The "bone dry" measure prohibits shipment of liquor by common carrier into the State and makes mere possession of it a misdemeanor.

The anti-cigarette law as amended would license dealers, who also would forfeit their business privilege by selling cigarettes to minors.

BOY HURT BY AUTO TRUCK

Lad Knocked Down, Skull Fractured, When He Runs Into Machine.

Oscar Dutzl, 12 years old, was knocked down and sufered a fracture of the skull yesterday afternoon when he ran into the rear of an automobile truck near his home, 4460 Virginia avenue. He was taken to the Alexian Brothers' Hospital. James E. Cody of 3417A South Compton avenue, driver of the truck, was held by the police.

DR. WITHERS TELLS TEACHERS WHAT THE SCHOOL STANDS FOR

Dr. John W. Withers, the new Superintendent of Public Instruction, was tendered a complimentary luncheon yesterday at the City Club, at which many of the public school teachers were guests.

Dr. Withers, when called upon to speak, did not discuss in detail specific plans for the welfare of the school system, but confined himself to generalities in reference to education.

He said that the school today stands for education and protection of the child. He made mention of many features of the present school system intended for the benefit of the pupil, such as the hygiene department, which was unknown [illegible] years ago.

Doctor Tells How to Strengthen Eyesight 50 Per Cent in One Week's Time in Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Philadelphia, Pa. Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye strain or other eye weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time, and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time.

Note: Another prominent physician to whom the above article was submitted said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances, or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist, and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." It is sold in St. Louis by Johnson, Enderle & Pauley, Judge & Dolph, Wolff-Wilson and other druggists.—ADV.

Your memory I shall always keep.
The depth of my sorrow I cannot tell
At the loss of my dear husband I loved so well.
Day by day I sadly miss you,

But they little know the grief
That within my heart's concealed.

Never from my memory fade;
My loving heart will always linger
Around the grave where you are laid.
But I hope we'll meet our parting,

If 25,000 former metal-plate users told you that the Elliott was best, wouldn't you believe these people, who had been through the mill? Write for a copy of "What They Said to Roff;" it's free. ### An Opportunity, Druggists!

The new building on the corner Hodiamont and Minerva (1396 Hodiamont) is now completed and there is one store vacant—an ideal location for a drug store. One of the stores in the building is now occupied by a progressive notion store, while just opposite is a progressive grocery and meat shop, next door to which is a bakery very much patronized—while there is no retail drug store in this neighborhood for blocks. This is in the heart of the thickly populated Hodiamont district and the rent of $40 is therefore very cheap. Opportunity is knocking at your door! Don't let it pass by, but see me at once. J. I. EPSTEIN, 617 Chestnut st.

She is Organizing American Women for Work in Event of War

THIS portrait is of Miss Grace Parker, who was chosen by several prominent Americans headed by Miss Anne Morgan and Miss Maud Wetmore to teach the women of this country how to "do their bit" should Uncle Sam be drawn into the European conflict. Last October Miss Parker went to England, where she observed how its women supplemented the work of the soldiers in the field and the sailors on the sea. In December she returned and in January there was formed the National League for Women's Service, with Miss Parker as its National Commandant. Its headquarters are at 105 West Fortieth street, New York City.

As preliminary measures of organization, Miss Parker already has established:

A registration of volunteers, with details of their qualifications and the amount of time they are willing to serve.

A co-ordination of her work with that of other societies whose aim is as disinterested as her own.

"We can use anyone," says Miss Parker, "from the old-fashioned cook, who is extremely popular in canteens, to the modern woman who drives her own car or who has studied the military science of signalling."

Distinctive Gowns Which Any Home Dressmaker can Attempt.

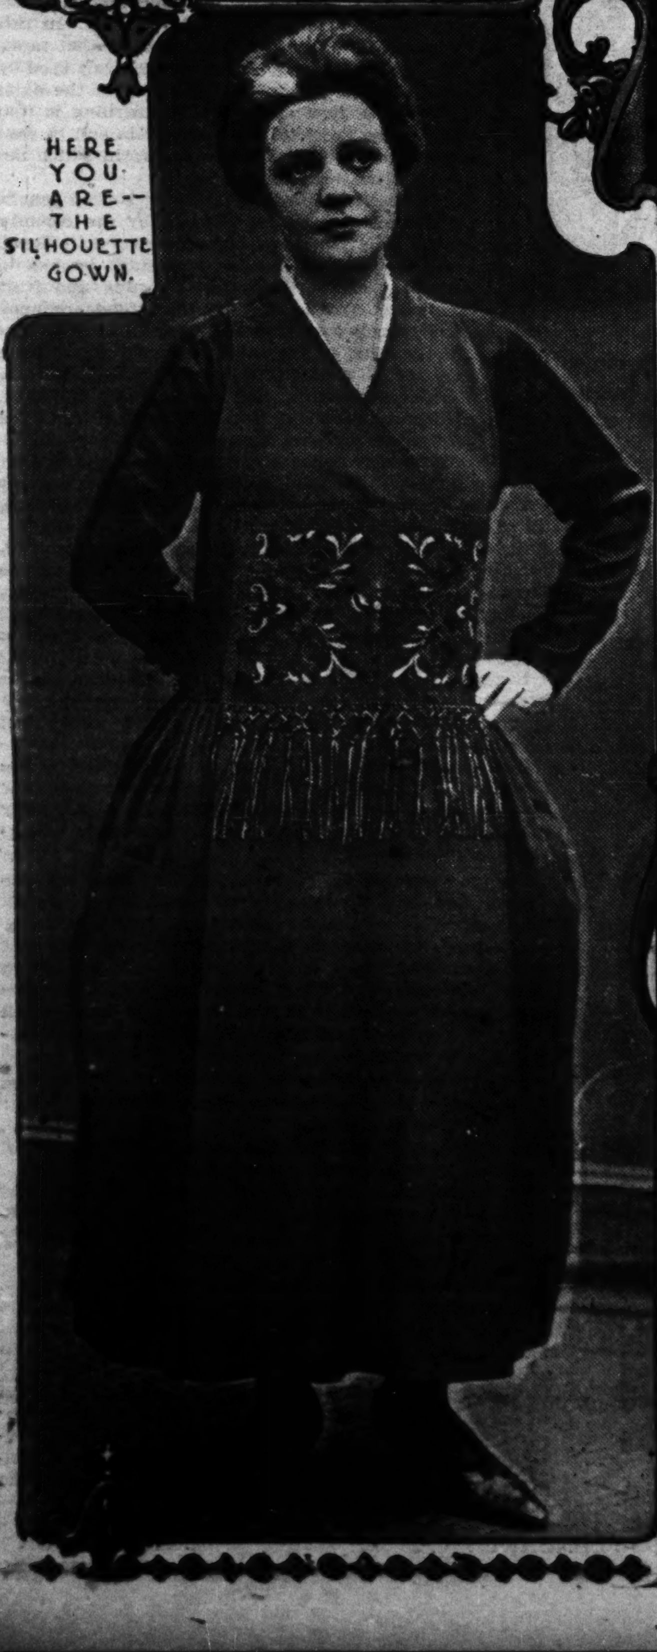
PHOTOGRAPHS © BY UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD, N.Y.

CHECKED JUMPER FROCK OF SIMPLE CUT--SURE TO MAKE A HIT WITH MEN FOLKS.



HERE YOU ARE--THE SILHOUETTE GOWN.

THE dotty dress is of pongee and the dots of red embroidery. Just a line of dots around the bottom of the skirt, three or four scattered on the sailor collar and a few on the sides, and no further decoration is needed.

The jumper frock is the very latest version of that garment. The one in the picture is of tan and green checked taffeta with guimpe of tan chiffon. To make it thoroughly practical add pockets faced in green taffeta. The Smolin hat of brown straw is faced in satin of the same shade and bristles with brown quills.

In the silhouette gown the fullness of the hips, instead of being produced by the skirt, is brought about by the flare of the Russian blouse, which has a hem of satin headed by embroidery. There are sleeves of satin and white pique collars and cuffs.

U. S. Once Broke With Great Nation; Sank Many of Her Ships and Settled Differences Without Going to War

In 1798 France and America recalled their respective Ambassadors after a dispute over contraband and neutral shipping similar to the present controversy with Germany—engaged in several naval battles and reached an amiable agreement without actual hostilities and without a formal peace conference :: :: ::

In Feb., 1797, Pinckney was informed by the foreign Minister that he had rendered himself liable to arrest by staying in the country without permission.

A BREAK in diplomatic relations such as exists today between the United States and Germany is generally regarded as the last step "short of war," but there is a precedent in American history where a diplomatic breach was followed by many overt acts and still war was never declared by either country in the controversy. Eventually the trouble was settled, and settled without the aid of a peace conference.

This occurred during the administration of President John Adams, and France was the country with whom we severed formal correspondence. There are many striking parallels between the American-French controversy of 1796-1800 and the present differences between the United States and Germany. Then, too, Washington was accused of being pro-British in its leanings; then, too, one of the belligerents declared that the United States was making one set of blockade restrictions for one country and another for another. In brief, the quarrel then, as now, was anent the rights of neutrals on the high seas.

Before the trouble was finally disposed of United States naval craft had destroyed scores of French ships and imprisoned French citizens and other overt acts were committed by both sides. Still there was a strong peace party in both countries and they finally had their way.

At the close of the Revolutionary War John Jay concluded, in connection with the general peace, a commercial treaty with England. In 1778, when France sent a fleet and soldiers to help the colonists, a treaty was entered into between the countries providing for a defensive alliance.

France was displeased with the Jay treaty. The extension of the definition of contraband so as to include materials for building ships, the allowance of the right of search and permission that British prizes could be brought to American ports was especially distressing to the Directory which had gone to war with England in 1793.

There was a strong party in the United States headed by John Adams which for a long time had been in favor of abrogating the treaty with France. Paris did not wait for the United States to annul the compact. In February, 1796, the Foreign Minister assumed a threatening tone and told James Monroe, our Ambassador, that the Jay treaty was a violation of the entente of 1778. The chief purpose was to frighten the United States into a relinquishment of the treaty with England. Monroe's indefinite course and the communications from the French Ministers, Fauchet and Adet, at Philadelphia, tended to convince the Directory that if France put on a threatening air Americans could be got to vote the opposition ticket in 1796 and reverse the policy of the country.

In the summer of 1796, this plan apparently having failed, France suspended the functions of their Ministers. They were not ordered home, but told to remain as foreign citizens and watch the political situation.

Immediately thereafter France began seizing American ships. Something should be said in justice to France at this point. By her treaty of 1778 contraband had been defined so as not to include provisions; and since by the Jay treaty we had agreed that provisions might be considered as contraband of war, England began to seize our provision ships bound for France on the ground that food was necessary for France as an article of war. The French felt that they were being treated unequally. England might seize provisions bound to the French West Indies, but France could not seize food bound for the British West Indies.

An American grievance against France at this time was the embargo that had been laid on Bordeaux whereby many ships had been held up and their cargoes confiscated. In June, 1796, the American vessel Mount Vernon, was sold to an English citizen. A French warship seized her in Delaware Bay and great excitement was caused in America by the act.

In the meantime Monroe had been recalled from France and Pinckney sent as Ambassador. Before Monroe had a chance to present Pinckney at the Foreign Office he was informed by the Directory that France would not receive another American Minister until her grievances were redressed.

This left Pinckney in a delicate position. All strangers without credentials were regarded as spies in France. In February, 1797, he was informed by the Foreign Minister that he had rendered himself liable to arrest by staying in the country without permission. He got passports and left France at once.

When this became known the extreme Federalists wanted to declare war on France at once, but Adams and Hamilton, realizing that the United States was not prepared for war, were opposed to drastic action. On May 15, 1797, Adams read a message to a special session of Congress in which he recommended consideration of measures for defense, at the same time announcing that negotiations would continue. It was determined to send three commissioners to France—Marshall of Virginia, Pinckney and Elbridge Gerry of Massachusetts. Gerry was a personal friend of the President and was dubbed "Adams' own Ambassador." (Gerry apparently was the Col. House of his era.)

In the meantime Congress began fitting out ships of war and training 10,000 soldiers. The three commissioners arrived in Paris in October, 1797. The Directory ruled France and Talleyrand ruled the Directory. The Americans were received with scant courtesy. Some time after their arrival they were approached by three men, designated later in the dispatchs as X, Y and Z with a suggestion that the work of the commissioners in France would be made much easier if they would present the Directory with a million francs and make a loan to France of several millions. The Americans ignored the bribe suggestion and talked of other things until one of the agents cried:

"Gentlemen, you do not speak of the point. It is money; it is expected that you will offer money." To which the envoys replied they had already answered that.

"No," said he, "you have not; what is your answer?"

"It is," said the Americans, "No, no; not a sixpence."

In January, 1798, Talleyrand dismissed the envoys and two of them departed from France. Gerry remained, and his action was severely criticised in America.

In the meantime, Congress, expecting that France would soon declare war, rushed measures for defense. The ships of the new navy were soon at sea. In December, 1798, they numbered 14 men of war and eight converted merchantmen. Squadrons were stationed in the West Indies, where French privateers were most active.

On Feb. 9, 1799, the Constellation, commanded by Capt. Thomas Truxton, fell in with the French frigate l'Insurgente. Truxton gave chase boldly. The Frenchman tried to escape, but finding this impossible, raised the tricolor and prepared to fight. After a hot fight of an hour and a quarter, the French vessel, outmaneuvered and riddled, was forced to surrender. The French Captain was under orders not to fire on the American flag and had avoided combat as long as possible. When he came aboard the Constellation he cried:

"Why have you fired on the national flag? Our two nations are at peace."

But Truxton only replied: "You are my prisoner."

Other engagements followed this. In February, 1800, the Constellation fought a drawn battle with the French warship La Vengeance, of slightly superior size, and in October of the same year the Boston captured the Barceau. About the same time Lieut. Isaac Hull daringly cut a handsome privateer out of a port in San Domingo. The period of retaliation lasted for two and a half years and cost France 84 vessels. The part taken by the United States navy aroused great enthusiasm at home and engendered respect for Americans abroad. The patience with which France bore our resistance shows how little she was inclined to war.

When the French Captain came aboard the Constellation he cried: "Why have you fired on the National flag? Our two nations are at peace."

While the navy was winning honor the army was getting into a hopeless muddle. For Commander in Chief all eyes were turned to Washington, but he was getting too old to take actual command. A strong move was made by the friends of Hamilton to get the post for him. Politics entered into the discussion and much bitterness was aroused. Finally Major-General Knox was put in command, with Hamilton as first aid. Long before the regiments were ready for service Gerry arrived from France with assurances that Talleyrand had no wish to make war on the United States, but he was a discredited Republican and little attention was paid to his message.

Then came the mission of Dr. Logan. He was a Quaker from Philadelphia, a man of social influence and a Republican. He went to Paris to induce the Government there to give some assurance that France did not desire war. (May one not call Dr. Logan the Henry Ford of his times?) He succeeded in securing the release of some American prisoners and tried to show Talleyrand what a disastrous effect on both countries a war would have. The Minister received him with great kindness and Dr. Logan returned to America feeling this his mission had been successful.

Logan was subject to much criticism on his return. Washington regarded his action as smacking of treason and said that if France really wanted peace she should cease seizing American vessels. Adams, however, received Dr. Logan kindly and received from him much information as to the French attitude.

In October, 1798, Adams had received official assurances from Talleyrand that he was willing to resume regular intercourse. The sagacious diplomat saw that he had gone too far. There apparently was no avidity on the part of America to accept the proffer without further assurances. However, on Feb. 18, 1799, Adams startled the country by sending to the Senate the nomination of William Vans Murray to be Minister to France. He announced that he had reason to believe that a Minister would be received.

The following May word came from Talleyrand that he would receive three American commissioners, which Adams had agreed to send instead of Murray. When the envoys, Patrick Henry, Murray and Ellsworth, met in Paris, a change had taken place in the Directory. The strong hand and wise head of Napoleon had replaced the corrupt and foolish Directory and Talleyrand was no longer dictator of the foreign relations of France. The policy of nursing a French interest in America which for seven years had been followed by Republican leaders in Paris was now abandoned. The relations between the two countries were put on a basis of national dignity and national interest. No trouble was found in making such an agreement as secured neutrality and the reasonable protection of commerce. When the completed treaty was brought to the United States it was received with satisfaction. The Republicans were pleased because it brought assurances of peace with France and the Federalists found consolation in the fact that the old treaty of 1778 had been superseded. It was, in fact, a blessing that the country had peace and was no longer bound to another nation by an entangling alliance, but the repeal of the old treaty cost America the spoliation claims, for Napoleon insisted that both should stand or fall together.

The Senate hesitated over the ratification of the agreement and finally approved it for a period of eight years, reserving the right to file claims for damage to shipping. In December, 1801, when the Federalists were out of office, the treaty was completely ratified and the indemnity clause was left out.

As for Adams, he probably saved the country from war. He thought that this was the greatest of his services to the country and long afterwards said he desired not better epitaph than this:

The "Emancipation" of Kentucky's Hill Children

The experiences of "Uncle Ed," who learned to read and write at 69, and "Aunt" Patience, who has become a champion speller at 72, show what the moonlight schools are doing for those who never had a chance — The State Illiteracy Commission has reason to believe that it has reached the goal it set for 1916, which was the reduction of illiteracy among mountain folk by 2500 persons :: ::

AT Manchester, down in Clay County, Ky., not long ago, there was a unique celebration. The ranking feature was a parade, at the head of which marched "Uncle Ed" Stivers, 69 years old, who carried an American flag. Behind him were 667 men and women of various conditions and ages.

"Uncle Ed" and those who followed him were celebrating their emancipation, which is to say that they had learned to read and write. The distinction of carrying the banner had been granted to "Uncle Ed" because, of all this throng of beginners in school, he was the next to the oldest.

The most extraordinary feature of the event, however, was a spelling bee, and this introduces the oldest of the scholars, "Aunt Patience" Lunsford, who is 72 years old. There had been other contests in reading, writing and ciphering, but the "boys and girls" showed the deepest interest when the time came for the "spellin' down." Nearly everybody participated.

Difficult words cut them down singly and in squads for an hour. Finally it became a duel between "Aunt" Patience, who, by the way, had "spelled down" "Uncle Ed" a long time before, and a little woman many years her junior, who carried a 10-months-old baby on her arm. She was one of two contestants who had babes in arms. There had been no one at home with whom to leave them, and on festival occasions like this, babies would not suffer others to hold them.

"Aunt" Patience was very tired, and so was her adversary, for that matter. For more than an hour their minds had been continually on the alert in order not to miss a word and for a woman of "Aunt" Patience's age it was a trying ordeal. Word after word was given and both spelled them correctly. Then the announcer gave out the word "disease." It was "Aunt" Patience's turn first. She spelled it with an "e." Then the little mother spelled it with an "i" and held her baby a little closer. The contest was over. Of all that company of nearly 700 celebrators, "Aunt" Patience was probably the most crestfallen and the little mother the most elated.

Those who participated in the ceremonies at Manchester, however, formed but a battalion of the army which the Kentucky Illiteracy Commission is "emancipating." Having adopted the slogan, "No Illiteracy in Kentucky in 1920" at its inception, the aim of the commission in 1916 was to teach 2500 persons to read and write. Reports are not in from all the counties and the commission does not know whether the goal was achieved, but its president, Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, is hoping that the final returns will show that the number has been exceeded.

Mrs. Stewart is known nationally as the "Mother of the Moonlight School." The name was derived from the outgrowth of the first night school ever established for adults in Kentucky, or in the country. Mrs. Stewart was the founder of this school, which became known as the "moonlight school" because the students could best cover the mountain trails which led to it on moonlight nights; at other times they carried lanterns to light their way. Now moonlight schools are in operation in virtually every corner of Kentucky where illiteracy prevails, and in addition they have spread to a number of other states.

Five hundred persons in Cumberland County, Ky., learned to read and write in the moonlight school last year; 800 in Leslie County, making 1400 in two years; 667 in Clay County, 150 in Owen County, 200 in Owsley County and 100 in Warren County. These are the only counties from which definite reports have been received. Returns of the same tenor are expected from Lewis, Pike, Knox, Graves, Calloway, McLean, Lyon and some other counties. In several where numbers are noteworthy the moonlight school idea was introduced only last November.

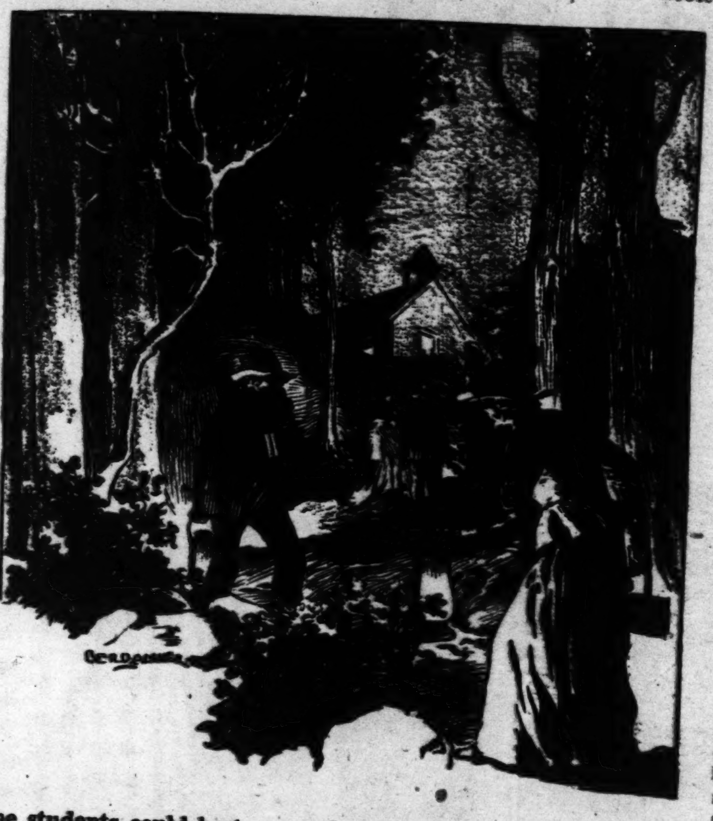
Incidentally, the moonlight school redeemed Leslie County during the year. Until 1916 she had ranked as the most illiterate of Kentucky's children. That year she reduced her percentage radically. One teacher, Grover Sizemore, alone taught 60 persons to read and write. Lesser numbers achieved the same end in other night schools, giving the county the lead over all others in totals. Aside from the 800 accounted for in reports it is estimated that 200 others mastered pen and primer in schools that are yet to report.

Hart County won State honors for the largest individual school. At Roseburg 228 students were enrolled and 75 learned reading and writing. R. E. Jaggers, a day school teacher, was master of the night school also. The last week in February he will go to Washington as the guest of the Kentucky Illiteracy Commission, to be presented to President Wilson and receive other honors which go with the championship.

Clay County now has six School Trustees who were taught to read and write within the last three years. They are proud to be called "moonlighters," and are zealous supporters of the unique institution.

Among those who received their first lessons in the moonlight schools during the 1916 session was Mrs. C. H. Grimes, wife of Clay County's Representative in the Kentucky Legislature. Of the total who learned rudiments, more than 550 trudged to the schoolhouses at night—by moonlight when possible and by lantern light when the green-hung valleys were dark. At school, the lanterns were hung from pegs and served for illumination, supplementing the wick lamps.

Stories of the obstacles which these knowledge-hungry people in Clay County and elsewhere overcame, and the hardships which they bore, are stirring. The night never was too inclement, and distance was forgotten. In sickness they studied at home—some by the firelight. One hundred of the full number learned to write their names and to read their Bibles, volunteer teachers and their children being tutors. In many cases mere tots in the day school became teachers of the adults.



The students could best cover the mountain trails which led to it on moonlight nights; at other times they carried lanterns to light their way.

Cumberland County last fall had a "Moonlight School Fair," in which 500 persons actively participated. It was held at Burkesville. The contestants were divided into three classes, one for pupils under 30, one for those between 30 and 60 and the last for those whose education had begun beyond the three-score mark. They wrote and "did arithmetic" on a blackboard in the Courthouse yard and spelled and read and sang for prizes.

One of the notable features of the night-school movement has been the effect it had on the attendance at day school. R. E. Jaggers, the champion teacher, wrote in his report: "I never dreamed of such an effect as the school produced upon the people of the community. Everybody talked about the school and are still talking about it. The moonlight school reached people that the day school could not. I find that my day school has a much larger attendance than ever before. I find that the man or woman who will attend school at night will make an earnest effort to send their children in the day time."

J. D. Muncy, Superintendent of Leslie County Schools, says that the moonlight institution has increased the attendance at the day schools 20 per cent. In the same county Editor Blain Bowling reports that a large number of new subscribers to his paper are persons who have learned to read in moonlight schools. In this connection it is interesting to know that newspapers and Bibles have been extensively used by those learning to read. To many of the older people the first fruit of their learning is that it enables them to study the Bible and to read first-hand the news of the big world which lies beyond the hazy crests.

In Leslie County 2000 copy books, pencils and readers have been issued by the commission. The last named are Country Life Readers, and are inculcating important lessons in health, cooking, sanitation, farming and fruit growing. In Clay County the attendance upon day schools has increased from 5 to 25 per cent in districts where night schools have been started, according to the report of Supt. Hatton.

Incorporated in the report of C. R. Payne, Illiteracy Agent of Cumberland County, is the following striking observation: "Henry J. Allen sat in a country schoolhouse in Cumberland County and saw a class of 26 stand in a row, among the number a man of 59 years, his wife and three grown children, all of whom had learned to read and write in 12 nights; and, when this man spelled without missing a word, read well and put the entire multiplication table on the blackboard, Mr. Allen exclaimed: 'The doctors of psychology are wrong: This man has learned more in 12 nights than I learned in nine months when I was a child.'"

Lexington people have taken a lively interest in the literacy crusade in Leslie County and prizes for the best letter by a pupil of the moonlight school were given by a number of business firms.

Last month a moonlight school was organized at the Frankfort Reformatory. Of the 32 men enrolled, only three had gone as high as the second reader before their incarceration, showing in a way the relation of ignorance to delinquency.

For two successive years in annual meetings the County Superintendents adopted resolutions declaring that moonlight schools presented the best means for eradicating illiteracy in the State. During the past year particularly they have promoted these schools in their own counties. Rural school teachers also have been stanch supporters of the cause and have given freely of their time and labor and have made great sacrifices to further it.

Five teachers who stood highest in the honor list are, in addition to Mr. Jaggers, the winner of the State prize: Grover Sizemore of Leslie County; Lincoln Smallwood, Clay County; F. H. Spiceland, Calloway County, and Miss Nellie Caldwell, Hardin County.

The commission has employed seven illiteracy agents. In Leslie, Clay, Owen and Cumberland counties speaking campaigns have been waged, members of the county commissions participating and paying the expenses.

Similar results have been produced in other states. In an Oklahoma moonlight school, one of the students was the Constable of the township and a prosperous farmer. The Civil War had prevented him going to school when a boy. After a term as a "moonlighter" he could read, write and spell and had reached fractions in his arithmetic. Another went to the school in order to learn enough so he could read his Bible and newspaper. He offered one of his best horses to the schoolmaster if the latter could bring this about, and the teacher won the horse easily.

"Uncle Ed" Stivers, 69 years old, and "Aunt" Patience Lunsford, 72, the two eldest pupils.

Adventures of an American Aviator Fighting for the Allies

Carroll Dana Winslow, Yale graduate, tells how he was trained for service in the French Flying Corps—His long, rigorous apprenticeship—Exacting requirements of the school—His thrilling adventures above the battlefield of Verdun—An intimate account of heroic deeds above the clouds and Zeppelin raids of Paris—How spies are landed from airplanes behind the enemy's lines. -:- -:- -:-

The pilot, realizing that he would be burned to death, suddenly turned his machine and drove it head on into that of his pursuer, both men dashing to death.

SEVEN to nine months of the most rigid schooling and applied study are required of the raw recruit to qualify for active service in the French Flying Corps, that body of courageous airmen who have astounded the world with their battles above the clouds in the war abroad. Although the science of aero-dynamics is still in its infancy, the European army aviators have performed prodigious feats of skill and daring in their heroic invasion of the realm of winged creatures.

Almost from the beginning instruction in aviation is fraught with hazard and many young men ambitious to serve their country in this branch of the service are killed in the apprenticeship period, months before smelling the powder of battle. For aviation is most dangerous to the novice or recruit. Even after becoming expert he must daily resign his fate more or less to the wind's will.

There are many young Americans in the French Flying Corps, some of whom have distinguished themselves in feats of daring and bravery. Carroll Dana Winslow, a Yale graduate, enlisted in the corps at the beginning of the war, went through the various grades of school, fought at Verdun and returned to the United States last summer on furlough. He has written a book, "With the French Flying Corps" (Scribners), in which he sets forth in graphic style his experiences and adventures in the aviation schools and the world's greatest battle.

He writes interestingly of fights above the clouds, Zeppelin raids of Paris, methods of observation and photography over battlefields, the landing of spies from airplanes behind the enemy lines, and gives an intimate account of the death of distinguished airmen often mentioned in news dispatches for heroic service.

First of all, the recruit is given weeks of instruction in engine and airplane construction, and more weeks of study of air currents, with an hour or two each day for observation of advanced classes in the air. All the way through the thing to avoid is stressed as most important, for a mistake in the air usually means death.

The recruit's "baptism of air" comes when he is taken up by an experienced pilot in a two-seated machine. Then follows another period of study of the work of the class ahead.

Carroll Dana Winslow.

When the recruit has assimilated the preliminary instruction, he is again taken for a series of flights in a machine with two sets of controls, one of which he holds to feel the operation of the machine by the experienced pilot behind.

"I felt very proud and confided my feelings to one of my friends who had been qualified a few hours earlier," Winslow writes concerning his first order to fly alone. "While we were talking he was called upon to make his first independent flight. We watched him leave the ground, rise and then make his turns. He was doing remarkably well for a beginner, but when he came down for his landing he did not redress his machine in time, and it crushed him to the ground, with fatal result."

This accident unnerved Winslow for the time being. He was called early the next day, however, to make his own, initial flight.

"I was loath to go up, but I had no alternative," Winslow relates. "The mechanics rolled out a single-control biplane for my use and I climbed in. The motor was started. With its crackling noise my nerve almost deserted me again.

"I should have felt less frightened, probably, had no one been looking on, but my 'moniteur,' my Captain and all my comrades stood there, interested to see how I would handle myself. . . . The machine began to roll along the ground, then to bounce, and then, in response to a pull on the control, to fly. I was flying alone. The thought filed me with alarm. I rose to less than 200 feet, but it seemed prodigious. Then I made a turn. When I found that I was flying smoothly and easily, I felt a little more confident. . . . I made up my mind that I was going to make good. . . . I volplaned down, and made my landing safely but somewhat bumpily."

Holding on with one hand he leaned down and carefully loosed the bombs with the other.

After graduating from the beginners' class with this flight, Winslow spent a few more weeks in daily flights of short duration, in which he studied control. Then came his transfer to another field for advanced students, where they specialized in altitude work.

Winslow's chum, a Sous-Lieutenant, shared the machine with him. They matched coins to determine who should have the first flight. The Sous-Lieutenant won; arose to a great height, where the machine collapsed, and he was crushed to death by the fall.

Again Winslow lost his nerve and would have given up, but the Captain was insistent and procured another machine next day. Winslow first soared 6000 feet, then 10,000 feet, which, with an endurance flight of 150 miles over a triangular course, qualified him for active service at the front, rank of Corporal, at regular pay of 8 cents a day, and an additional indemnity of 45 cents as a member of the flying corps.

Winslow then was given "four days in Paris" to await orders. While there he witnessed a Zeppelin raid.

"The first alarm occurred as we were leaving a restaurant after dinner. A motor fire engine rushed by, sounding the alerte for the approaching enemy. Pandemonium reigned in the streets.

"The streets were pitch dark and jammed with people, all staring heavenward. Near the outskirts of the city we could see the searchlights flashing against the heavy mist. There was so much fog, however, that they could not pierce the veil which hung over the city. At 1500 feet the sky was opaque. The anti-aircraft batteries were barking and sending off deep red flashes into the impenetrable murkiness in answer to wireless signals from the invisible air guards above. Now and then a military automobile dashed by. . . .

"A bomb had been dropped. The Zeppelin had arrived. . . . Several more explosions were heard. Then a deathlike silence. The cannon ceased their angry roar, the searchlights put out their blinding rays. . . . I noticed a large fire in the middle of the 'piste,' where several cans of gasoline had been ignited. It was a signal for the searching airplanes to return. The Zeppelin had left. . . .

"About 50 airplanes are in the air around Paris all the time. Each pilot remains up three hours, when he is relieved by another flier. When the Zeppelins are known to have crossed the front, some 80 miles away, the whole defense squadron of 200 takes the air. The organizaion of the aerial defense of Paris is admirable, and it is this, together with the efficient anti-aircraft posts in the environs, which prevent the 'Boches' from raiding Paris more often.

"A few civilians were killed, but no military damage was done. I visited one of the craters the next morning. The bomb had landed directly over the subway and had blown a huge hole in the pavement. The tracks below lay open to view. Gangs of laborers were already at work, not repairing the damage, but enlarging the hole. I asked them what this was for. 'Why, monsieur, it is this way: The health authorities always insisted that a ventilator was needed in this part of the Metropolitan. The Boches obligingly saved us the trouble and expense. We are now merely going to put a fence around it.'

"That night there was another alarm. . . . The pompiers startled us with their wailing sirens. From every direction came 'Alerte! The Zeppelins are coming! Lights out!' One by one the street lamps faded, apartments were darkened and the street cars stopped where they were, plunged in darkness. It was thrilling. In the velvety gloom the outlines of people and motors could be seen moving about. The corner of the rue d'Assas alone remained illuminated. A 'bec de gaz' was still burning brightly, to the rage of an old infantry Colonel, who was too short to reach it himself. To our amusement, a little girl, clad in a red kimono and bedroom slippers, ran out into the street and volunteered her aid. The old soldier blurted out a word or two, then lifted her up in his arms while she extinguished the light. 'Thanks, mademoiselle. Now quick, he gasped, run back to bed.'

"We saw some of the people climb down into their cellars. The majority, however, gathered in the streets, looking up at the searchlight-swept sky. Tiny, starlike lights moved about above us and we knew that airplanes of the 'Garde de Paris' were searching for the venturesome raider. 'I don't believe the sales Boches and their sausage balloon are coming this evening to beg food,' remarked one man. 'Oh, no,' answered another, "it is clear, and they well know that a Zeppelin over Paris tonight is a Zeppelin less for Germany.'

"Just then we heard the firemen coming back. Their bugles were playing a jubilant call. The Zeppelins had been frightened away. Everywhere lights were again lit. The people laughed good-naturedly at their neighbors' strange attire. 'Quelle guerre,' yawned the old officer at my elbow. 'Down in the ground, under the sea, and over our homes! Quelle guerre.'"

The third stage in Winslow's training was taken at still another camp, where he made daily endurance flights and attended lectures on artillery fire, bomb dropping, war aviation, "liasion" and design of enemy aircraft. Bomb dropping was the most interesting, he writes.

"A complete bomb-dropping apparatus was mounted on stakes about 25 feet above the ground. Under this there was a miniature landscape painted to scale on canvas. It was a regular piece of theatrical scenery mounted on rollers so that it could be revolved to represent the passage of the earth under a machine. We would climb into the seat on the stilts and consider ourselves flying at some arbitrary height. Through our range finder we would gaze down at the 'land,' and as a 'town' appeared we would make allowances through the system of mirrors arranged by the range finder for our speed and height and for an imaginary wind. At the calculated moment the property bombs would be loosed."

Three weeks of this and Winslow was ordered to Bar-

How Many American Firms Have Retained Same Family Ownership One Hundred Years or More?

IN the entire United States there are only 55 firms or corporations which can boast of being 100 years old or more and which have been handed down from generation to generation of the same family. This interesting fact, as well as many others in connection with the history of these firms, has been revealed by The Association of Centenary Firms and Corporations of the United States in a booklet recently issued, only 300 copies of which were printed, for private distribution. Four other firms, however, are eligible to be listed among these blue bloods of American business.

The Association of Centenary Firms was organized in 1889, with the object of recording historically "the date of establishment and the development of such commercial, manufacturing and banking establishments in the United States as have been continuously conducted, or have been in continuous ownership by one family or their collateral descendants for a period of 100 years or over" and "the names and dates of origin of business establishments in the United States founded previous to the year 1800." The president of the association is Burnet Landreth of Bristol, Pa., descendant of the founder of a firm bearing his name, which sold seeds to Thomas Jefferson and which planted nearly all the largest trees in Independence and Washington squares, Philadelphia, a century or more ago.

In the list is a firm which, with one exception, is the oldest business concern of any kind in North or South America. It is the Francis Perot's Sons Malting Co. of Philadelphia, and it was founded only 17 years after the establishment of the Hudson's Bay Co., the oldest of them all. Perot's was founded by Anthony Morris II, in 1687. He built a brewery and malt house on Front street, facing the Delaware River. He was the second Mayor of Philadelphia and in 1705 became Supreme Judge of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. The firm expanded and changed its location from time to time, but has remained continuously in the hands of the descendants of the original Morris, passing to the Perots in 1818, when Francis Perot, who had been apprenticed to one of the Morrises, married his employer's daughter. The present heads of the firm are T. Morris Perot and Elliston Perot, representing the eighth generation in direct line of descent.

It was very proper that the booklet should be printed by the Christopher Sower Co. of Philadelphia, the Sower family having been printers in Philadelphia for 179 years. The original Sower, who came from Germany, dispensed medicine for five years, but the German settlers in the Province of Pennsylvania felt the need of a printing press and materials and these were sent from Germany in 1738. They were placed in the hands of Sower, although he was not then a printer, and he at once commenced printing almanacs, papers and books in connection with his other business.

In 1740 he commenced to print a quarto edition of 1200 copies of Luther's translation of the Bible. This he completed in 1743, nearly 40 years before Robert Aitken printed his first edition of the English Bible. He cast his own type, made his own paper and ink, and bound the books he printed.

Thomas Willcox, who founded the James M. Willcox Paper Co. of Philadelphia in 1729, sold paper to Benjamin Franklin. Franklin not only bought paper from Willcox, but sold rags to him, as well as groceries, dry goods, hardware, etc. In the possession of the American Philosophical Society in Philadelphia are the account books of Benjamin Franklin, in which are entered these transactions. During the War of the Revolution, the firm was engaged much of the time in making paper for the Continental Congress and for the currency authorized by that body.

An ancestor of Job T. Pugh of Philadelphia invented the double-twist auger, and the holes in the great oaken yoke for the Independence bell were bored by a Pugh auger.

Samuel Wetherill began to make white lead in Philadelphia before Patrick Henry said "Give me liberty or give me death," and was promptly expelled from Quaker meeting for his warlike actions in the Revolution.

The year the United States Constitution got to work Shryocks imported some red bandanna handkerchiefs for their Hollywell mill near Chambersburg, Pa., and used the silk fiber to make banknote paper. The very same year Nathan Trotter began the tin business in Philadelphia.

At Lancaster, Pa., in a store window, may be seen the oldest wooden man in America. It belongs to the Demuth tobacco firm, which has been doing business for 147 years and, of course, always in the Demuth family. This little wooden man was a tobacco sign.

The Frismuths have made tobacco in Philadelphia since before the war of 1812, and the Tryons have been handling guns for a similar period.

Woolmans have stuck to the milk business in Philadelphia for 113 years, and Samuel M. Freeman's ancestors have been auctioneers for an equally long time.

The J. E. Rhoads & Sons' leather firm is 215 years old, and has been in that family continuously.

The most widely known of all these 55 one-family centenarians are Brown Bros., the bankers, and Du Ponts, the world's largest makers of explosives.

More than half of these centenary firms are in Philadelphia and a number of the remainder are in Pennsylvania cities. There are four in New York, six in Baltimore, two in Boston, three in Wilmington, Del., and others scattered here and there in other cities situated in the original 13 colonies.

HOW GERMAN AIRCRAFT LAND AT NIGHT

THE one great problem of the aeroplane pilot, namely, making a safe landing at night, appears to have been solved by the Germans in an ingenious manner. A large white light is placed in the center of the aerodrome, sunk in a pit in the ground and covered with a sheet of thick glass to withstand the weight of an aeroplane should the wheels pass over it. At a distance of about 250 feet from this light, and also sunk in the ground, are four red lights corresponding to the cardinal points of the compass. Each of the red lights is connected by subterranean cables to a wind vane, mounted on a mast or tower at some convenient point. At night the central light glows constantly, while the red light in the direction of the wind that happens to be blowing also shows, indicating to the pilot the wind conditions where the landing is to be made. It is understood that a system of altering the lights has been devised, so that an aviator has to understand the code in order to know his whereabouts. Thus enemy airmen are thwarted from making use of the lights as guides.

le-Duc to prepare for service at Verdun. At Bar-le-Duc he met Victor Chapman, Norman Prince and Kiffen Rockwell, all three since fallen on the "champ d'honneur," and Elliott Cowdin, Jim McConnell, "Red" Rumsey, Clyde Balsley, Chouteau Johnston, Dudley Hill and Bill Thaw, all Americans.

The party was sent to Verdun, where Winslow received additional instructions on how to behave over the firing lines. He was particularly cautioned to beware of telephone and telegraph wires in landing; cable tethers of the captive balloons, which are invisible to the flier, and clouds, in which enemy aircraft might be lurking. He was also admonished to keep out of the line of artillery fire and take no chances with a collision with a German "Big Bertha."

He was given a new biplane equipped with wireless instruments, machine guns and an extra seat for an observer, and was assigned to fire-control duty. This he found greatly complicated at first.

"The chief source of trouble usually is the wireless apparatus, which must be in perfect working order. Before leaving the home field you usually circle over it, while your observer tests his sending apparatus. The receiving operator then answers by visual signals. Usually these are large white sheets laid on the ground in different formations, which have a prearranged meaning. . . . By wireless your observer then reports to the battery commander, and receives his orders by the same visual signals. You then head in the direction indicated to you before leaving, and, hovering over the position to be bombarded, the observer signals back 'Fire!'"

The observer here signals where the shells strike until the range is found, but must remain above the lines until the firing ceases, unless attacked by enemy aircraft, in which case the speedy French Nieuports drop from greater heights to the defense of the observer and drive the enemy away.

"At first I felt a strong aversion to flying over batteries in action," Winslow writes. "You are bound to get in close proximity to the trajectory of the shells, and the constant sensation and sound of the passing projectiles is none too pleasant. You get them both coming and going, and, no matter which you are trying to avoid, you always take a chance with the other. It is a question of choosing between the devil and the deep sea, with the devil constantly stepping in your path.

"When you are observing for the artillery, you must stay and die, if necessary, in the performance of your assigned duty."

After some weeks at fire control, Winslow was ordered to serve as a photography pilot, which he found less difficult. The pictures were taken with a specially constructed telephoto camera, and he would then hasten back to camp and hand the plates over to the dark-room Sergeant.

Winslow writes of the death of the brilliant American aviator, Victor Chapman:

"I remember one curious incident that occurred while I was in the Verdun sector. Victor Chapman, who was doing combat work with the American Escadrille, after a brush with four German airplanes, was forced to descend to our field. Not only had he received a bad scalp wound from a bullet, but his machine had been riddled and nearly wrecked. One bullet had even severed a metal stability control. By all rules of aviation, he should have lost control. . . . But Chapman was an expert pilot. He simply held on to the broken rod with one hand, while with the other he steered his machine. . . . A surgeon immediately dressed his wound and our mechanics repaired his machine. The repairs completed, he was off and up again in pursuit of some more Boches. . . .

"A few days later came his last flight. He was carrying two bags of oranges to Clyde Balsley, who lay wounded in a hospital not far away. There was an aerial combat against odds within the German lines, and Chapman lost no time in going to the aid of his hard-pressed comrades. He brought down one of the enemy airmen, but the others were still too numerous, and the fight then was only a matter of seconds. He was last seen falling behind the German lines.

"Balsley had been wounded in an encounter with several Germans. He was doing well, when he was struck in the thigh by an explosive bullet, which burst in his stomach. He immediately lost consciousness. His machine began to tumble straight toward the lines. Just before reaching the ground, however, Balsley regained his senses sufficiently to realize what was happening. By a superhuman effort he managed to right his machine and make a landing in a neighboring meadow.

"Two fragments of the explosive bullet were removed from his body. These he kept wrapped in a handkerchief as proof that the enemy, despite their denials, do violate the rules of civilized warfare. For a long time the only nourishment he could take was the juice of oranges, and that was why Chapman was on his mission on that unfortunate day."

Occasionally the bombarding escadrilles have thrilling experiences to relate. Two in particular impressed Winslow as brilliant feats of heroism. The raiders were returning from a long flight into enemy territory when they were attacked by a group of German fighting planes. An incendiary bullet pierced the gasoline tank of a French machine and set it afire. The pilot, realizing that he would be burned to death, as the great height prevented his reaching the ground in time to escape the flames, suddenly turned his machine and drove it head on into that of his pursuer, both men dashing to death.

The other case related to a bomber who had been over the German trenches. The pilot was about to spiral down for the landing when his passenger looked out to see if everything was in good order. To his horror, he noticed that two of the bombs were still unreleased, having become caught in the running gear. If they landed in this condition, there was every likelihood that the bombs would explode and blow them to pieces. The two men were desperate. To climb down and unhook the bombs seemed impossible, but it was a choice between life and death. No one had ever tried this, even while performing "stunts."

There was no time to lose. The passenger climbed out on the wing of the swiftly moving plane, high in the sky, and then down on the running gear. Holding on with one hand he leaned down and carefully loosed the bombs with the other.

Other night duty than fighting off Zeppelins takes the aviators into enemy territory, where they deposit spies. These spies are left far behind the enemy lines and make an appointment with the aviator to be picked up at a given point several days or weeks later, at a given hour. Carrying the spies over and leaving them is one hazardous service; returning for them at a given time and designated point is fraught with a variety of dangers, which may better be imagined than described. In a case of this kind, it is difficult to determine which of the two men is the most courageous, the aviator or the spy. Winslow believes it safer to be an airman.

THE SEVENTH MAN

By Roland Ashford Phillips

"My man could never do any wrong, could he?"
"Never," he laughed, "especially when such a dear little wife believes in him!"

THE news that he had been elected a member of the City Council seemed to add to Blake's eight-and-twenty years. Like a tree stripped of its yellow leaves by the wind, so all his youthful fancies, his immature reasonings scampered away. It was as if, for the first time, he had gained a peep into a higher world—a man's world. He began to realize that life held a great many weighty problems. A body of people, friends and neighbors among them, had made him their mouthpiece, and they were going to trust in him.

When the well-wishers had gone, and those who so eagerly congratulated him had grasped his hand for the last time, Blake turned from the door and held out his arms toward his wife.

"I'm—really—elected, Marjorie," he faltered. "Really elected! Why—why, it doesn't seem real!"

"They've so much confidence in you, dear," she answered him, her eyes shining, her lips tremulous. "They know they can trust you. This new Council is going to mean so much, so very much, for our town."

"Yes," he went on, "I've never known the people to be so interested before. What responsibility rests upon my shoulders! Why, it almost awes me, Marjorie. I—I do so want to make every man who voted for me proud of his choice! I want to gain their respect—prove to them I am worthy of this trust!"

"And you're going to, Greg!"

He held her close beside him as if to gain strength from her slim, tremulous little body. "Of course I am," he repeated.

"And, Greg," she went on, "think how that twelve hundred a year is going to help us! You can be more independent now, can't you? And if those horrid editors don't offer you enough for a story you can ask to have it sent back!"

He laughed, but caught himself, midway. "If—only you were well and strong," he began softly.

"There, there, Greg," she pouted. "That old doctor has set you worrying, hasn't he? I'm never, never going to allow him in the house again!"

"Yes, dear, but he said you"——

"You must not talk about me another solitary instant! Why, the very idea! And on the very day you have been elected Councilman, too!"

They went arm in arm into the little den—he loved to call it his study—and for a long, long time they talked and planned and built glorious castles, as men and women always do and always will, more so when under the enchantment of a yet undimned honeymoon.

Gregory Blake had, from the very start, won success as a writer. His short stories nearly all sold, and at gradually increasing prices; and during the past six months he had completed his first real serious effort—a novel. Still, a human brain is an elusive thing at best, and a typewriter an unreliable breadwinner—in comparison with a trowel or pickax—so despite his frequent acceptances, editor's checks had a mysterious way of being withheld at critical moments. Blake had yet to learn—as all do who tread this path—that the way of an editor passeth understanding.

Therefore, the realization of this hundred dollars a month meant everything to him.

The one blight in their first year of married life had been Marjorie's illness. Pneumonia came, and after the struggle the color slipped slowly away from her rounded cheeks, her eyes grew big and hard, and tiny pools of gray shadow crept beneath them.

Blake watched this gradual change for months before he called the doctor.

"Bad in here," the physician announced, gravely tapping his lungs. "Very bad! She must have the best of care—and a change of altitude would be of lasting benefit."

He said other things, too, but Blake kept them locked in his breast.

Under this strain he labored unceasingly upon his novel, and with thumping heart sent it away to the publishers.

They talked of this work that evening at the table.

"It will mean a great deal to me," he said. "It is my first serious thing, Marjorie. I want the world to know that I can do something worth while."

"And won't they?" she questioned, playfully pinching his cheek. "Of course they will, dear. You were meant for a great, wonderful success!"

"And then, if we can get that naughty color back into your cheeks again," he hurried.

"There is something greater than that, Greg," she answered, her voice half serious, half jesting.

"Greater than my love for you?" he frowned.

She nodded. "You're a public man now, dear. Your duty to your friends should tower above all else!" She took his face between her palms and stared deep, deep into his questioning eyes. "My man could never do any wrong, could he?"

"Never!" he laughed, crossing his heart, boy-fashion. "Especially when such a dear little wife believes in him!"

II.

IN the quiet, sumptuous office of the Milltown Gas and Electric Co. two men were in deep conversation. One of them, Mr. Hall, president, a short, gray-haired, snapping-eyed old man, held a typewritten list before him. The other, younger, very immaculate in his dress, sat opposite, smoking a cigar.

"This is the complete roster of the new Council, eh?" the president was saying. "How've you sized them up, Davis?"

Davis, the company's attorney, took the paper from his superior, placed it before him on the low table and as he mentioned each name checked it off with a white forefinger.

"There's Harvey, Griggs, Dudley, Smith, Conway and Nelson—all our men," he began quietly. "We can rely upon each of them to the last. As you will note, they compose exactly half of the Council. There are six opposed to us. Hamilton, Fisher and Mackey are wealthy men and money is of no consequence to them. Miller is interested heavily in the new light and power company, so he can't be touched, of course. Reese is a personal enemy of yours, so that lets him out!"

Hall, the president, listened narrowly. "Well, that is five. Who is the other one?"

Davis moved his finger down the list. "Gregory Blake! Young man, too, living in my neighborhood. Magazine writer, married, owns his home, and as far as I have been able to fathom out is a straightforward and honest chap!"

The president looked out of the low window into the chill of a December afternoon. "He's our last hope, Davis. There isn't another one we can approach. You say he's young—and just married?"

"Married about a year, I guess."

"A thousand dollars ought to look pretty good to him, don't you think?"

"Possibly." The lawyer's voice was not very enthusiastic. "But this is his first political position and, of course, he is bound to be moved by his friends' advice. Duty and all that sort of stuff, don't you know? Every one of them are dead against us, too!"

"The renewal of our franchise will mean considerably over a million to us, Davis," Hall went on. "We can't afford to allow one man to stand in our way. One man, understand that, Davis? Seems as if everything is going to rest on him. We've six men certain—and we've got to get the seventh! There are no ifs or buts or maybes about it. We have got to have him! . . . Offer him five thousand cash!"

Still Davis remained dubious.

"I might try it, but"——

The president flung out his hands with a gesture of annoyance. "Good heavens, five thousand cash ought to be a gold mine to a Councilman with a twelve-hundred-dollar salary," he broke out. "I've found in my career, that a little cash is the open sesame to about every door. What's your opinion?"

"Mine's the same, of course," Davis instantly agreed. "But I've been watching this Blake ever since his nomination and I haven't so far found a likely loophole."

"You've got around greater obstacles than this, Davis," the president came back sharply. "That's why we've been glad to pay you your ten thousand a year! You can't fall back on us at this critical time!"

Davis came to his feet with the cigar clenched tightly between his teeth and paced slowly back and forth across the office floor. The gray winter twilight had already dimmed the room.

As a confidential lawyer at a comfortable salary Davis had been fighting these identical knotty problems for the past 10 years. Until today he had never admitted himself defeated. He had been the one port in the storm, and at the present time the greatest kind of a storm threatened the Milltown Gas and Electric Co. A new, independent company, backed by some of the town's oldest citizens, had asked for a franchise; against this the old company was fighting for a 20-year renewal. Either one or the other must back down.

Suddenly Davis stood still and set his teeth so hard together that the cigar was severed and dropped unheeded to the floor.

"By heavens!" he broke out. "Why haven't I thought of it before? I've got it! I've got it! Blake will come over on our side, Mr. Hall!"

A broad smile lighted up the president's face.

"That's good. Thought you'd rake up something! Let's hear the plan!"

But Davis only put out a hand. "I've never fallen down on a thing yet, have I? Always carried a thing straight through to the end when I said I would, haven't I?"

The president agreed that this was so.

"Then trust me! I'll call on Blake tomorrow afternoon. When I'm through with him I'll see you. So don't worry. Blake's our man, and as he's the seventh, our renewal is as good as won!"

III.

GREGORY BLAKE was plainly surprised to have call upon him, the following afternoon, the well-known attorney for the Milltown Gas and Electric Co. After they were seated in the study and Davis had offered cigars, the conversation was opened immediately.

"As a member of the new City Council, Mr. Blake," Davis began, "I trust that you are looking upon all the matters that are to be decided upon by the board in a fair and unprejudiced light!"

"I am making every effort to, yes, sir."

"Quite right. A man in public life and holding so much power must not only look upon the surface of things, but must delve into the very heart, as it were. Also, he must weigh both sides in the balance." He cleared his throat.

"I believe you are in favor of granting this new company their franchise in the place of renewing ours. Am I not correct?" he continued bluntly.

"Blake nodded. "I am but the mouthpiece of my citizen friends who elected me"—frankly—"and they feel as if the new company will be of greater advantage to the town."

"And your reward for these—er—valuable services, is what, may I ask?"

"Reward?" Blake frowned. "I have yet to hear of rewarding one for doing his duty!"

The lawyer's eye lifted. "This is your first public position, I believe?"

"The Milltown Gas and Electric Co. is a well-known and well-respected corporation, Mr. Blake, and has made every effort to please the citizens of the town. We have, within the past 10 years, spent over a million dollars in this district. Don't you think we deserve a small amount of credit? Don't you consider our plea for the renewal of our franchise a just one—and most reasonable?"

"I cannot say I do, Mr. Davis!" Blake's heart was leaping in a choked sort of way. "Your rates are exorbitant for the first thing, and, second, for a 20-year extension of your franchise you are offering a third under the new company's promise."

"Those are your views, are they, Mr. Blake? You are prejudiced against us—and intend voting as your friends demand?"

"Absolutely!"

"And after that—after you have played the cat's paw for these same friends and stepped out of office—what then? What will they do for you?"

"I expect nothing!"

"Quite so!" Davis calmly dropped his cigar into the ash tray. After a moment of silence he resumed. "See here, Blake, let's talk man to man! My company is acting fair and square with you and with every citizen of Milltown. We want a renewal of our franchise. It means a great deal to us. It will mean a great deal to you, too!"

Their eyes mirrored and held. Davis, cool, deliberate, frank, facing a crisis he had worked up to and expected; Blake, young, plainly nervous, his face flushed, not quite positive of the other's intentions.

"I say it will mean a great deal to you, Blake!" Davis repeated firmly. "Let's look at it in a fair light. You have two masters: the friends who elected you, and our company. The first one can offer you nothing for carrying out their wishes—nothing except a pitiful salary of twelve hundred a year! The latter, our company, can offer you a cool"——

Blake was to his feet now, hands clenched, breathing hard. The meaning came like a blow. He felt the hot blood pounding in his ears, sweeping down through his cheeks and neck.

"Stop that!" he choked. "I don't want to listen farther. I'm beyond all your bribes. You get out of here—right now! Understand me? I don't want to listen!"

Davis smiled, but ignored the command.

"We want your vote, Blake. We need it! I'm not offering you a bribe! I merely want you to see the wisdom of my remarks. Vote for our renewal and one hour after that you and your wife can be on the way to Colorado!"

"Why—damn you! What do you mean? My wife"——

"Just that." Davis arose and faced the trembling young man. "Your wife! I saw your doctor this morning, and he told me how matters stood. Your wife can't live three more months in this low altitude! The West will cure her! You haven't the money—or won't have it within the time. It'll cost at least $5000!"

THE OZARK STATESMAN, WHO THINKS WOMEN CAN BE "JOLLIED" OUT OF THE VOTE

CAMPAIGNING for suffrage in the Ozarks has its disappointments. In this story, written for the Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine, Mrs. Alice Curtice Moyer-Wing frankly tells how her best efforts failed to convert a former legislator who is "sot" in his ideas about women. The nature of his beliefs makes the story:

"The trouble is, you women don't know your power," he says. "Men has always controlled 'em, sometimes with a curb as hard as an iron bit and sometimes with words as sweet as the honeycomb. And yet they could kick over the traces and raise old Ned and bring us to time if they jist knew it and had nerve enough to do it."

"At that moment he looked up and I was discovered."

By Alice Curtice Moyer-Wing.

IT was the autumn fishing season when La Belle and I came upon the statesman. His face was pink and fat and he wore an expression of supreme, unsophisticated innocence as he fished and smoked and sang snatches of hymns:

"The devil thought he had me shore,
O, glory halleluyer!
But I hid behind the smokehouse door,
O, glory halleluyer!

CHORUS:
Shout, shout, we're gaining ground,
O, glory halleluyer!
He lost a soul he thought he'd found,
O, glory halleluyer!
The devil's mad and I am glad,
O, glory"——

At that moment he looked up and I was discovered. "Uh-huh," he said. "Here at last, air-you? We'd purty nigh concluded you was goin' to pass us by, seein' that we was newcomers. Been lookin' fer you a right smart while."

"I didn't know you were a newcomer," I said. "But I shouldn't have passed you by on that account. And, of course, I'm hoping that you believe in"——

"Woorman suffrage? Haw! haw! haw!. Reckon you've heerd, ain't you, that a person ort to keep quiet when fishin'?"

I admitted that I had.

"Well, them's the rules, I reckon, but they ain't bitin' nohow, and I 'lowed maybe a little music would stir 'em up."

"Perhaps," I agreed. "Do you believe in"——

"Shore now, I was jist a comin' to it. Haw! haw! haw! Say, if I was you, I'd git this work done early. Next winter is liable to be a scorcher fer cold. All the signs is liable to pint that a-way."

"What signs?"

"Why, the signs. Hawg-killin' time is when a person can notice a right smart. If the melts is thick, it's a shore sign that the winter is goin' to be a bad one. Hawgs is shore some weather prognosticators. Why, you'll always know what a winter is goin' to be if you'll jist watch 'em. When it's going to be mild, a hog'll jist natcherly loaf on the job of house buildin'—jist patchin' up his last year's nest here and there, sort of careless like. But when you see him workin' early and late to make a commodious dwellin', so to speak, jist look out! These here razorbacks is powerful knowin'."

"Yes," I said. "I know. You see I'm a"——

"That's what I heerd, that you was a Ozarker yourself. And when you see 'em commence to git into their beds early, and you hear 'em squallin' and a pullin' kivver"—

"Yes," I said again, "but it's a good while before we can begin to look for these signs. Do you believe in"——

"Woorman suffrage? Haw! haw! haw! Jist a-comin' to that. Yes, it's a right smart while, but they ain't nothin' like takin' time by the topknot, as the feller says. And if he has long bristles and the animals has long fur on 'em, it's a shore sign of a long, hard winter."

"Pardon me," I said. "I cannot talk longer. But if you will read this literature you may change your mind. Or, if you will tell me now why you are opposed to woman suffrage, maybe I can explain away the difficulty."

"Shore. Who said I was agin it?"

"Didn't you?"

"Shore not. I didn't say I was fer it, neither."

"Then why"——

"I was jist a-jollyin' you along."

"Because you wished merely to dodge the question?"

"Of whom?"

"Why, the women, of course. Jist jolly 'em along, lettin' on like you're goin' to consider a thing and keepin' clean away from it. Gen-tull-men! I reckon that tip was handed down by old Father Adam."

"But"——

"No use arguin'. I ain't sayin' what state I'm from, but it's sich a close neighbor to old Mizzoo that I was right at home when I bought this land and moved in. And I've been in the Legislature more'n oncet. And when the women would gether in to ask fer somethin', blamed if we could git round to 'em. We shore was some hard-workin' men."

"Yes," I said, sympathetically, "you must have been."

"We shore was. Why, oncet it tuck us purty nigh onto a week a-debatin' and discussin' as to which was the worst crime, to steal a chicken in the day time or to steal it at night. And there was that cussin' bill! Say! that was a plumb sight! It was to fine a man for cussin' within a mile of any residence. I reckon we spent another hard week a-parleyin' over that. But—fun! Don't talk! It was fun on wheels!"

"But"——

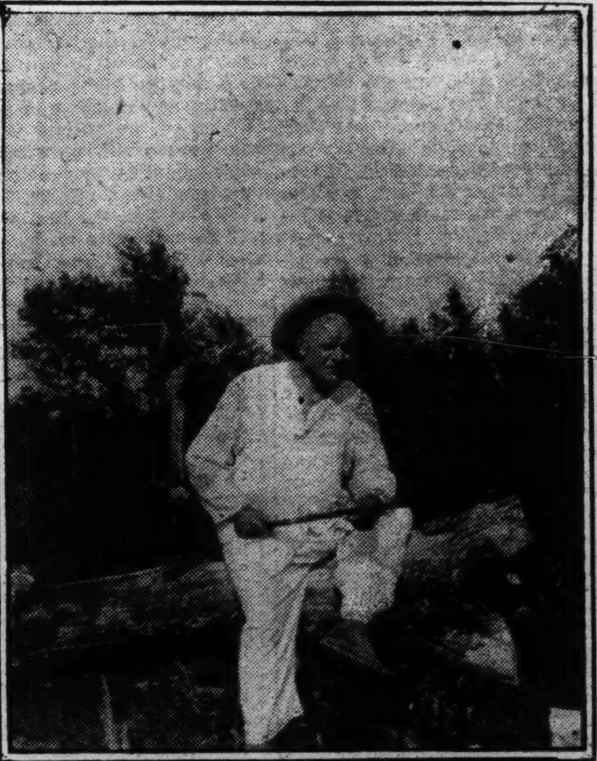
"No use arguin'. Ain't I been to the Legislature? Don't I know?"

I turned LaBelle's head to the road.

"Don't go away mad," he said. "Jist admit that you woman have been jollied all your lives. And furthermore, you've jollied yourselves into thinkin' that you hain't—and it makes you mad to hear about it. They's jist one cure fer it: Quit jollyin' yourselves. Quit it, I tell you! Don't go yet. I reckon it's about dinner time. Come on up to the house. Neely can git up a snack in no time and I reckon La Belle is a hankerin' fer some oats. Don't feel too bad. The trouble is, you women don't know your power. Onct up in St. Louis I stood watchin' a feller abusin' his hoss, and I says to myself: 'If I was that hoss, I wouldn't stand fer no sich treatment. I'd jist up and kick that fool driver's head off.' But there was the driver a holdin' him with the bit and line because the hoss didn't know he could stand up fer hisself. It's jist that a-way with women. Men has always controlled 'em. Sometimes with a curb as hard as the iron bit; sometimes with words as sweet as the honey comb, as the feller says. But control 'em we do—handed down to us, I reckon, from the old, old times when we discovered that we could swing the biggest club and hit the hardest licks. And yet they could kick over the traces and raise Old Ned and bring us to time any day if they jist knew it and had the nerve to try it."

"But when the daring ones do attempt it"— I began.

"Yes," said he, taking my sentences away from me, as was his habit. "Yes, when the darin' ones do attempt it, the world sets up a howl, jist like the rabble that runs after the runaway team and lashes it back to the harness. Sometimes we jist jolly 'em back, but that they go back at all is jist because they don't know that they don't have to. Now, mind you, I ain't tellin' this to every woman. A man wouldn't tell it to his wife, I reckon, but I'd jist jolly Neely back agin if she was to hear about it."



The Statesman.

"How did you happen to go to the Legislature?" I asked, as La Belle and I followed him "up to the house."

"Well, you see, they sort of pass things around down in our country. You don't reckon that a man always gits a office jist because he is natchelly fitted fer it, do you? Why, the smartest and the best man very often never so much as gits a smell at the public feed trough. No, sir! It's the ring or them that's been useful to the ring that gits there. They mayn't know enough to come in out of the rain, but if they air useful to the gang, or if they belong to it, jist as shore's you're borned, they'll git their heads in the trough plumb up to their ye'rs. Well, I had done a right smart of pullin' fer some of the fellers, and commenced to feel that it was my turn. The county offices had all been promised, so they sent me up to the Legislature. I was a good jollier, they said, so they sent me up again, but that was all I ever got."

"Why did you take to farming?" I asked.

"Fer the same reason, I reckon, that other ex-officials and disappinted politicians take to it. Ever notice how many of 'em do? It's mighty soothin' to that sick, holler feelin' we all have—diggin' around in the ground is."

Neely met us at the door. "Jimmie," she began severely, "you knew that this was wash day, and yet not a stick of wood did you git fer me. And I had to dig the pertaters and git the vegetables and drive the calves off of the medder, and"——

"Shore, Neely, honey, I did plumb fergit it. Ain't it a shame. But actually, honey, it was sich a nice, purty spot down by the creek—and I got to wishin' you was with me. Then I got to thinkin' of the time when we was jist sweethearts and didn't keer a darn fer nothin' but jist to be together. And I jist stayed and dreamed about you, honey, and a gittin' to want to see you—so here I am, jist a honin' fer a sight of you. And here's the lady we been talkin' about."

"Why didn't you teach him a lesson," I said to Neely as I was leaving, "by not having his dinner ready? He wouldn't have forgotten the wood again, and if you had allowed the calves to stay on the meadow he would have mended the fence next time before he went fishing."

She looked down at her bare feet a moment, this pale little woman, who had twice remained behind while her husband was in the capital city of her home State, then, her face clearing, she looked up and said:

"But you saw how sorry he was. And he was thinkin' of me all the time."

"I can't help it, La Belle," I said a little later, when, in bending over, something splashed down on her mane. "We've lost our way in the woods more than once. We've been alone in the hills after dark, without knowing where we should sleep. We've been hungry, with nothing in sight to eat—and this is the very first time I've been weepy. You know it is. And you ought to forgive me this once. I suppose it's because—well, do you remember what the preacher said to us the other day about the 'cussedness of things?' I guess that's the reason for it; just the 'cussedness of things.'"

Forecasting Weather From an Aeroplane

AT the annual meeting in Edinburgh of the Scottish Aeronautical Society a paper on "Weather Observations From an Aeroplane," by Lieut. C. K. M. Douglas, R. F. C., was read. Having been fortunate enough to be for some months this year almost daily amongst the clouds of Northern France, Lieut. Douglas has studied the formation of both stratus and cumulus clouds at close quarters, and submitted some records of the temperature and other conditions under which they developed. A cumulus cloud, which was the visible evidence of a stream of rising air, might give rise to a thunderstorm. Unless, however, the rate of temperature from the ground upwards was very high, thunderstorms would not develop. A knowledge of the temperature gradient was thus very important in the prediction of thundery weather, and Lieut. Douglas put in an appeal for the use of the aeroplane in peace time for this purpose, as, in addition, the field of view at a height moderate for an aeroplane was so extensive that distant thunderstorms could easily be observed. He himself had seen clouds 100 miles off from a height of 8000 feet.

Where Mother and Daughter, in Middies and Bloomers, Vie for Grace

How a mothers' circle reversed the order of things and went in for calisthenics and classic dances, utilizing the gymnasium of a St. Louis High School

THE propaganda of physical exercise for the health's sake has been carried into the homes of South St. Louis by means of a new use for high schools at night, proposed by the Neosho Mothers' Recreation Circle of the Neosho School, and put into effect at the Grover Cleveland High School, Virginia and Osceola avenues, under the supervision of the Division of Parks and Recreation—a use that likely will prove as popular and beneficial to the community as any innovation utilizing the public school as a social center.

In this instance married women and mothers have come forward to demonstrate in a very practical manner that they are deserving of some consideration in the various plans for the promulgation of recreative physical culture and are proving that such concessions in their favor are highly appreciated. And to be convinced of this, one has but to visit the great gymnasium of that school, any Tuesday night, to see more than 200 "ladies over 18" put vim into classic dancing and gym stunts.

About a year ago the movement took form at a meeting of mothers of the Neosho school organization, when a member suggested class gymnasium training for married women and mothers. The idea was seized upon at once as worthy of putting into execution. The organization had no funds for this purpose, but the women went ahead with the plan, confident that a way could be found to establish the class at a regular meeting place.

Henry Abeken of 914 Utah avenue, a playground instructor, volunteered his services as physical director, and the women set to work on their gymnasium suits. In April they were ready for the first class.

The women took to the work with a will from the beginning, and the class grew with every meeting. Then the bars were let down to unmarried women "over 18." and soon mother and daughter found themselves partners in the dances and various exercises

Abeken taught the class for three months without pay, but the Park Board had taken notice of his work, and decided to employ him to direct the class from September through the winter months.

Last Tuesday night a member of the Post-Dispatch staff found more than 200 women in action in the great gymnasium. The women wore bloomers of dark blue or black; black stockings and middies of white, with white collars edged with red, blue and black stripes. There were only a few "stouts" in the whole class, but even these went through the work with admirable snap. Although their appearance in gym costume did not indicate much, it was said that at least 25 per cent of the class were past or near to middle age.

The exercises commenced with marching to time, with proper carriage of the body, and skipping at a lively clip to music. Then followed classical dancing in twos and fours, during which many intricate and pretty designs and movements were introduced. One dance from which the women derived much pleasure was "Housmaids' Drill," two movements of which were "buckets" and "brooms."

The graceful movements of "The Butterfly," danced in perfect rhythm by the whole class in pairs, was worth going far to see, and "The Blue Danube," waltzed in pairs to a variety of steps and movements never seen in the ballroom, was truly inspiring. The women themselves signified their entrance into the spirit of the thing with enthusiastic applause at the conclusion of each dance.

"If anybody has the mistaken impression that married women and mothers can't dig the joy out of life." Abeken remarked between gasps for breath, during the intermission which followed the dances, "let him come down here and look over this bunch."

At that moment they were utilizing the intermission in the mazes of a waltz, played on the piano by one of their number.

"You can't stop them," he added, "and they would go the entire evening without a rest were I to permit it. There are mothers in that class who have the pep of children."

Calisthenics and apparatus work employ the time of the second period. As the time approached to begin the women gathered in little groups and commenced a continuous clapping of hands.

"There's an example," said Abeken. "That's a call for me to start the second period. They get restless after a five-minute rest. That shows how they enjoy the work. They are much more enthusiastic than the younger people."

"Now, grandma, be a good girl," he called to an inattentive elderly woman. "Attend to what I say."

All laughed heartily at this.

In an exercise for the neck, throwing the head forward and backward, Abeken abruptly stopped them. Pointing to one, he said:

"Mother, this is not an exercise for the tongue. Keep it in."

He keeps up a running fire of such quips, which the women seemed to enjoy.

In the calisthenics Abeken had them balancing on one foot, with arms extended and leaning far forward; movements of the legs and arms while in a sitting posture and arising and sitting with crossed legs, without touching hands to the floor. The "married women and mothers" acquitted themselves wonderfully in the performance of these difficult exercises.

Tuesday night someone started a rumor that the new Superintendent of Schools might restrict the use of school gymnasiums to school children, and the women gathered in groups and discussed the likelihood of such a calamity with great alarm. They are fearful lest some action be taken in this direction, but an official of the Park Board does not believe there will be any opposition to the movement. On the contrary, he believes the plan will be extended to other school gymnasiums for the benefit of married women and mothers.

There is an advanced class, taken from the general class of women at the Grover Cleveland School, which is given an hour of physical instruction by Abeken, from 7 to 8 o'clock Tuesday night, the general class having the floor from 8 to 10:30.

A boys' and a men's class, under the same direction, meets there Monday and Thursday of each week, the boys on Monday, from 7 to 8, and the men Monday and Thursday, from 8 to 10:30.

Any woman over 18 years old, living in South St. Louis, may join the class, the only cost being 10 cents a month to pay for the music. The surplus in this fund is to be used for a class outing in summer.

In addition to more than 200 on the floor, at least 100 women looked on from the balcony. Many women brought their children, who looked on during the exercises.

Mrs. J. F. Dueringer of 3652A Liermann avenue, president of the Neosho Mothers' Recreation Circle, is also president of the class, and registers all applicants for membership. She has been a member since its inception, and is advanced in the work.

"The women of the class have derived inestimable benefit from the training," she said, "and we would like to see the movement extended to schools in other parts of the city. Many of our 'stouts' and leans have grown shapely, and all have been wonderfully benefited in general health. We are proud of the class, for it has secured recognition for the married woman and mother, who are too frequently neglected in municipal schemes for recreative physical culture."

NEW METHOD OF SOLING BOOTS.

THE attention of the Leeds (England) consulate has been called to a recently patented method of manufacturing boot soles from scrap leather. It is claimed that the soles are nonsuction, nonslipping and waterproof, and can be produced at a much lower cost than the ordinary leather sole.

The Seventh Man

Blake lifted his fists as if to strike the other.

"A year in Colorado, with the very best of nursing, the very best of everything, the clean air—and with you beside her—why, man alive, she'll be a new woman!"

Blake tried to speak, but somehow his tongue failed him. His face was absolutely colorless. Davis, smiling, put out both hands to his shoulders.

"Why should you hesitate? It is an easy battle. Is there anything more dear to you in the world than your wife? Will your friends help you save her life? Will they send her away? Are you going to sit idly by and watch her fade away, day after day, like some helpless little flower?"

"Davis"—— his dry lips struggled frantically with the words, "I'm going . . . to give you . . . just one minute . . . to leave my house!"

The lawyer reached for his hat and stick. "Very well, Mr. Blake! I realize that my proposition was rather—er—sudden, and so, under the circumstances, I cannot accept this decision as final!'

He fumbled in his pocket, brought out a card and placed it face up on the table. "I shall be in my office until 6 o'clock this evening," he resumed. "Good-afternoon!"

For fully five minutes, brain whirling, Blake stood in the center of the little study, his cold fingers gripped at the table edge. An utter silence fell and deepened about him.

Abruptly, bringing him back to the world again, came the sharp twist of the doorbell, followed by a whistle. Mechanically he answered it. The postman spoke to him pleasantly and handed him a package securely wrapped and sealed. With staring eyes Blake read the single name in the upper corner. Then the understanding crushed upon him like some pitiless, leaden weight. It was his novel. They were sending it back! They did not want it!

Somehow he got back to the room and dropped the unopened manuscript into a lower drawer of his desk Lifting his eyes after a moment he felt them drawn, magnet-like to the white card still lying upon the table. He smiled.

Without an effort, his mind quite clear, he picked it up. He walked firmly back to the hall, took up his hat and went out the door into the street.

Half an hour later he was back. Without pausing he hurried up the stairs and burst into his wife's room. She was deep among the pillows, her face flushed, her lips colorless.

"Marjorie, Marjorie," he cried, falling upon his knees and placing his arms about her slim form. "It's come! It's come! They've taken the novel, dear! You are to go away—to Colorado! You're to be well and strong again, dear—well and strong again!"

IV.

IT was a very grave and judicious Council that sat around the long table that Wednesday afternoon before Christmas. They had been in session since noon.

Blake sat, the last of six on his side of the table. His lips were set in a thin, straight line, his face was colorless, his hands fumbled nervously in his lap. Minute by minute he was steeling himself for the final vote that was to come.

Presently a thought flashed to him. He came erect and jerked out the lower drawer. He took up the wrapped manuscript, broke the seal, opened it. As he did so a letter dropped out.

At 4 o'clock the President cleared his throat and arose slowly to his feet.

"The final question before the Council this afternoon," he began quietly, "is the plea of the Milltown Gas and Electric Co., at present operating in this city, for a 20-year renewal of their franchise. Against them a new company, composed of a number of our citizens, has asked for a franchise. The situation before us, then, is whether the old company's franchise be renewed, or, shall the new company be granted a permit to come into the city, thereby canceling the former plea."

Lengthy discussions followed, all of which Blake listened to dully and lifted no voice.

The voting began amid a pregnant and impressive silence, the men apparently realizing the significance of the question before them. As each name was called by the President the eyes of the rest were riveted upon him. They began from the opposite side of the table. Each man arose to his feet, answered promptly and sank back again.

Nearer and nearer it drew to Blake. Finally it came.

"Mr. Blake, are you in favor of renewing the present company's franchise?" The President repeated the same question for the last time.

He swayed unsteadily to his feet. Instantly, like a picture thrown upon a screen, there came to him the remembrance of the half-lighted study, the lawyer's anxious voice, the decision, the postman's whistle. . . . Last of all came the white, pleading face of the little girl among the pillows. Three more months, the doctor had warned! . . .

"Mr. Blake, we are waiting!" the President's voice echoed strangely in the quiet room. Blake swallowed hard. The eyes of every man around the table were glued upon him. He opened his lips to speak—but paused with a half-framed word.

A quick, familiar voice rang to his ears. "There is something greater than your love for me, Greg!" Those were Marjorie's words that day of his election!

Like the snapping of a thread his brain cleared. He looked steadily about him at the circle of strained, expectant faces.

"I am not in favor of renewing the present company's franchise, Mr. President," he answered.

V.

AN hour later, when he had reached the streets, muffled in his big coat, picking his way through the tangle of holiday shoppers, the newsboys were crying the extras.

At the far corner he bought a paper, still damp from the press. The heavy, black headlines wavered in his vision.

ROBBER GAS COMPANY DEFEATED BY COUNCIL

The New City Council Defeats Renewal of Milltown Gas and Electric Co.'s Franchise! A Body Blow to the Grafters! And of Corporation Rule!! Gregory Blake the Man Who Swung the Decision! Milltown's Greatest Christmas Present!

Blake crumpled the sheet within his fingers and whirled it into the gutter. Praise, praise, praise! And of what avail now? He had done his duty, snapped the corporation chains which had so long galled the city. He had done all of this—and because of it Marjorie was to . . .

He let himself into the study. It was quite dark. He turned on the lights and sank wearily before his desk, pillowing his head upon his arms. Presently a thought flashed to him. He came erect and jerked out the lower drawer. He took up the wrapped manuscript, broke the seals, opened it. As he did so a letter dropped out. With wide, unbelieving eyes he read:

"Mr Gregory Blake:

"We are much impressed with your novel and are returning it for certain changes. If you care to follow the instructions given below we shall be glad to offer you $5000 for all serial and book rights.

"As to suggestions, we quote as follows"——

Blake read no farther. With choking throat and radiant eyes he burst from the room and dashed up the stairs to where Marjorie was awaiting him.

The Monk Who Changed the World's History

Albert called Luther a "presumptuous monk," but the theses had an enormous popularity. They were printed in Latin and German and circulated far and wide. A copy was sent to the Pope, who regarded the work as "that of a drunken German who would see the error of his ways when sober." The Vatican ordered the head of the Augustinian order "to quiet this man, for new-kindled flames are easily quenched."

Luther was ordered to recant, but refused. He was then told to appear in Rome within 60 days. Later the Pope changed his mind and Luther was ordered to appear before Cardinal Cajetan, the Pope's legatee at Augsberg. The Elector of Saxony refused to allow him to go without a safe conduct from the Emperor and this was secured. Luther had three conferences with Cajetan, without result, and then returned secretly to Wittenberg.

For a time action against Luther was allowed to lag. In 1519 he had his famous debate with John Eck at Leipsic. No decision was rendered, though Eck caused Luther to practically admit that he was in accord with Huss, the Bohemian heretic, who had been burned at the stake. About this time Luther believed an attempt would be made to assassinate him. He wrote to a friend:

"A man came to me with whom I shook hands and whom I took home with me. He said: 'Dear doctor, it surprises me that you so readily shake hands with a stranger; are you not afraid of being shot? I am alone with you.' I replied, 'If you killed me you would die, too.' 'In that case,' said he, 'the Pope would make you a heretic and me a saint.' I called a servant and the man departed."

In 1521 the Pope issued a bull excommunicating Luther, which the reformer caused to be burned in public. The common people were all behind Luther at this time. "Nine-tenths of the Germans," wrote a legate of the Vatican, "shout 'Long live Luther!' the other tenth, 'Death to Rome.'" Luther was summoned by the Emperor to recant at the Diet of Worms. The reformer appeared there under a safe conduct, but refused to change his views. The hearing ended with a condemnation of Luther's doctrines. On his way from the Diet Luther was kidnaped by friends and taken to the Castle of Wartburg nearby, where he remained a voluntary prisoner for a year, reading and writing and working on a German translation of the Bible.

In the meantime a radical wing of the Lutherans had broken out in revolt in Wittenberg, wrecking churches and monasteries and rioting. The revolution spread into the peasants' revolt of 1525. Luther was opposed to the revolution and sided with the Princes. He made many enemies by this course. The revolution eventually was crushed with great cruelty.

LUTHER (at table of tavern with stein of beer before him): Good evening, friends, draw nearer and have a drink to warm you up. I see you are Swiss. From what part of the country come you?

KESSLER: We come from St. Gall, sir, and we are going to Wittenberg. Can you tell us, sir, if Luther is at Wittenberg?

LUTHER: I have authentic information that he is not at Wittenberg but that he will soon return.

KESSLER: Thank God that Luther will come back soon. For it is on his account that we are going there. We have heard that he wishes to overturn the priesthood and the mass and as our parents have brought us up to be priests we want to hear what he can tell us and on what authority he acts.

LUTHER: Where have you studied formerly?

KESSLER: At Basel.

LUTHER: How goes it at Basel? Is Erasmus there and what is he doing?

KESSLER: Erasmus is there, sir, but what he is doing no man knows. (Aside to his companion Spengler, as Luther takes a drink.) I never saw a knight before who used so much Latin.

KESSLER. You're just gulling me because you think I want to see Luther.

LUTHER: May I ask, friend, what you are reading?

MERCHANT: Doctor Luther's sermons; just out. Have you not seen them?

LUTHER: I shall soon, at any rate. Come sit down, gentlemen, it's my treat. What think you of Luther?

MERCHANT: I am a plain, blunt man and as far as I can see Luther is either an angel from Heaven or a devil from hell.

HOST (to Swiss): You owe me nothing—Luther has paid it all.

MERCHANTS AND SWISS: Luther!

LUTHER (raising glass): I drink to your health, gentlemen, but wait a moment, host, bring us a measure of wine. The beer is not so good for me as I am accustomed to wine. Good night (to Swiss). When you get to Wittenberg, remember me to Jerome Schurff.

KESSLER: Whom shall we remember?

LUTHER: Say only that he who will soon come sends greetings (Exit).

On June 13, 1525, Luther was married to Catherine von Boro, whom he had assisted, with several other women to escape from a nunnery where she had been for several years. To a friend Luther wrote before his wedding:

"God has suddenly caught me in the bond of holy matrimony. I intend to celebrate with a wedding breakfast on Thursday. That my parents and all good friends may be merry, kindly send me at my cost a barrel of the best Torgau beer."

The Luthers had six children, three of whom died in youth. Descendants of one of his daughters are still living in Saxony.

Luther continued his attacks on the religion he had deserted, preaching and writing and building churches. He attended several conferences in an effort to adjust the differences between the Lutherans and Rome, but all were unavailing. There was no repairing of the break. The following of the Lutheran Princes had become so great that they were in a position to treat with the Vatican on equal terms.

Henry VIII, egged on by Cardinal Wolseley, who had designs on the highest place in the Catholic Church, in the summer of 1521, had written a violent attack on Luther. It contained such expressions as "What pest so pernicious as Luther has ever attacked the flock of Christ? What wolf of hell is he? What a limb of Satan! How rotten is his mind! How execrable his purpose!" Luther replied in like to "that king of lies, King Heinz, by God's ungrace, King of England."

In 1529 Henry wanted a divorce from Catherine of Arragon. The Pope refused to grant it and the King threatened to turn to the Lutherans. He approached Luther on the subject and the reformer replied that it would be better for the monarch to commit bigamy than to try to obtain a divorce. In 1533 Henry made another attempt to get the sanction of Luther to a divorce. However, the refusal of the reformer did not anger Henry very much, for intercourse between the Lutherans and the English went on apace for the next few years.

During the last 15 years of Luther's life he was surrounded by scores of disciples, many of whom lived at his home and formed his so-called table companions. The conversation dealt with every subject that had come within the range of his experience—philosophy, religion, humor, politics, natural science, books. The monastry of the Augustinians had been turned over to Luther for his residence. Frau Luther, a frugal soul, took in boarders, raised her own garden truck and was so saving that Luther was enabled to buy some adjoining land in his late years.

Luther had been ailing throughout his adult life with stomach trouble and on several occasions felt that he was near death. Notwithstanding his growing illness in his later years, Luther did not curtail his enormous activities. He continued publishing books and pamphlets in large numbers, many of them attacking reforms in his own church. Luther grew more bitter toward so-called schism in his own denomination than toward the Vatican.

In December, 1545, Luther traveled to Mansfield to act as arbiter in a petty boundary line dispute between the two Counts of Mansfield. On Feb. 16, 1546, after the dispute had been adjusted, he was stricken by apoplexy at the village inn.

As Luther was losing consciousness, two of his disciples leaned over him and said:

"Reverend Father, will you stand steadfast by Christ and the doctrine you have preached?"

The dying man answered, "Yes," the last word he spoke distinctly, though those around him thought they made out one more murmur: "Who hath My word shall never see death."

The body was taken back to Wittenberg and buried on Feb. 22, in the church where he had long ago nailed those theses on indulgences—those words that shook the world.

Four Hundred Years Ago a Cowled Monk Nailed a Note on a Church Door and Changed the World's History

Quadricentennial of Martin Luther's 95 theses on indulgences being observed by thousands of congregations in two hemispheres—Reformer's challenge to debate gave birth to protestantism, swept Europe through a welter of blood and remade the map of the continent several times before the great triumph of human conscience

NOV. 1,1517, was a gala day in Wittenberg, Germany.

On that All Saints Festival the Elector Frederick of Saxony had caused to be displayed in the Castle Church his collection of 5005 sacred relics, which he had secured in pilgrimages to the Holy Land. These objects were graced with enormous papal indulgences reckoned, according to the scale adopted, an equivalent to 1443 years of purgatory.

From all parts of Saxony the burghers flocked to Wittenberg partly out of curosity and partly to secure the spiritual benefits to be obtained by contact with the sacred relics.

Through the crowds assembled before the Castle Church pushed a monk of the Augustinian order, a cadaverous cowled figure, with burning eyes. Turning neither to the right nor left, he halted before the heavy oaken door of the church and nailed a placard to it.

The monk was Martin Luther, the founder of the Lutheran religion and indirectly of Protestantism. This was 400 years ago and today the posting of that notice on the Castle Church is being celebrated throughout the world in tens of thousands of churches.

The placard posted on that All Saints' day, which was merely an announcement of the intention of the monk to hold a debate on the value of indulgences for the remission of sin, caused not only the religious reformation of Europe, but its temporal effects were no less sweeping. The Continent was entangled in bloody wars, dynasties were dethroned and the map of Europe changed several times before the furore started by Martin Luther had spent itself.

Luther was born Nov. 10, 1483, at Eisleben, in Saxony. His early years were spent in squalid poverty. Later his father moved to Mansfield, a village nearby, where his financial condition improved. The boy Martin was sent to the village school. Speaking of these days Luther wrote:

"My teachers made us parse everything and made obscene jokes. The examination was like a trial for murder."

At 13 Luther was sent to a religious brotherhood at Magdeburg, where he supported himself by begging. No more stigma attached to it than is attached to the acceptance of scholarships nowadays. At Magdeburg Luther was overcome by a severe fever and was only cured by drinking water which the doctor had expressly forbidden. In a letter years later Luther told of an incident that was largely responsible for his becoming a monk:

"When in my fourteenth year I went to school at Magdeburg, I saw with my own eyes a Prince of the House of Anhalt * * * who went in a friar's cowl on the highway to beg bread and carried a pack like a donkey. He had so fasted, watched and mortified the flesh that he looked like a death's head, mere skin and bones; indeed, he soon afterwards died. In short, whoever looked at him needs gasp for pity and be ashamed of his own worldly position."

Events in the Life of Martin Luther

1505—Enters Augustinian monastery.
1507—Ordained priest.
1510—Journey to Rome.
1517—Posts theses on indulgences on door of Castle Church at Wittenberg.
1519—Debate with John Eck at Leipzig.
1525—Married to Catherine von Bora.
1532—Completion of translation of Bible into German.
1546—Feb. 18—Dies at Mansfeld.

In 1505 Luther was studying jurisprudence at the University of Erfurt. On July 2 he was overtaken on the highway by a severe thunderstorm and in a fright vowed to St. Anna to be a monk. It might seem strange that a young man of 22 should be frightened by a clap of thunder, but it should be remembered that Luther was superstitious as his age and believed that phenomena were caused by the devil in anger.

On July 16 he invited some friends, including "honorable matrons and maids," to a farewell supper. The evening was spent in good cheer; the next day he entered the monastery of the Augustinians. In February, 1507, he was ordained priest. For the next three years he taught jurisprudence and Bible history at Erfurt and Wittenberg.

In October, 1510, with another monk, he set out for Rome on an errand for the monastery and also for the purpose of making a general confession. Of the trip he relates the following incident:

"On the journey to Rome the brother with whom I was traveling and I were very tired one night and slept with open windows until about 6 o'clock. When we awoke our heads were full of vapors, so we could go only four or five miles that day, tormented by thirst and yet sickened by the wine and desiring only the water which is so deadly there. At length we were refreshed by two pomegranates, with which excellent fruit God saved our lives."

On his return home Luther continued teaching and preaching at Wittenberg. In 1514 Albert of Brandenberg, a forbear of the present Kaiser of Germany, was made Archbishop of Mayence and Primate of all Germany, at the age of 24. As he was not yet of canonical age to possess even one bishopric, the Pope refused to make the appointment final except on the payment of a large sum. The Curia at first demanded 12,000 ducats for the 12 apostles. Albert offered seven for the seven deadly sins. The average between the apostles and the seven deadly sins was struck at 10,000 ducats, about $50,000, a sum equivalent to about $1,000,000 in purchasing power in those days.

In order to allow the new prelate to recoup himself, the Pope declared an indulgence for the benefit of St. Peter's Church to run eight years. Albert caused the following proclamation to be issued:

"The first grace is a plenary remission of all sins, than which one might say no grace could be greater, because a sinner deprived of grace through it receives perfect remission of sin and the grace of God anew. By which grace * * * the pains of purgatory are completely wiped out. The second grace for sale is a confessional letter allowing the purchaser to choose his own confessor; the third is a participation in the merits of the saints. The fourth grace is for the souls in purgatory. a plenary remission of all sins. * * * Nor it is necessary for those who contribute to the fund for this purpose to be contrite or to confess."

Albert's chief agent for the collection of the indulgence fund was a Dominican monk named Tetzel. He sold indulgences on all sides. For a gulden a peasant might free himself or a dead relative from the pangs of purgatory.

In 1517 Tetzel was operating on the borders of Saxony, which he had been forbidden to enter, and Luther's famous 95 theses on the evil of indulgences followed. The same day as the posting of the notice
